Tomany grasped the knife hand of the negro, and the two powerful men closed with each other. Back and forth across the room they struggled, the negro trying to wrest his knife hand free and the policeman striving for a chance to use his club. At last the officer's chance came. Breaking free, he stepped back and brought his heavy club down hard upon the thick skull of the negro. Beverly reeled, but, in the language of two witnesses to the fray, "came up smiling again," and made another lunge at the policeman with the knife. The blade ripped the policeman's uniform, but he was not cut. Then Tomany jumped in at his man again, and once more brought his club down on the negro's head, laying it open. Beverly staggered under the blow and almost fell, but again he recovered himself and returned to the attack. Another sweep of the knife slashed the officer's coat from shoulder to belt, but he was not scratched. Tomany landed another blow, but his club was splintered on the negro's skull, and he closed with him again, throwing him to the floor.

The negro was springing to his feet when Policeman Johnson, who had been attracted to the scene, rushed in. Tomany took Johnson's club and directed the latter to summon an ambulance, as he feared that Mahoney and the woman were dying. Johnson, however, wanted to stay and aid Tomany in subduing the negro.

"Never mind me," yelled Tomany; "I'll have him in a minute. Get the ambulance."

Johnson ran out to send in the call, and Tomany attacked Beverly again with the other policeman's club. At the second blow this club, too, was splintered on the negro's hard skull, but Beverly, cut and bleeding, was laid out senseless on the floor.

Ambulance Surgeon Eastmond of the Brooklyn Hospital, who responded to Johnson's call, dressed the wounds of Tomany and Beverly, and then removed Mahoney and the woman to the hospital. It was said there last night that Mahoney would probably die, but that the woman's wounds were not so serious. Tomany's uniform was slashed into ribbons.

Beverly was locked up, and was yesterday arraigned in the Adams Street Police Court. His head was bandaged, and he showed other effects of the terrible clubbing he had received. He pleaded not guilty to the charge of assault. He claimed that he had been robbed of a dollar and attacked and had acted in self-defense. He was held for examination on Wednesday.

MORE THIEVING IN CUBA.

John Sheridan, Head of the Money Order Department at Havana, Confesses that He Stole $1,300.

HAVANA, Jan. 20.—John Sheridan, who has been in charge of the Money Order Department of the Havana Post Office, was arrested to-day and formally accused of the theft of $1,300, $1,235 cash and a sixty-five-dollar check, sent from the Postmaster at Guantanamo Dec. 6. He confessed his guilt and admits having destroyed the check.

Sheridan was appointed from the Boston Post Office on the organization of the service in Cuba. He was made Postmaster at Matanzas. About a year ago he was placed at the head of the Money Order Department in Havana, with a salary of $1,700. He seemed a trustworthy man, and the authorities considered the expediency of appointing him Postmaster at the time ex-Postmaster Thompson was removed.

An investment of $800 in stocks in Boston first attracted suspicion to Sheridan. He now offers to refund what he has taken.

DRIVER CHARGED WITH CRUELTY.

Mrs. Evelyn W. Murray Causes His Arrest for the Offense.

Mrs. Evelyn W. Murray, who is staying with relatives at 300 West Seventieth Street, and who is a second Vice President of the New Jersey Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and resides at Somerville, N. J., yesterday caused the arrest of John Nagle, twenty-six years old, of 58 West Sixty-seventh Street, whom she charged with maltreating a horse on Friday last.

Mrs. Murray says that she perceived a man lashing a horse, one of a team attached to a loaded coal wagon. The day was a wet one, and the footing for horses was very hard. She opened the window and called to the man to stop, but he paid no heed. Then she sent the butler out to call a policeman, but none could be found, and the driver got away.

Mrs. Murray had observed the wagon and remembered the name of "Miller & Co.," which was painted on the side. She went Friday afternoon to the firm's place of business, at Riverside Drive and Seventy-ninth Street, and, after telling her mission, asked to see the drivera. None of the men shown to her was the man whom she says maltreated the horse. She was told that two of the drivers were still out delivering coal.

Mrs. Murray repaired to the West Side Police Court and secured a warrant from Magistrate Hogan for the arrest of John Doe. Policeman Wagner of the Court squad could not find any person answering Mrs. Murray's description of the driver until yesterday morning, when he arrested Nagle, who was at home.

When the prisoner was arraigned in the West Side Police Court yesterday morning, Mrs. Murray was not present, and Magistrate Hogan paroled him for examination to-day. Mrs. Murray came in later, and was much disappointed at the postponement. She said that she missed a steamer on which she was going to Europe last Summer through causing the arrest of a cruel driver.

WILL TESTIFY FOR KERR

Death and Campbell to be Called as Witnesses.

Campbell Breaking Down in the County Jail—Bosschieter Case the Theme of Sermons in Paterson.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 20.—At least two of the three men convicted of the murder of Jennie Bosschieter will be called upon to testify at the trial of George J. Kerr, the remaining prisoner, which, it is generally believed, will begin a week from to-morrow. These witnesses will be Death and Campbell. It is understood that they will swear that Kerr was not present and had no knowledge of what took place in Saal's saloon, and not only did not participate in the assault upon the unconscious girl, but protested against it and was shocked and excited by it.

In his testimony, Sculthorpe, the hackman, said last week that Kerr was greatly excited when the four men carried the girl back to the hack. Sculthorpe also partly accounts for Kerr's time when the other three men and the girl were in Saal's back room. Neither Saal nor any one else testified that Kerr had any share in the occurrences here.

Campbell is slowly breaking down in the county jail, his face showing unmistakable signs of collapse. It is said by those close to him that he would have broken down long ago but for the nerve of McAlister, who has kept both Campbell and Death encouraged by telling them that they would escape with a very light sentence. Death is not in much better shape. McAlister, however, has gained in weight since his arrest.

The talk now of the prisoners is about the sentence they expect to receive, and it seems that Campbell and Death think the Judge will deal with them much more leniently than he will with "Mac," as they call McAlister.

The trial to-day was viewed with much curiosity by the crowds of church-goers as that way, stopping in front of the building to point out the particular part where the four prisoners are confined.

In some of the churches reference to the case of the prisoners was made, the Rev. H. R. McClelland, at the Lake View Presbyterian Church, taking for his text, "The Trial of the Trio." He drew a lesson to the young, and then a Christian life, and keep from that class of society that leads away to those three prisoners as a warning to those who did not follow in the narrow path.

At St. John's Roman Catholic Church, the Rev. Father O'Reilly, curate, made no reference to the case, but his pointed remarks against the influence of club life made a large congregation understand what he meant. He said those alone were safe who lived in the sanctity of the home, surrounded only by good influence. He urged young men to keep away from the saloon, and upon mothers and fathers to make their home attractive, so that their offspring would not be driven into the streets, the clubs, and other public places for the society and pleasure they need in life.

The Rev. Dr. Hamilton preached at the Young Men's Christian Association on Elliston Street, and dwelt at some length upon the downfall of the young men, which he attributed principally to the lack of moral restraint. As an example of what this might lead to he alluded to the case of the Bosschieter prisoners, who, he said, had not intended to kill their victim.

Hanged Himself to a Pier.

Frank Blacher, a Hungarian, who had been seen about the water front at the foot of East Eleventh Street for the past few days and who was apparently without any employment, was found at the end of the pier at the foot of the street yesterday morning, hanging from the stringpiece by a rope which was fastened in a slipknot around his neck. It is thought by the police that he committed suicide by fastening the rope around his neck and then jumping off the pier. No motive for his act is known, and, as far as can be ascertained, he had no friends in the city.

MUSLIN UNDERWEAR

Reinforced, Reorganized, Completed

PRACTICALLY a new occasion starts this morning. New lots have arrived; belated shipments have been received, and the store is filled again, and overflows down through the Main aisle, covering the counters there with dainty snow-white garments that every tasteful woman will admire, all marked at such low prices that you would have to do smart shopping to buy materials alone for as little as the neat and substantial garments cost when all ready to wear.

Almost every original line is here to-day, but lots are smaller and only prompt folks can be supplied in many cases. Yet it is a splendid gathering to choose from—larger and more varied than any other regular stock, and with all garments made in the careful, generous, neat and comfortable way that you would direct for home-done sewing. No "bargain garments" here; but the best possible garments at most remarkable prices.

These are some of the reasons for buying now:

1. Variety is greater than at any other time during the year.
2. Garments are fresh from the factories—crisp, clean, dainty and refined.
3. You have more time to select now than later on when spring dressmaking takes your time.
4. Buying underwear in January divides expenses so that March and April do not have such a burden to bear.
5. Buying here and now gives you better variety of best garments made, and saves a QUARTER to a THIRD of the price that must be paid when this sale is over.

This sale will end—for some goods, to-day—for very many lines, this week. And a new standard of prices will be fixed as soon as present lots are sold. More direct information is given with the prices.

The FUR SALE

The furs came hand in hand with Jack Frost and his snow-storm, on Saturday. First real need-time found the best of Furs at Half Price at Wanamaker's. Not all half-price; but many really scarce sorts at a quarter to a third under-price. The response came as quickly as the doors were open, and continued all day; but the purchase brought $33,000 worth of furs, as well as bringing down prices on our stock, which the newcomers compelled. Here is

The finest lot of furs ever offered at a bargain—
And the lowest prices ever heard of in a sale of furs of this character.

Items below tell of goods in quantities sufficient to be likely to be here when you call. The best news can't be told in the papers, for fear of disappointing those who do not get here promptly.

Women's Jackets Under-price

No need to be less than well-dressed in the matter of over-garments, with prices so low as ours to-day, on coats of worthy character and faultless style. Winter just rightly began on Saturday. To-day such price concessions as these—

Coats worth up to $20 at $10
Coats worth up to $26 at $13.50

Others at $15 and $25, that had been $27.50 to $43.

Second floor, Broadway.

EMBROIDERIES At Less than HALF

14,500 yards of cambric and nainsook edgings and insertions.

Chiefest part of this offering is an importer's stock of sample pieces, the first half yard or so of which is soiled—though the hurt is trifling to the user. Complete variety of widths and patterns from the inexpensive to some very fine patterns.

The lot is divided into three groups, and priced this way:

25c to 30c kinds at 12½c
35c to 45c kinds at 15c
50c to 90c kinds at 25c

This is a splendid opportunity for all who have spring sewing in mind.

Broadway.

$1 HOMESPUNS At 55c a Yard

These are handsome all-wool Melton Homespuns, fifty inches wide; in an ideal early spring weight; in light, medium and dark grays, and tan.

The manufacturer had two thousand yards on his hands after filling all his orders, and we took the lot at the low price he quoted. It brings one of the most popular fabrics of the season at just about half its worth. Bright and new—55c a yard.

Rotunda.

Embroidered WAIST PATTERNS

These dainty waist patterns are made of Henrietta, elaborately embroidered and braided in effective designs. Many of the patterns show chenille in the design; all have embroidery for the collar and cuffs, as well as front of waist. Designs are in white and black, white on colors, and chinchilla and black on colors. These new pricings:

$5 Patterns at $3.50 — $7 Patterns at $5
$6 Patterns at $4 — $8 Patterns at $6

Rotunda.

Men's ULSTERS

The ordinary overcoat had its limitations on Saturday. The comfortable man had his ulster ready. Those who didn't perhaps didn't know they were ready at Wanamaker's. They at least didn't know how good as well as how little-priced they were. For instance, these two:

Made of all-wool Oxford mixed frieze, lined throughout with wool plaid—warm and serviceable. Prices, $12 and $15.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

NAPKINS

Over 1200 dozen pure linen napkins, in nearly a dozen grades, all greatly reduced in price. Savings of 40c to $1.85 a dozen. Here's the list:

Women's SUITS

This showing of early spring costumes commands interested attention. New beauty is arriving almost daily. It's an unmatched collection that must be maintained unmatchable. Many very handsome costumes of silk—taffetas, chameleon, louisine and foulards.

The much-admired suits made with Postilion back,—they're $45 to $75.

The foremost feature of the coming season's fashion is the new Princess Skirt—$58 to $115.

And here's an elegant suit with Empire Eton jacket—the skirt with Empire back. Novel and exceedingly graceful. $60.

New ideas in dress and walking skirts are plentiful.

Second floor, Broadway.

Under-price Store

Looks like a wholly new establishment to-day—this collection of desirable merchandise that's offered under price. Of course, the silverware is still there. A stock of such magnitude as that with which we started will endure a steady and prolonged attack by appreciative purchasers. Assortments still good. Bargains, too, just as good as ever.

There are many other notably good offerings. And these are first offered this morning:

Drapery Fabrics—Remnants and Squares—

A lot of sash muslins, in 1 to 5-yard lengths, that were 18c to 30c a yard, are now 9c to 20c. Some Irish point lace remnants, in about same lengths, that were 40c to $1.50 a yard, are now 20c to 75c.

The hospital is taxed to its utmost capacity. There are 250 patients in the institution, and most of those who have lately been admitted are sufferers from grip. The work in the hospital is carried on by the Sisters of St. Dominic.

GRADY WOULD RETALIATE

Will Ask Legislature to Abolish McCullagh's Office.

Says Hard Fight Will Be Made If Police Bill Passes, but Does Not Expect to Win.

Special to The New York Times:

ALBANY, Jan. 20.—Senator Thomas F. Grady, the Democratic leader in the Senate, who arrived in Albany to-night, announced his intention of introducing a bill which will abolish the office of the Superintendent of Elections. He says the bill will be introduced at an early date. In the event of the passage of the New York Police bill and the Raines bill for a bipartisan Board of Elections, a hard fight will be made to legislate Superintendent McCullagh and his constabulary out of office.

"We do not entertain much hope that the bill will be passed," said Senator Grady, "but we will make our fight for it just the same. If the Police bill and the Raines bi-partisan Board of Elections bill pass, the ground laid out in Gov. Black's message for the creation of the office of Superintendent of Elections has been taken from under the feet of the Republicans. Their claim has been that Devery was made Chief in order that the police force might be used by Tammany in exercising improper control over elections in New York.

"Now, if the Republicans legislate Devery out of office, provide for the removal of his successor by the Governor at his pleasure, and in addition have a bi-partisan Board of Elections under the Raines bill, what reason will there be why the New York police should not perform the same duty in connection with elections which is performed by the police of other cities? None.

"If the Republican organization is sincere in its desire for economy, here will be a good chance for it to save a lot of money to the State. But it won't do it. It will not give up the partisan advantage it now has through the operation of Superintendent McCullagh's bureau. As it stands now McCullagh's power of appointment is practically unlimited. The places which he controls have been given to Republican workers. His authority has been shamefully abused.

"Why, before the last election, when the Democrats reported to McCullagh the wholesale colonization that was going on in Van Cott's district, what did their protests avail? They resulted in the production of certificates of character for those who had been illegally registered in the interest of the Republican candidate. The Democrats had abundant evidence that men were brought into Van Cott's district in large numbers from Pennsylvania and Vermont, but that evidence was ignored by McCullagh.

"But apart from the use which is made of McCullagh's office for partisan ends, the law ought to be repealed for other reasons. Under this law a man whose only crime is that he happens to live in a hotel at registration time must certify to the room clerk for the purpose of identification any defect that he may have, if he is minus an ear, that must be noted. In short, he is subjected to the same rules of identification as obtain in penal institutions. This is an outrage.

"I am unable to say offhand the amount which McCullagh's constabulary is costing the State, but it is large. Last year I think we had to provide for a deficiency of about $50,000. Whatever the cost the Republicans will have no good reason for not saving it to the State if they pass their Police bill and the Raines Bi-partisan Election Board bill."

TO RUSH THE POLICE BILL.

Plan to Send It to Mayor Van Wyck by Jan. 25—His Veto Expected.

ALBANY, Jan. 20.—There is every reason to believe that the Senate Cities Committee will report favorably the New York Police bill this coming week, for the Republican leaders have concluded to have the bill on Mayor Van Wyck's desk on Jan. 25.

If this plan is carried out the Legislature will have plenty of time to pass the bill over the Mayor's veto, and the veto is expected, for there is no prospect that the trial provision asked for by the Tammany Senators will be inserted.

CHIEF DEVERY HEADS A RAID.

Startles Craps and Klondike Players in an Eighth Avenue Resort.

Chief of Police William S. Devery in person headed a squad of detectives and policemen early yesterday morning in a raid which was made on an alleged gambling house at 482 Eighth Avenue, known as "The Independent Star Dramatic and Social Association." The raid was made on evidence obtained by Agents Thompson and Leitenberg of the Society for the Prevention of Vice.

Chief Devery was assisted by Detective Sergts. Grady, Devery, and Benning of his own staff; Capt. Cooney, Detectives Michaels, and Coughlin, Roundsman Kerr, and six policemen of the West Thirty-seventh Street Station. The policemen entered the side door of the building at 269 West Thirty-fourth Street and slipped past the guard on duty at the door of a large room used by the association. About seventy men were in the place, most of them engaged in playing craps and "Klondike." Consternation seized the gamesters at sight of the police, and a few made frantic efforts to escape, but all were cornered.

Agents Thompson and Leitenberg were already in the place by previous arrangement. A pile of $150 in banknotes was on a table in front of John Atkins of 16 West Sixty-fifth Street, the reputed proprietor. The policemen made a grab for this sum, but Atkins had the advantage of position and secured the roll. This was afterward turned over to Capt. Cooney to be used at evidence against the place.

Chief Devery, satisfied with his success in getting into the place so easily, allowed the majority of the persons found there to go, and only arrested four. These were Atkins, the supposed proprietor; Louis Weiss of 228 East Twenty-sixth Street, James E. Collins of 241 West Thirty-seventh Street, and Frank Smith of 415 West Seventeenth Street. They were locked up on the charge of violating the Gambling act. Full craps and "Klondike" layouts were found in the place and taken to the station house.

Magistrate Hogan in the West Side Police Court held each of the prisoners in $500 bail for further examination on Wednesday.

EMPLOYMENT AGENCY EVILS.

State Official Calls Attention to Existing Abuses and Asks for Legislation.

ALBANY, Jan. 20.—The proprietors of many private employment agencies are charged with evil practices in the conduct of the business by the Superintendent of the New York State Free Employment Bureau, in New York City, in his annual report to the Legislature. He says:

"In our report for the year 1899 attention was called to the loose manner in which business was conducted by the proprietors of employment agencies in various parts of the State. Since then, despite the agitation of the New York press, no change for the better has taken place. But, on the contrary, evil influences have been augmented, and the wrongs emanating from the same have been very much intensified.

"One of the employment agencies in this city has a very unique method of promoting business. An advertisement will be inserted in a Sunday edition of one or more newspapers, stating that there is a vacancy open for a housekeeper or a position of equal grade. The advertisement is so worded as to appear to emanate from a private employer. In answer to this advertisement numerous letters are sent to Box So-and-So, up town or down town, as the case may be, and on the following Monday and Tuesday mornings a 'lady,' the representative of the employment agency, collects the letters sent in answer to the advertisement.

"When those letters are brought to the agency a notification is sent out to each person who answered the advertisement telling her to call at a certain number and street. Even this request is so disguised as to lose all evidence of the business nature of the institutions sending out the communications. As each person arrives at the office she is registered, for which a dollar is charged. She is told that her reference will be investigated, and if satisfactory she will obtain the position.

"I am informed that the net income from any one Sunday's advertising under this scheme amounts to between $125 and $150. Of course, there was never a vacancy of the kind advertised, which was to be filled by the proprietor.

"The law governing the intelligence agencies in the City of New York distinctly states that the money paid for the procuring of employment or registration must be returned unless satisfactory work is found within thirty days. I regret to say that I fear this section of the law is almost null and void so far as its protection to the people doing business with many employment agencies is concerned."

The Superintendent calls attention to the Ford-Kelsey bill of the legislative session of 1900, which sought to place the agencies under State control and which failed to pass the Senate. He urges that it or a similar measure be passed. The bill will probably be reintroduced at the current session of the Legislature.

LUNACY COMMISSION'S BILLS.

Proposed Law Makes the State Controller Auditor of Accounts.

ALBANY, Jan. 20.—It is probable that the Legislature will discuss this week the proposition to take away from the Lunacy Commission the power it possesses at present to audit the bills of its extensive bureau.

The State Controller has recommended that such auditing power be delegated solely to his department, where, it is contended, it rightfully belongs, and from which it never should have been separated. A measure to accomplish this object has been prepared with an eye to cause as little friction as possible between the two State departments concerned.

ACTRESS'S DOGS FOUGHT FIRE.

Worried At and Rolled On Bandages Blazing on Her Arms, She Says, and Yelped for Help.

Miss Lelia Romer, who up to last Monday had been appearing as a chorus girl in "The Girl from Up There" at the Herald Square Theatre, is in St. Luke's Hospital suffering from severe burns on the hands and arms. She forgets all about the pain of her burns, however, when any one asks her how she received them, for she immediately launches out on a glowing description of the merits of her two pet dogs, Trixy and Foxy, and their efforts to save her from being burned.

Last Monday Miss Romer was attacked with inflammatory rheumatism in her arms and hands and was forced to discontinue temporarily her engagement at the Herald Square Theatre. Her doctor bound her arms and hands up in cotton, which had been saturated with oil of wintergreen, and Miss Romer spent most of her time in her room at 255 West Thirty-seventh Street playing with her two dogs and teaching them new tricks.

Trixy is a Scotch terrier with long, silky hair, and Foxy is a spaniel. They have both been educated by their mistress up to a point where there is not much left for them to learn in the way of tricks. Ordinary tricks, such as catching lumps of sugar in their mouths or standing on their hind legs are mere child's play to them, and according to Miss Romer they have a great deal more intelligence and common sense than the average man.

Last Friday night, Miss Romer was in her room alone with her dogs when she attempted to close the door of her stove. Her hands were partially covered with the bandages, and she had some difficulty in catching hold of the door. A loose end of one of the bandages touched a live coal in the stove and immediately burst into flame.

The fire ran along the bandages on both arms, and Miss Romer, after trying for a moment to loosen the wrappings, became hysterical and threw herself on the floor. The two little dogs did their best to put the fire out. They beat the burning bandages with their paws, she says, worried at them, and rolled upon them, yelping all the while as loud as they were able. The uproar soon brought Mrs. Farley, the landlady of the house, to the room.

She found Miss Romer on the floor, the bandages on both arms blazing fiercely, while the two dogs circled about her making little dashes at the burning cloths. Both dogs had their hair singed and their paws burned, but that had not discouraged them in the least. According to Mrs. Farley, if it had been possible for any dogs to put out the burning bandages they would have done it.

Mrs. Farley seized a rug which was lying near by, and throwing it over Miss Romer smothered the flames. A doctor was summoned, who, after dressing the burns on the chorus girl's arms, summoned an ambulance, which took her to St. Luke's Hospital. She is there at present, but she says that she would not mind the confinement in the least if her dogs were allowed to stay there with her.

THOUSANDS SEE A RESCUE

Life-Saving Crew Save the Lives of Four Men.

Schooner Had Struck on the Bar Off Atlantic City—Cheers for the Brave Surfmen.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Jan. 20.—Over 2,000 persons saw the Atlantic City Life-Saving Crew rescue Capt. Bermain Sharp of Dorchester, N. J., and his crew of three men, Marc Sharp, a brother; Jacob Willis of Atlantic City, and Joseph P. Harris of Augusta, Ga., from the two-masted schooner A. P. Coleman, which struck on the bar off the inlet about 4 o'clock this afternoon.

A heavy gale prevailed and the sea was very rough. The life savers rowed against wind and tide under difficulties, and were exhausted when they reached the wreck. After taking the crew from the schooner the latter went to pieces and disappeared from sight before the lifeboat reached the shore.

The beach at the point where the boat landed was lined with a vast throng of people, who cheered the surfmen and congratulated them on their heroism. They had risked their lives in going out, and for a time it appeared as if they would fail in their efforts.

Capt. Sharp said that the schooner left New Berne, N. C., Jan. 5, and met with foul weather during the entire voyage. She was lumber laden for Philadelphia. Upon arriving at the Delaware Breakwater the owner of the cargo ordered the vessel to come to Atlantic City.

The schooner took yesterday's gale off Cape May and nearly foundered. She anchored off Hersford Inlet during the hurricane, which blew at the rate of sixty miles an hour, and she there sprung a leak.

The schooner was brought up at Atlantic City, but when she arrived she was waterlogged and nearly unmanageable. It was necessary to decide to remain at sea with a chance of becoming a helpless wreck, or making the attempt of getting into Atlantic City Inlet. The latter plan was adopted, and ended in the wrecking of the schooner.

The Coleman was 76.4 feet in length and 5.5 feet in depth. Her gross tonnage was 66.

HE WANTED $6,500,000.

Man Walked Into the Tenderloin Station House and Told About It.

At 8 o'clock last night a cab containing a man and a woman drove up in front of the West Thirtieth Street Police Station, where the man alighted. He was tall and distinguished looking and dressed in evening clothes, with a loose overcoat thrown over them, and a silk hat. Going into the station house, he called the Sergeant aside and said that he wanted to talk to him for a few moments.

"I have a little complaint to make," he said; "it's a mere trifle and I'm almost afraid to trouble you with it. It's only a little matter of $6,500,000, and I really don't know whether you would bother about a little thing like that."

"How much money was that you said?" gasped the Sergeant.

"Oh, only $6,500,000," said the man in the dress suit, glibly; "it's a peculiar case, or I wouldn't bother you about it. My name is Jules Newton, and I live at the Oakdale Apartment House, at 36 West Thirty-fifth Street. I have been swindled out of that money by two brokerage firms on Wall Street and Broad Street. I gave them the money many years ago to invest in various stocks and bonds, but I never got anything for it.

"Just after that they had me committed to Bloomingdale, but I only remained there for six weeks. I am bringing a suit to recover this money, but I just dropped in to tell you as I thought that you might like to know about it. Good evening."

Mr. Newton stopped talking abruptly and had driven off in his cab before the Sergeant had recovered from his astonishment. A detective who was sent to the Oakdale apartment house learned that he had been staying there since October.

One of the brokers mentioned by him, when seen at his residence last night, said that Newton had formerly been employed by him as a clerk.

"That notion of his about the money is perfectly ridiculous," he said. "He's perfectly harmless, however."

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

MARK TWAIN SAYS WOMEN SHOULD VOTE

Men Belong to Two "Petrified Parties," the Humorist Declares.

NEW YORK CITY A DISGRACE

Mr. Clemens Makes an Address Before the Members of the Hebrew Technical School for Girls.

Expressing himself as strongly in favor of woman's rights, in the past, the present, and the future, Mark Twain, at the annual meeting of the members of the Hebrew Technical School for Girls, last night said that he believed that if women had the right of suffrage such corruption as is said to exist in this city would be swept away. He predicted that the time would come when women in this city would be allowed to vote, and he contended that it would mean much for the purity of the city when such was the case.

The meeting at which Mr. Clemens made these predictions, in a speech of characteristic humor and wit, was held in the vestry room of the Temple Emanu-El, Fifth Avenue and Forty-fourth Street. Every seat was taken, long before the exercises began, with members of the society and its well wishers. Mr. Clemens entered with Nathaniel Meyers, the President, and as he took his seat on the platform there was a greeting of applause.

Mr. Meyers presented a report in which the progress of the school, which is situated at 267 Henry Street, was outlined in detail. "It is the only society in the city," he said, "which affords a trade deucation to Jewish girls. It was incorporated in 1884, but the school had existed for three years previous to the time it was incorporated. The board elected a year ago reports progress that is very satisfying. As an illustration of the development of the institution, we now have twenty one typewriting machines, where we formerly only had four. In the new school building we have eight class rooms, a fine assembly room, library, and a roof garden. The walls are hung with pretty pictures, the library is furnished on a plan of comfort, provided with many volumes. Modern ventilating and sanitary features have been introduced throughout the school. Twelve excellent teachers are in charge of the class rooms:"

"We are not content with seeming to do work," continued Mr. Myers, "we are determined to do it. We do not insist upon good deportment as a fundamental principle—what we do is to strive to interest the pupils in their work. That being accomplished the deportment will take care of itself. The Assistant Superintendent of Public Schools visited our school not long ago and congratulated us, saying that we were doing a work that would benefit the city. The ambition of our girls is illustrated by the fact that they have formed a club and now issue a paper, the As You Like It. We have avoided everything that would tend to pauperize our children.

STATISTICS OF THE SCHOOL.

Mr. Myers then gave some statistics of the school, which now has 110 pupils in the commercial department and 40 pupils in the manual department. Both classes are provided with physical culture training in the afternoons. Biblical history and ethics are also taught. He read several interesting letters of graduates from the school, all of whom have secured employment at satisfying wages.

"We are free to say," added Mr. Myers, "that we are prepared to start another school as soon as some benevolent person will provide a site.

"There is no such work done elsewhere for Jewish girls, and I believe there is nothing like it for poor Christian girls, except the Grace Institute, established by ex-Mayor Grace, which reflects greatly to his credit. To help the less fortunate to help themselves is the underlying principle of our work. Certainly a trade education lessens the necessity for other forms of charity." After saying that boys who had not been taught a trade were obviously in less danger than girls, and that notwithstanding that fact, boys were thought of usually, whereas the girls were forgotten, Mr. Myers continued:

"There is not the slightest mention in St. Matthew of the parentage of Mary. The origin of Joseph, on the other hand, is told in forty-two generations. Why this difference? Is it because the history was written by man. It's the story of the lion and the painter over again. The painter showed the man overcoming the lion. 'But,' said the lion, 'you know it was a man who painted it. If a lion had been the painter it might have been different.'

"Now, I want to call attention to the fact that our institution has never been mentioned in anybody's will. The Hebrew Sheltering Orphan Asylum Society annually gives $2,500 to the Technical School for Boys. They have never given us anything. I say this not in a spirit of complaint, but it's worth pondering over."

An election of Trustees followed, and then Mr. Myer introduced Mr. Clemens, saying that he was one who had no prejudices against any kind of man, and adding:

"In one of his works he says that he has no prejudice, whether a man be white or black, Jew or Gentile, debtor or creditor, old or young. The moment he says he is a man he can't say anything worse. But Mr. Clemens has not told us what he thinks of women. So we have asked him to come here and perhaps he will tell us that. He said that he could not resist a request to help our cause."

MARK TWAIN'S ADDRESS.

Mr. Clemens said that such help as he was able to give he gave willingly, but it was the kind of help that came from the heart through the mouth.

"Mr. Myers has conducted this matter with distinguished ability," he continued, "but at the end of his report I noticed a defect. He made such a strong appeal to those people who are going to make their wills. Some of you are here, you know. Such an appeal loosens your pursestrings and you want to give. Well, when he was talking I thought 'Now he's going to do it.' When a man makes an appeal like that he ought not to make it for day after to-morrow. We are all creatures of impulse. It's a great mistake to get everybody ready to give money and then not pass the hat." After the laughter had subsided the speaker went on to tell a little story.

"Some years ago in Hartford," he said, "we all went to the church on a hot, sweltering night, to hear the annual report of Mr. Hawley, a city missionary, who went around finding the people who needed help and didn't want to ask for it. He told of the life in the cellars where poverty resided, he gave instances of the heroism and devotion of the poor. The poor are always good to each other. When a man with millions gives we make a great deal of noise. It's noise in the wrong place. For it's the widow's mite that counts.

"Well, Hawley worked me up to a great state. I couldn't wait for him to get through. I had $400 in my pocket. I wanted to give that and borrow more to give. You could see greenbacks in every eye. But he didn't pass the plate, and it grew hotter and we grew steepler. My enthusiasm went down, down, down—$100 at a time, till finally when the plate came round I stole 10 cents out of it. [Prolonged laughter.] So you see a neglect like this may lead to crime."

Mr. Clemens then said that he thought the President's description of the institution as "almost a model school" would be improved by the omission of the word "almost." He added that in the statement of the neglect of the Virgin Mary he recognized the truth, though he had not read it recently.

"Man has made woman what she is," he went on. "He has kept her down in her proper place. Your President sits here in that self-satisfied conceit of his, and assumes that I don't know anything about women. Why, I have been in favor of women's rights for years. I see in this school a hope for the realization of a project I have always dreamed of. Why, do you know, when I looked at my gray-haired old mother, with her fine head and noble thoughts, I really almost suspected, toward the last, that she was quite as capable of voting as I was. He's got the wrong notion if he thinks I don't know anything about women.

WOMEN MAY VOTE.

"I know that since the women started out on their crusade they have scored in every project they undertook against unjust laws. I would like to see them help make the laws and those who are to enforce them. I would like to see the whiplash in women's hands. The suffrage in the hands of the men degenerates into a couple of petrified parties. The man votes for his party and gets the city in the condition this one is in now—a disgrace to civilization. If I live seventy-five years more—well, I won't—fifty years, then, or twenty-five, I think I'll see women use the ballot. It is the possession of the ballot that counts. If women had it you could tell how they would use it.

Bring before them such a state of affairs as existed in New York City to-day and they would rise in their strength at the next election, elect a Mayor, and sweep away corruption.

"True, they might sit ten years and never use it, but on such occasions they would cast it. Or in the case of an unjust war. Why, war might even pass away and arbitration take its place. It never will so long as men have the votes."

Mr. Clemens said that the contention that only vicious women would vote was absurd. "How many of our 100,000 women are vicious?" he asked. "Not enough to amount to anything. If women could vote, each party would feel compelled to put up the best candidate it could or take the risk of being voted down by the women. States are built on morals—not intellects. And men would never get any morals at all if the women didn't put it into them when they were boys. If women could vote the good women would all vote one way. Men won't do that. It's a choice of evils with them."

Mr. Clemens then said that he had noticed that the President had said that previous to a year ago the institution had a lady Board of Managers, but now it had men.

"And now," he added, amid laughter, "he says they have twenty-one typewriters, whereas before they had only four. Oh, I like that modesty. We men are all like that. Well, at any rate, I hope a lot of us will die and leave something in our wills."

The following were the Trustees elected last night: Miss Anna Davis, Miss Belle Dittenhoefer, Sidney Sternbach, Miss Clara M. Weichsler, Miss Annie Calman, Ferdinand L. Loeb, Mrs. W. M. Mayer, Mrs. M. Heinemann, Mrs. J. N. Bloom, Mrs. F. L. Loeb, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Miss Olivia Leventritt, Maurice Brill, Henry C. Bernheim, A. J. Kridel, and Nathaniel Myers.

BRITISH SHIP FOUNDERS.

The Moel Tryvan Lost in English Channel—Part of Crew Saved.

CHERBOURG, Jan. 20.—The British four-masted ship Moel Tryvan has foundered in the Channel. Seven out of her crew of eighteen were saved. They were picked up while clinging to the keel of one of the ship's boats and were landed here.

The British four-masted iron ship Moel Tryvan, Capt. E. Jones, of 1,566 tons net register, arrived at Antwerp Dec. 9 from Iquique. She was owned by Roberts, Owen & Co. of Carnarvon, and was built at Sunderland in 1884. She was 258 feet long, had 38 feet beam, and was about 23 feet deep. The Moel Tryvan was last surveyed in New York in July, 1898.

THE REFORMING CADETS.

A solution of the troubles at the Military Academy has been reached by the action of the cadets now in attendance. Their voluntary agreement among themselves to abolish all forms of hazing out of respect, as they avow, for the public opinion so strongly expressed in the last few months is creditable to them, and was rightly recognized by the Chairman of the Congressional committee. It is to be said also, to their honor, that the worst forms of offense of this sort had been previously done away with by the upper-class boys. It is highly improbable that the precedent thus established will be departed from in the future. It certainly will not be if it is sustained in good faith and with firmness by the officers in command at the academy.

That this result should have been obtained by the free action of the cadets, instead of by the exercise of the disciplinary power of the officers, or in consequence of imperative legislation by Congress, is in some regards a decided advantage. It is due to a genuine change in the mental attitude of the young men and a new perception of the standard of conduct imposed on them by their profession and by the benefits they accept from the Nation. The feeling that they are a privileged class, entitled to a code of honor different from that of the common herd and less exacting in some of the simplest attributes of a gentleman, has been much weakened if not dissipated by the general and stern condemnation of some of their doings by their fellow-countrymen. It was a very discreditable and dangerous feeling, and it is fortunate that its manifestation was checked by so prompt and universal reproof as it received.

On the other hand, it is not to be denied that the frequent and serious violations of the regulations at the academy, which those in authority have neither repressed nor adequately punished, do not form a pleasant feature of the record of West Point. There is a disquieting suggestion in the voluntary abolition by the cadets of practices forbidden by the rules of the academy. The discipline at the Military Academy is severe in most regards, and ought to be in all. It rests on the fundamental principle that, in order to command, an officer must learn to obey. There is something that would be ludicrous, if it were not so grave, in the fact that there has long been a systematic and organized plan among the cadets of the upper classes to teach their juniors implicit obedience to them by the practice of gross disobedience on their own part. It is conceivable that the lesson learned by the young gentlemen at the academy will not be without its significance and value to the general body of the officers of the regular army, and that they will disclose in the future a closer sympathy with—possibly a greater respect for—the opinion of the country, which has regarded the recent chapter in the history of the academy with regret deepened by affection for and pride in the institution and the noble body of its graduates.

AN ELASTIC CURRENCY.

The bill recently introduced in the House by Representative LOVERING of Massachusetts, a member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, to provide greater elasticity for the currency, can hardly receive much attention at this late date, but it will at least serve to direct public opinion and the opinion of the House toward a real need in our currency system. Mr. LOVERING's plan of allowing extra issues of the banknotes in time of great demand, on the payment of additional taxation during the time that they are outstanding, with a provision for a common redemption fund, would undoubtedly have a good effect. Its chief defect is that it does not provide for contraction as easy and natural as the expansion.

This, it is to be said, however, is a defect that cannot be got rid of so long as the present basis of security is retained, and the volume of the note issues is left to depend more on the market price of United States bonds than on the actual requirements of business. This is so plainly the case that when the Currency bill of last March was passed, it was found necessary to include a costly refunding scheme, with special inducements to the banks, in order to secure the increase of the currency that was unquestionably needed. In other words, the arbitrary nature of the security required for the notes makes unprofitable the safe supply of credit in the form of notes which in normal conditions would afford a profit. No one has a clearer notion of this state of things and its effect than the present Secretary of the Treasury. He has repeatedly urged it upon the attention of Congress and of the country. But until the business men and especially the bankers agree as to a remedy, little is likely to be done. Probably while all is going well in our affairs not much attention can be secured for this matter, but as soon as a reverse of the present prosperity approaches, as it certainly will in time, the difficulties and faults of our system will make themselves felt.

PNEUMATIC POSTAL SERVICE.

The protest and appeal of the Merchants' Association of this city in the matter of the pneumatic tube service for the transmission of mails within the city deserves the careful attention of every Representative not only of this State but of the entire country.

The situation, according to the association, sustained by the Post Office Department and a commission of unusually competent experts, is very simple. The pneumatic tubes are now in use in New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, and Boston. They are used for the transmission of mail matter from the chief offices to the branches and to the railways. They save a great deal of time and labor; they give much more sure, speedy, and regular delivery, especially in the case of letters intended for special fast mail trains and steamers; they guard against delays by blockades of the streets through the accidents which every city resident knows are frequent; they make it possible to handle mail matter continuously as it comes to hand and not to let it accumulate and block the work of the offices; they are, in short, precisely the same kind of improvement that the postal cars are. It is absurd that they should be abandoned except under necessity.

As the Merchants' Association points out, it is the plain duty of the Government to make the service of the mails as complete, rapid, and sure as possible. It is a Government monopoly. There is absolutely no escape from its use. There can be no competition with it, not merely because of the unlimited resources the Government can devote to crushing competition, but also because all competition is illegal and will be punished. Business, great or small, is utterly impossible without it. Under the constantly growing volume and stress of business, domestic or foreign, the saving of time and of uncertainty in the Postal Service is essential; it is the saving of friction, and all friction is costly as speed increases. In these circumstances the Government really holds a most important business trust in its hands. The department particularly charged with the trust is heartily in favor of the retention and extension of the pneumatic tube service, and is so after the most deliberate and careful investigation. We cannot understand how the House can think it its duty to disregard the judgment of the Post Office Department, and we hope that when the facts are laid before it it will not insist on so doing. Certainly no Representative or Senator from this State should consent to so grave and injurious a blunder.

ENGLAND'S BAD ADVISERS.

We learn from last Thursday's telegrams that England has received through The London Times a "bitter invocation to Great Britain not to give anti-English Americans an opportunity for exultation over her surrender" respecting the Senate's amendments to the Nicaragua Canal convention. It would seem that England is advised, not to say incited, to punish the majority of Americans by way of disciplining the minority. Nothing is more certain than that sentiment regarding England was the least motive upon which the Senate's procedure was based, and that hostility to England was more marked among the minority than among the majority. Outside of the Senate this is true in even more marked degree. Thus, by taking the advice offered, England would rather affront her friends than punish her enemies. The result—expressed as a supposition, not as a threat—would or might be the abrogation of the Clayton convention, through conversion of the Senate's minority into a majority, and the substitution for the present canal scheme of another with tolls discriminating against British commerce. Thus English commerce would be penalized by way of punishing American Anglophobes. Assuredly they hoped for no such quick ample revenge when they found themselves in a beggarly minority in the Senate's vote.

We refrain from making a counter appeal to England to accept the amendments to gratify her friends in this country. In our opinion both appeals are equally improper as tending to mingle foreign and domestic politics. We should be very sorry to see any question whatever supported or opposed upon friendship or hostility to England, or any other foreign country. That way lies the end of good feeling, however hearty. Whether the Senate's action was right or wrong—and THE TIMES has made its criticism of it—it was based upon the Senate's idea of American interests and the merits of the question. In that spirit, it is to be hoped, England will deal with the matter. Nothing could be more unfortunate than the conversion of a business proposition into one involving racial sentiment on either side the ocean, or both, for it could not be confined to either side alone. We have no fancy for a campaign upon such an issue, and we may suppose neither has Lord SALISBURY. And, by the way, why should England's action, whatever it is, be either a "surrender" or a victory? England has not yet taken any position upon the subject. It was impossible to take a position before she was notified of the Senate's action, and having taken no position there can be no surrender. As a matter of common sense we should think a "surrender" with a guarantee of equality to British commerce was a more acceptable proposition than a "victory" with inequality, which would drive English ships out of the trade.

In the last number of The National Review, published in London, we find over the signature A. MAURICE Low a similar appeal to English passions rather than to English reason or English interests. Mr. Low has found somewhere—he does not name his authorities—quite a number of ill-bred expressions regarding England. He calls them "ordure," and argues that England's action should be determined by them. We will not dissent from his characterization of them, but only from his estimate of their importance and their proper place in this negotiation. Whether such expressions and their opposites be weighed or counted, the balance in or out of the Senate is in England's favor. But whether it be so or otherwise, the introduction of "ordure" into the council chamber is a mistake which we assume England's advisers will not make. What attitude would it be possible for the United States to take toward an answer based upon such considerations? Whether the Senate's reasons for its action were adequate or inadequate, they were candid and meritorious. Such it is to be assumed will be England's reply, whatever it is, and as such it can be received with calmness and respect. No well wisher of either country can regard with equanimity the reception of a reply based upon such considerations as these advisers press upon a distant public without means of learning how they are misled, and this is the opinion of those who have not failed to criticise the action of the Senate, although for different reasons than those here condemned.

VIBRATION FROM TUNNEL TRAINS.

It is gratifying to note that the contractor for the New York underground rapid transit road is experimenting with a view to minimizing the nuisance of vibration and noise attending the running of trains in the tunnel. For this purpose he is now constructing a section of 1,200 feet of track to be tested experimentally. The roadbed consists of a trough-shaped layer of concrete in a ditch of the same shape 10 feet wide and 2½ feet deep. The concrete is 18 inches in thickness at the centre and 26 inches deep at the sides. The eighty-pound steel rails will be spiked to a continuous line of wooden planks laid on the outer sides of the trough in position to properly distribute the rail bearing. The plank will be secured in place by longitudinal angle irons imbedded in the concrete on either side. It is believed this will give a firm and silent roadbed. If not, other plans should be tried. The problem is one which should be studied to a satisfactory conclusion. The advantage of the remotely separated portions of New York, which will be chiefly served by the new rapid transit tunnel system, would be dearly purchased at the cost of seriously and permanently depreciating the value of the property along or immediately adjacent to the route selected.

In London the injury to property and the infringement of the rights of property owners resulting from the noise and vibration caused by the running of trains of the underground electrical railways, and especially those of the London Central Railway, have given rise to a great deal of litigation which promises to incumber the court calendars for years to come. These are conditions which should not be blundered into in New York. To some extent they are probably inseparable from the operation of a tunnel under a relatively narrow street closely built up on both sides; but the interest of the city demands that they be reduced to a minimum. To depreciate the rental value of property in one neighborhood is to increase the burdens of taxation upon property in other neighborhoods, with disadvantage to all interests affected. That the contractor is making experiments looking to a roadbed which will give the least possible noise and vibration warrants the hope that the damage to property owners along the line will be only what is unavoidable. Meanwhile it is not too soon to give thought to the problems of car and engine building with the same end in view. An engine which transmits to a rigid foot plate the pound of its drivers over rail joints and cars which are as resonant as fiddle bodies will clatter and roar no matter what sort of roadbed they are run over.

THE AUSTRIAN ELECTIONS.

So far as they have come to hand, the results of the Reichsrath elections recently held in Austria and Bohemia show that the status of the retiring Parliament has not been altered in a way that can promise a settlement of the question which has distracted the dual monarchy, and which, combined with nearer antagonisms of race and language, had rendered legislation impossible.

While it is inconceivable that the new Parliament will be more pliable than was the last in regard to granting the economic concessions which Hungary earnestly demands, and which her advancement seems to justify, yet the fact that several important fanatics of the most bitter and unrelenting factions have gone down is not without significance. The hand of fate, as represented by Social Democracy, has been most heavily felt upon the Militant Clericals. At Botzen, the stronghold of the Catholic Party, Baron DI PAULI, an ex-Minister, who in the campaign preceding the elections made use of an extraordinary letter of recommendation from the Pope, was badly defeated. Another vociferous exponent of Clericalism in Lower Austria, Dr. GESSMANN, has also gone down. In the Vienna district the constituencies supposed to be in the hand of the Jew-baiting Burgomaster, Dr. LUEGER, have shown their contempt of the fusion between the Anti-Semitics and the Clericals by returning men who are not notorious as controversialists in any particular. On the other hand, the Social Democrats, who lost six out of their seven seats in Bohemia, may console themselves with the fact that the men who take their places have no intention of allying themselves with the extreme wing of Nationalism, whether German or Czech.

Hence, as the extremists of all parties seem to have suffered, it is not a too extravagant hope that matters of Austrian and of international interest will be rationally discussed when the Reichsrath assembles. The budget will offer no serious obstacle, nor will the presentation of the annual army bill, for even more than did the last Parliament the new body will recognize the importance of keeping up appearances before foreign gaze. But at the first sign that the Premier, Dr. VON KOERBER, means to press for a settlement of the Austro-Hungarian dispute, chaos will again prevail which can be annulled but not tranquillized by the imperial prerogative. What will then happen?

Dr. VON KOERBER has recently announced that, should legislative administration by the Emperor again be found necessary, a scheme would be introduced for an extension of the franchise. In the end, however, the result would be the same. What Austria would thus gain in regard to the Hungarian question she would lose to the Germans and to the Slavs, who on their own issues would render legislation still further unsatisfactory, if not impossible. In the meantime Hungary views the situation with the utmost tranquillity, if one may judge by the words of M. SZELL, the Hungarian Premier. While acknowledging that the political union with Austria is necessary to the welfare of his country, he is unrelenting in demanding fiscal independence. What would be his attitude were the aged and beloved Emperor to pass away it is hard to say. But it is certainly true that the general esteem in which FRANCIS JOSEPH is held by nearly all of the contending factions has gone far to keep in the background the stealthy increase of the party for German federation.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—According to the head of the Bureau of Records of the Brooklyn Health Board, the excess of deaths over births shown year after year in the reports of the Brooklyn statisticians is due simply to the fact that while every death of necessity finds a place in the tables, a considerable number of births are never recorded. This may relieve Brooklyn from the suspicion of abnormal insalubrity, but it reveals that something rather serious is the matter either with the law or those whose duty it is to enforce it. There is little less reason for insisting on an accurate and complete recording of births than for a similar recording of deaths, and laxness in the one direction opens the way to abuses almost as serious and dangerous as would result from laxness in the other. If many Brooklyn physicians are neglecting to report births in accordance with the provisions of an entirely wise law, their attention certainly should be called to the duty they are leaving unperformed, and the very best way to waken their interest in the matter would be by inflicting upon a few of them the penalty which the law provides. But is it not possible that there is another and less alarming explanation for this excess of deaths over births in Brooklyn? That city—or borough, to be exact—is a quiet place, especially attractive to those whose years are many and who seek relief from metropolitan noises and excitements. People who have "retired" are numerous there, and such people—well, they tend to increase the list of departures, not that of arrivals. Of course, for other reasons, folks with a contrary tendency also flock to peaceful Brooklyn, but the first years of human life are especially perilous, and when both the very young and those of more than average age are attracted to a certain place, that place is not likely to find its vital statistics pleasant reading.

—For a condemnation of "Christian Science" that is calm and courteous as well as severe we can recommend one to be found in the latest number of Zion's Herald. The writer, after saying that if the logic of the "Scientists" is effective against disease, it ought to be equally effective against hunger and cold, since these, too, are not realities in the same sense that fevers are not, proceeds as follows: "An incomplete disjunction is the source of these good people's confusion, so far as it has an intellectual root. They make the antithesis of the real to be the unreal in the sense of the fictitious and illusory. Hence, when disease and pain are declared to be non-substantial, the conclusion is drawn that they are distempered fancies which would vanish before proper mental illumination. But there is another possibility. They are not substances, and in this sense are unreal. But they are forms of human experience with very definite conditions and laws, and in this sense they are only too real." Experience, he continues, has its laws and conditions, and experience is what it is, no matter what we call it. The conclusion is: "We recommend our Christian Science brethren to try their logic on a blizzard, preferably by absent treatment; and, in default of success, to consider whether a logic that fails with blizzards may not be faulty with respect to disease." That is one way to treat the matter, and perhaps it is a good one. We have our doubts, however. The strength and safety of "Christian Science" lie chiefly in the habit of kindly people to treat it as a delusion instead of a money-making fraud, which it at least also is.

—Pleasant as it is for the American manufacturers to read the constantly arriving confessions that their invasion of the European markets is so successful as to cause the utmost anxiety and alarm among their foreign rivals, the American consumers—a vastly larger class—have no particular reason for rejoicing in these triumphs of their fellow-countrymen. The spectacle may, indeed, interest them as a spectacle, but they are getting little if any direct profit from it. The peculiarities of the situation are well explained—though not for the first time, of course—by a correspondent of one of the London papers. Our manufacturers, he says, by the prompt and intelligent utilization of improved machinery and improved methods of working their men, have vastly increased their output, and the part of this in excess of the demands of the home market they can export at very low prices. But, we read, "the American consumer does not get the benefit of the labor and time saving machinery used in their manufactories, but the foreign consumer does. The American manufacturer maintains the price of a commodity to American citizens after he has reduced it to foreigners, because he has not to face the competition in the home market which he meets with in nearly every other market of the world. The heavy import taxes account for that." The foreign observer admits, however, that the success of our competition abroad is not altogether due to our tariff, and he scolds the British manufacturers for their stupidity in not realizing, as ours do, that their employés have brains as well as muscles, and ought to be encouraged to use the former as well as the latter. "In the States," he says, "the inventive faculties of the workers are encouraged more than they are here. There are scores of inventions in America patented in the names of the workers who were the originators of them. If in this country a workman makes a discovery in the course of his employment, and while at work evolves a mechanical device for reducing his labor, and at the same time increasing the product of it, his employer frequently insists on the invention being patented in his own name. The American says: 'If one of my fellows strikes an idea, I give him the credit for it and a substantial share in the benefits derived from it.'" —In the estimation of The Medical Record, influenza, or, as it is now called, the grip, is, all things considered, "the most insidious and dangerous disease which attacks civilized races." No specific for the malady is known, according to this authority, and its onslaughts are not to be effectually guarded against. The disease takes so many forms that it cannot be treated on any general principles, but each case has to be made a special study. Herein lies the extreme peril of attempts at self-medication, and there is reason for believing that many patients suffer more from the effects of drugs unwisely chosen by themselves or other amateurs in the healing art than they do from the influenza. The best preventive measures are to strengthen and brace up the system by living an active, healthy life, and especially by avoiding the badly ventilated and overheated rooms which are characteristic of American homes and public and semi-public buildings. On the first suspicion of an attack, the sufferer should consult a physician, and be guided by reason and clinical experience. These teach rest in bed, the avoidance of drastic agents, and, above all, the curbing of the desire to leave the sickroom until after the seeds of the disease are entirely eliminated from the system. As in the case of all contagious maladies, thorough ventilation is a prime desideratum. "While influenza," adds The Medical Record, "is a self-limited disease, and mild and uncomplicated cases may safely be left to the resources of nature, it is unfortunately true that the disease has to a greater extent than any other the faculty of attacking some weak spot in a person's armor; hence complications are numerous, and in virtue of the complications and sequelae, often prove disastrous. The most common complications and sequelae, it is superfluous to remark, are respiratory affections, of which pneumonia is the most often fatal." The writer insists that overheated rooms supply the conditions in which the grip germ does its best—or worst. There it not only is thoroughly at home, but it also finds victims most susceptible to attack.

TARIFF POLICY RUINOUS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In view of the prospect of the much-talked-of bill reducing the revenue tax being passed by Congress, permit me to say a few words in favor of the far more rational course advocated by your valuable paper.

There seems to be a great deal of misunderstanding regarding the real meaning of the condition of our export trade, as is plainly shown by the hazy ideas of most people respecting the balance of trade, which for the past three years has been so strongly in our favor. While the subject is too complex to go into in detail here, yet we may see, by briefly examining the situation, that we are slowly but surely ruining our foreign trade by our short-sighted tariff policy. England, France, and Germany are absorbing our products at an unprecedented rate, and the causes of this are the low cost, prompt delivery, and high quality of our goods. The first two of these causes have given them such prestige abroad that we are driving all foreign competitors out of their home markets, the results of which can be readily foreseen unless we take measures to forestall them.

Already English iron manufacturers are crying out against us, the Albara bridge episode being an example of the many like occurrences which must follow; while France and Germany are continually advocating tariffs discriminating against us.

If we drive foreign manufacturers to the wall, then foreign labor must suffer. With the decline in foreign production foreign demand must diminish, even for our products; and with the general business depression which will follow we are sure to receive a vast number of immigrants. It may be several years before these conditions are realized, but unless we take means to prevent them they are inevitable.

We are the only great commercial Nation exporting more than we import. The imports of the United Kingdom, France and Germany were in 1899 worth in round numbers $900,000,000, $160,000,000, and $280,000,000 more than their exports. Nevertheless, until the recent growth of our foreign trade their imports and exports grew simultaneously. During the last few years, however, we have been robbing England of her markets and have brought her export trade almost to a standstill.

Is it not obvious, therefore, that with the growth of our export trade we must have a corresponding growth of our import trade? The world cannot pay us cash indefinitely, but there are many things in which it can pay us if we will but let it. An increase in our imports from any country means that that country can buy more freely from us and all other countries, who in turn can buy of us; and to bring this about we must reduce our tariff. A gradual reduction of it now that the revenue may be spared cannot possibly harm us, and will save us from much regret in future years.

How much better to maintain the present rate of production which keeps the so-called "war tax" from being a burden than to continue our present tariff policy until the inevitable reaction begins!

Mr. Cleveland's Hearers Criticised.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

When Grover Cleveland penned, in the seclusion of his Princeton library, that thoughtful but rather sober-keyed speech which he delivered before the Holland Society last evening he should have taken counsel of the eminent descendant of the Dutch race who is the author of "Fisherman's Luck" as to its possible effect on his audience. For it appears that the reasoning capabilities of some of those eminent New Yorkers of Dutch extraction were as capricious as those of the wary trout. While they greedily jumped at the bait of his denunciation of England's gamblers' war in South Africa, they turned tail and fled when he dangled in front of them the same bait in the guise of a reprobation of our own unenviable position in the Philippine Archipelago.

From the day when James, Duke of York, armed with a royal grant from his brother Charles and backed by a fleet compelled Hard-Koppig Piet to vacate the Province of New Amsterdam, the while stamping his wooden leg and defiantly tearing into bits his English successor's summons to surrender, the Dutch have been the mortal enemies of the English. And although, through the Act of Settlement that called the deposed King's daughter Mary to the throne from which the anti-Catholic sentiment of the English Nation had driven the same James, William of Orange injected a strain of Dutch blood into the present reigning family of England, still the old race rancor survives. When the eminent guest undertook to parallel his reference to the Transvaal affair by pointing to a glaring contemporaneous similitude in which he, as well as they, were, by the logic of events, implicated, they treated him to the discourtesy of cries of dissent and a shuffling of feet that was designed to drown his words. How is it that they could complaisantly swallow the pill of desire, coated with the bitterness of self-satisfied hatred, and gagged at the same pill because it lacked the sweet coating of amour propre? Surely, the guest was entitled to some latitude in his remarks; and as he was talking of things public, and not of things personal, he did not transcend the limits of politeness that marks the line of transgression among gentlemen. If they wanted sweetness without light, why didn't they invite some facetious popinjay to smear them with "taffy"?

The Philippine Question.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial of to-day, "What Are We to Do with the Philippines?" is timely and should attract attention at Washington. There has been too much mystery about the action of the Administration, from beginning to end, in matters relating to the Philippines. The Taft commission, from which much light and wisdom was expected, has been as mysterious in its movements as the military commissions. Its statement that within sixty days after the defeat of Bryan the Filipino insurrection (so-called) would fall to pieces has not been fulfilled. On the contrary, Gen. MacArthur is calling for more troops, and, as you say, the situation is extremely unsatisfactory.

Even the Administration organs are calling for information. The President and his Cabinet and Congress must remember that while, as a whole, the American people are sensible, patriotic, and patient, they want to know, and have a right to know, what is the real state of affairs in the Philippines at this time. French and American Families.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have often read in your valuable paper editorials regarding the decreasing population of France. It is admittedly a most serious thing for said country. But it is also clear that the French people themselves are to be blamed. It cannot be adduced as an excuse that they individually are so poor that they cannot get married and support a family, because the French citizen is known to be in comparatively easy circumstances. The fact is, plainly speaking, that the citizens of France are too selfish to be willing to face the responsibility of bringing up a family. They are willing to sacrifice everything for a life of ease and pleasure. Consequently they will not be troubled with children.

But we do not need to go out of this country to find the same state of affairs. It is notorious that the real Americans (Yankees) have much smaller families than the Europeans, (excepting the French.) Compare the families of the natives of this country with the families of European emigrants, and you will find that in nine cases out of ten the new-comers have the more numerous ones.

One of our most prominent professors said some time ago on a certain occasion that this country was a thing graveyard of Europe and that if the emigration should through some cause stop, the situation here would be similar to that in France. The cause is, so far as I can see, the same—we do not love children enough. We will not for their sake give up the ease and comfort of life. But who will say that this idea is the right one? Fresh Air Advocates Attacked.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is there no way of suppressing the fresh-air fiend? She is doing deadly work this grippy Winter. I wish I might write "he," for then there would be more hope of relief, but this enemy to comfort is nearly always a "she," a fact which caused me to "blush for my gender," à la Fanny Squeers. In my opinion, when one of these pitiless pachyderms causes the death (from grip or pneumonia) of some delicate woman by opening a window upon her, the offender is quite as deserving of the electric chair as if she had killed her victim by bullet or poison. THE COLD SPARE BED.

Clara A. Trask in The New England Farmer.

When you have a friend to visit you, if she be a welcome guest,
You will try to make her happy, and you'll give her of your best;
You'll tell her all the story of your varied household cares,
And everlastingly you'll prate about your own affairs;
But whatever else you do, don't for Heaven's sake, be led
To put that helpless woman in the cold spare bed!

You may tell her of your troubles with your numerous hired girls,
And what "she said," and what "I said," till her understanding whirls;
You may talk of the servant question till the setting moon's last gleam,
And begin again next morning on the same old tiresome theme;
But whatever else you do, don't for Heaven's sake, be led
To put that helpless woman in the cold spare bed!

You may tell her of your pains and aches, and what the doctor said,
That time you came near dying with neuralgia in your head;
Of how you poured down bitters, and drops and patent pills,
When you caught the dread malaria, and had such awful chills;
You may bore her, you may weary her, till she wishes she were dead;
But, for Heaven's sake, don't put her in the cold spare bed!

SERVICES FOR CHILDREN.

Missionary Meetings Held in Thirteen Episcopal Churches.

Special missionary services for children were held in thirteen Episcopal churches in and about this city yesterday afternoon.

The services were under the auspices of the Junior Department of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Board of Missions. Up to recently Mrs. Henry Mottet, wife of the rector of the Church of the Holy Communion, has been the President of this organization. She resigned on account of illhealth, however, and her place has been filled by Miss Angelica Church of 130 East Twenty-third Street.

The order of services was arranged by the officers of the New York Junior Department of the auxiliary, and submitted to Bishop Potter for his approval before copies of it were distributed in the churches. It included the singing of appropriate hymns, the recital of a missionary catechism, and addresses. The meetings at all the churches were well attended by children in spite of the cold weather. The speakers who addressed the various meetings were the Rev. T. Hartfield of Brewster, N. Y., at Calvary Church; the Rev. George B. Pratt of Porto Rico at Christ Church; the Rev. Joshua Kimber, Associate Secretary of the Board of Missions, at the Church of the Heavenly Rest; Bishop Potter at the Cathedral Crypt; the Rev. Aprose Bring of Japan at St. Mary's Church, Mott Haven; Dr. Mary Gates of China at St. Paul's Church; Bishop Leonard of Salt Lake at St. James's Church, Bishop Hare of South Dakota at Trinity Church; the Rev. N. Beckwith of Galveston, Texas, at Christ Church, New Brighton; the Rev. William Cabell Brown of Brazil at Trinity Church, Mount Vernon; the Rev. J. M. Neifert at St. Paul's Church, Yonkers; the Rev. A. B. Hunter of Raleigh, N. C., at St. Luke's Church, and Deaconess Ellis of Utah at the Pro-Cathedral, on Stanton Street.

WOMAN IN THE PULPIT.

The Rev. Nina Vail Replaces Her Husband, Who Is Suffering with a Cold.

The Rev. Nina Vail, wife of the Rev. Charles H. Vail, pastor of the First Unitarian Church, Jersey City, who had announced that she would take charge of her husband's pulpit in February, was unexpectedly called on to officiate yesterday. Mr. Vail, who is the Gubernatorial candidate of the Social Democratic Party, was unable to preach owing to a severe cold contracted during a lecture tour.

Mrs. Vail was listened to by a very small congregation. She took for her text part of Matthew, xvi., 19: "I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven." In her discourse she likened the home to Heaven, and said that the principal key was that which opened the door to the future life of the child. His fate, she said, was in his mother's hands, and she could lead him to happiness or misery, as she chose. The other keys were the key of truth and the key of religion, which were important in building up the home. Another key opened the door to marriage, in which the husband and wife held the keys to each other's happiness. She said that in her experience she had found that men and women generally performed their duties faithfully in all the walks of life.

Mrs. Vail will preach again next Sunday morning.

New Lutheran Church in Jersey City.

The old Scotch Presbyterian Church, in Jersey City, which was purchased by the trustees of the Holy Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Church, was dedicated to the new faith yesterday. The services were conducted by the Rev. Eugene E. Neudewitz, Boston. The sermon was delivered by the Rev. Charles S. Albert of Philadelphia. The afternoon services were conducted by the Rev. J. B. Remensnyder of New York. The evening services were conducted by the Rev. J. J. Young and the Rev. G. F. Krotel, both of New York. A brief sermon was delivered by each.

FATHER DUCEY TALKS TO ACTORS

Tells Their Church Alliance that Women Are What Men Make Them.

The thirteenth regular service of the Actors' Church Alliance was held yesterday afternoon in St. Leo's Roman Catholic Church, the Rev. Thomas J. Ducey preaching a sermon on the subject of "Christian Brotherhood." He prophesied that the present century would see such brotherhood accentuated as never before.

"Every one who needs help is a man's neighbor," he said. "It is a pity that the world has divided itself into different deep folds, but however different are the intellectual views of men, their moral views in this point are universal."

Father Ducey exhorted those of the clerical profession to be helpful to each other and not to let themselves be corrupted by becoming slaves of society. Speaking of the women of the stage, he said:

"There are some bad women, to be sure, but my judgment is that women are what men make them. I thank God that I belong to a faith which exalts women. Don't tell me that evil and immorality are necessary. Don't tell me that your boys must sow their wild oats. You don't hear of girls having to sow theirs. Why have men the more right to sow than women?"

Among those who are expected to be present at the January reception of the Actors' Church Alliance are Bishop Potter and E. S. Willard.

Municipal Dwellings for Working People

A proposed bill relative to model municipal city dwellings for working people, accompanied by a petition urging the passage of the bill, was submitted for indorsement at the Central Federated Union meeting yesterday by Alexander Shaw of the Associated Carpenters, which are not represented in the central body. The bill and petition were referred to the Law and Legislation Committee. The bill provides for the municipality erecting a model tenement or tenements filling an entire city block, built on the most approved modern principles, with elevators for residents and renting homes in them to working people. The petition is signed by the Rev. R. Heber Newton, the Rev. Madison C. Peters, Walter C. B. Bentley, the Rev. Joseph Reynolds, Assemblyman Richard S. Reilly, and others. The bill and petition were referred to the Law and Legislative Committee.

METROPOLITAN OPERA CONCERT.

Mmes. Nordica and Schumann-Heink sang at the Metropolitan Opera House last night in Rossini's "Stabat Mater," which was a special feature of the regular Sunday concert, the fifth of the season. The male solo parts were taken by M. Plançon and M. Imbart De La Tour.

M. Campagnari's principal piece was Mozart's "Non Piu Andrai," ("Le Nozze di Figaro.") He also sang Rossin's "Largo Al Factotum," ("Il Barbiere di Swiglia.") M. Imbart De La Tour's aria from "Aida" was much applauded, as was "Ela. Mater," rendered by M. Plançon and the chorus. M. Mancinelli directed the orchestra. This was the programme:

Overture, "The Merry Wives of Windsor"..... Nicolai
"Non Piu Andrai." ("Le Nozze di Figaro").....Mozart
Mr. Campanari.
Aria, "Linda di Chamounix".....Donizetti
Miss Fritzi Scheff.

The President Out for a Drive.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—President McKinley is convalescing rapidly from his recent attack of the grip. To-day was his best day for several weeks. In the afternoon, accompanied by Mrs. McKinley, he went out for a drive, greatly enjoying the cold, bracing air which prevailed to-day. To-morrow the President will spend a short time in his office and gradually will increase the period of active work.

SHIP SUBSIDIES AND WHO WILL GET THEM

Opposition to Pending Bill Analyzes the Measure.

THE BENEFICIARIES UNDER IT

Critics Adduce Figures to Show that Four Ship Owners Will Receive About 90 Per Cent. of the Money.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—As an offset to the many and varied bulletins sent out by the "press bureau" of the Ship Subsidy bill, a number of Senators and other political leaders opposed to the measure to-night joined in issuing an analysis of the bill, showing, as they understand the measure, to whom the subsidies will go in the event of its passage. The analysis, under the caption "St. Clement's Prayer, Us Four, and No More," is as follows:

"By his report for 1900, Mr. Chamberlain, United States Commissioner of Navigation, furnished some data as to what ships would get subsidy, and how much each would receive. The situation, meanwhile, has not materially changed, except in directions that confirm the conclusion below noted. Though Mr. Chamberlain's figures are used, it must not be understood but that the facts are much more extreme than he thus admits:

"First—By his previous report, dated Oct. 18, 1899, at Page 37, the Commissioner himself estimated the subsidy earning capacity of only a part of those above noted, viz.: Ships of speed 14 knots or above, at $2,232,184.

"Second—The Commissioner's estimate above is made on the basis of ships in 1899. It so happens that in that year an extraordinary proportion of the vessels of such lines as Pacific Mail, Pacific Coast, and Oceanic were chartered to the Government for the transport service.

"Third—The United States Commissioner also omits to count vessels in the Hawaiian and Porto Rico trade.

"Fourth—In one case, that of the Paris, his subsidy calculation is put at only some $85,000, instead of the $350,000 that she would more ordinarily earn—that ship having been disabled for the greater part of the year by grounding.

"Fifth—Most important of all, the Commissioner has assumed in his estimates that no more subsidy eligible ships would engage in the foreign trade, and that those that are in it would make no more trips with subsidy than without it. If this were true, it should be fatal to the bill. But, of course, it is not true.

"The cool greed of the gentleman who drafted this bill cannot be better illustrated than by considering, in connection with the subsidy rates given, the lists of eligible steamers in connection with their ownership.

AS TO AMERICAN SHIPS.

"Under the Senate bill, as reported, the aggregate subsidy given American vessels is for 6,400 miles, round trip, (of a 3,200-mile voyage—the most common length.)

On 21-knot vessels, $2.26. On 16-knot vessels, $1.56
On 20-knot vessels.. 2.07 On 15-knot vessels.. 1.49
On 19-knot vessels.. 1.94 On 14-knot vessels.. 1.43
On 18-knot vessels.. 1.81 On 13-knot vessels.. 1.11
On 17-knot vessels.. 1.68. On 12-knot vessels.. 1.11

These figures represent subsidy per gross ton each voyage, and for shorter voyages there are similarly graded but somewhat higher rates.

A list of the vessels reported by United States Commissioner Chamberlain as eligible to receive full rates, classified by their speed, with gross tonnage in parenthesis after each, is as follows:

Twenty-one knots—New York, 10,674; Paris, 10,668; St. Louis, 11,629; St. Paul, 11,629.

Nineteen knots—None.

Eighteen knots—None.

Seventeen knots—China, 5,060; Havana, 5,667; Mexico, 5,667.

Sixteen knots—Queen, 2,727; St. Paul, 2,240; Senator, 2,109.

Fifteen knots—City of Puebla, 2,623; Alameda, 3,158; Australia, 6,301; Mariposa, 3,158; Seguranca, 4,033; City of Washington, 2,993; El Sud, 4,659; Admiral Dewey, 2,104; Admiral Sampson, 2,104; Admiral Schley, 2,101; La Grande Duchesse, 3,017; Friesland, 6,824.

Fourteen knots—Saratoga, 2,820; Vigilancia, 4,113; Orizaba, 3,496; Seneca, 2,729; Caracas, 2,877; Philadelphia, 2,520; Curacoa, 1,593; City of Peking, 5,079; City of Rio Janeiro, 3,548; Victoria, 3,502; Admiral Farragut, 2,104; City of Seattle, 1,411; Concho, 3,724; Peru, 3,528; Pomona, 1,264; Yucatan, 3,525; Kensington, 8,220; Southwark, 8,807; Westernland, 5,994; Michigan, 4,982; Manhattan, 8,094; Mohawk, 2,784.

Thirteen knots—Ohio, 3,967; Alliance, 2,985; Atlas, 1,942; City of Sydney, 5,017; Columbia, 2,772; Santiago, 2,558; Umatilla, 3,060; Walla Walla, 3,062; Zealandia, 2,730; Noordland, 3,398; Waesland, 4,856; Belgenland, 3,873; Rhyneland, 3,886; Manitou, 1,836; Marquette, 7,057; Memphinee, 6,919; Mesaba, 6,883; America, 5,138; Europe, 5,302.

Twelve knots—George W. Elder, 1,769; Advance, 2,994; City of Topeka, 1,057; Corona, 1,192; Finance, 2,062; Maverick, 1,561; Oregon, 2,235; San Marcos, 2,859; Wilkes, 2,262; Cherokee, 2,550; Pennland, 3,867; Appomattox, 2,975; Chickahominy, 2,875; Greenbrier, 2,875; Kanawha, 3,884; Rappahannock, 3,884; Shenandoah, 3,885; Ancon, 5,562; Olympia, 2,837; Tuscarora, 6,117; Chemnitz, 4,557; Lackawanna, 3,855; Potomac, 3,884; Delaware, 3,855; Wachawken, 2,784; Genesee, 2,830; Suwanee, 2,736.

Comparing this classification with Lloyd's statements of ownership of the vessels scheduled, we find that the International Navigation Company alone will receive the total full subsidies paid for ships of above seventeen knots speed. Or, if we take the whole list, group according to ownership the vessels that are eligible to full subsidy rates, and then take Mr. Chamberlain's own figures as to the yearly subsidy that each would draw, even if it made no more trips with subsidy than it did in 1899 without subsidy, we find that about nine-tenths of all full subsidy in the near future would be drawn by just four of the patriotic subsidy beggars who are behind this bill, viz.:

Of the full subsidy cream, therefore, there goes even under the grossly inadequate estimate of Commissioner Chamberlain:

To the International Navigation Company	$1,117,667 or	54.5%
To the New York and Cuba Mail Steamship Company	440,474 or	21.5%
To the Pacific Mail Steamship Company	157,252 or	7.5%
To the American Mail Steamship Company	102,267 or	5.0%
To all others, (nine)	226,716 or	11.5%
Total	$2,044,376 or	100.0%

"The four first named received about nine-tenths of the whole.

AS TO FOREIGN-BUILT STEAMERS.

"Taking the statement in this regard furnished in the recent report of the United States Commissioner of Navigation we find at Pages 273 and 276 the results of his investigation, from which it appears that of 'American citizens' eligible to receive one-half rate subsidy under this bill in respect of foreign-built ships owned by them, there were the following with subsidy swallowing capacity as below noted—even should they not make any more trips under subsidy than last year they made without it.

"It is, of course, understood that notes 'first,' 'second,' 'third,' and 'fifth' at the head of this article are also applicable here, and that the subsidy estimates given are ridiculously small."

Company.	No. Ships.	One-half Rate Subsidy.	Per Cent. Total.
International Navigation Company, (Pennsylvania Railroad and Standard Oil Interest)	11	$350,000	37.7
Atlantic Transport Company, (Pennsylvania Railroad)	21	334,000	35.9
Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad	8	103,000	11.1
F. E. Bliss, (Standard Oil Company's London factor)	8	71,000	7.6
All others, (T. Hogan & Sons, William R. Grace, United Fruit Company)	10	72,000	7.7
Total		$930,000	100.0

"That is, four concerns get more than nine-tenths of this subsidy.

"The above estimate of Standard Oil subsidy results is particularly modest. In the first place, it omits all mention of the Queen of the Avon and the Elbruz, which, it is understood, were as much a part of the fleet of the Anglo-American Oil Company as were the Tuscarora, Chesapeake, Lackawannna, Potomac, Delaware, Weehawken, Genesee, and Suwanee. Again, this company is but one of the four companies the main ownership of which is in Standard Oil interest, and therefore the Standard Oil Company, and its managers, being 'American citizens,' under the Subsidy bill, entitled to subsidy. The others being the American Petroleum Company, Antwerp, with five ships; American Petroleum Company, Rotterdam, with five ships, and Deutsch-Amerikanische Petroleum Gesellschaft, Hamburg, with fifteen ships, and the total subsidy, therefore, coming to these interests represented by Mr. Bliss being probably not far either way from $400,000, instead of $71,000.

SHIPS NOW BUILDING IN AMERICA.

"Again, from the report of the Commissioner of Navigation, we find that of all ships building for foreign trade in American shipyards of full capacity and speed sufficient to earn subsidy, there were just fifteen ships building, aggregating 129,434 tons gross register, and that these were being built at shipyards and for owners, and with subsidy capacity as follows:

No. of Ships.	Shipyards and Owners.	Subsidy.
2	Cramp & Sons; International Nav. Co.	$467,840
2	Newport News; Pacific Mail S. S. Co.	433,412
3	Cramp & Sons; Oceanic S. S. Co.	212,220
3	Cramp & Sons; N. Y. & Cuba Mail S. S. Co.	184,855
2	Cramp & Sons; W. P. Clyde & Co.	61,560
1	Neafie & Levy; Bolton, Bliss & Dallett	9,945
2	Eastern Shipbuilding Co.; Great Northern S. S. Co.	312,000
15		$1,681,832

"Or, just four shipyards and seven shipowners interested. Of these, one, the Great Northern Steamship Company, speaking by its President, Mr. Hill, repudiates all need for subsidy, denies the propriety of any on the plan proposed by this bill, says he ordered these ships in America because they could be built here more cheaply than abroad; and that if the iron and steel trusts would let up on the price they charge Americans for steel plates it would help ship building more than subsidy.

"'We can build ships in this country,' says Mr. Hill, 'as well and as chesply as they can be built anywhere in the world. Now I had figures within the last year furnished from the best builders on the Clyde and figures from as good builders as there are in this country, and to my utter amazement the American figures on a single ship were £80,000 to £100,000 under the best Clyde builders, and when we get the Ship Subsidy that is promised see how happy we shall be.

"'The subsidy scheme,' continued Mr. Hill, 'is an excellent thing if it is not abused. I believe that if we could pay a tonnage on the actual commodities of a certain kind based on the distance carried there would be some justice in a subsidy. I analyzed carefully the first bill that was drawn and found that out of $9,000,000 about $7,500,000 went to what is known as the American Line—a good friend of mine—and nine gentlemen. They are always very kind to me when I am crossing.

"'They have set apart 30 per cent. of the apportionment for the Pacific Ocean. No doubt some of my friends thought they were serving me, and in a money sense perhaps they were, but I would much rather see them take the duty off the plates that are to go into the ships when they are built.'

"This leaves our four friends—the International, the Pacific Mail, the Oceanic, and the New York and Cuba Mail—to pocket about 98 per cent. of the remainder that they are not giving Mr. Hill, without thanks from him therefor.

SHIPS NOW BUILDING ABROAD.

"On this point also Mr. Chamberlain reports: 'Of American contractors and owners of such ships eligible to half subsidy there were as follows:

No. Ships.		Aggregate Tonnage.	Estim'd Subsidy.
4	International Nav. Co.	44,000	$296,600
4	Atlantic Transport Co.	53,120	510,524
6	T. Hogan & Sons	26,100	85,590
2	Wm. R. Grace & Co.	9,400	52,900
16		132,620	$1,025,614

"Or, just four ship owners interested.

"It may be possible for a subsidy bill to be so drawn as more accurately to limit and define its beneficiaries, but until some one succeeds in doing it this one will hold the record."

SUGGESTS AN AMENDMENT.

A Liverpool Correspondent Would Have Subsidies Given to Americans Who Sell American Products.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I think the following idea as an amendment could be very justly added to the Shipping bill, which is more in harmony with the preamble by putting on the pension list all Americans who have resided abroad over five years and have sold over $15,000,000 or any other amount of American farm produce or manufactured commodities produced solely in the United States during the last fifteen years or during the life of the bill.

This amendment would bring the United States Treasury home to the American in direct connection with the worker, who is responsible for the spreading and using of American products and manufactures ten times more than any transportation line of steamers. This would, of course, deprive the transportation companies of part of the amount mentioned in the bill. They have done nothing but charge the highest rate of freight that the market will afford them on the same products.

Three million dollars out of $9,000,000 would go a long way to make needy Americans in their old age happy in their native country, covering a greater number of homes and individuals than the present bill designed for the benefit of the American Line and multi-millionaire owners.

This amendment also would be strictly within the harmonious and broad action of the McKinley Tariff bill for the encouragement of having American products and manufactures sold abroad, which has now become a necessity to the farmers and manufacturers alike.

The idea is worth pressing upon the Congressmen. Should the amendment be lost, the writer trusts the bill will also be lost, as there should be no law passed for the benefit of the corporation that is not good enough to stand the test of benefiting the individual citizen, who would do more for the money paid him by the Government than any transportation company could do for the spread of American products and manufactures. FRANKLIN G. COLBY.

SUBSIDY MEN CONFIDENT.

Measure Will Be Called Up To-day, and Backers Say It Will Pass—Claim 52 Votes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—At 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon Senator Frye (Rep., Me.,) will move that the Subsidy bill be taken up and made the regular order. The understanding is that the bill will hold the floor, giving way only to the appropriation bills. The Democrats have promised not to do any filibustering, and the friends of the bill are counting on not having it delayed except by Senators Butler (Pop., N. C.,) and Pettigrew, (Silver, S. D.)

Those who do not expect the bill to pass, however, point to the fact that the appropriation bills will give endless opportunity for discussion of a legitimate kind and that the Democrats can kill the Subsidy bill in this way and still keep their promise not to filibuster. The possibilities in that line were illustrated by the talk over the canteen and other subjects when the Army bill was under discussion. Nearly all the appropriation bills bristle with subjects on which debate is the most natural thing in the world.

That the friends of the Subsidy bill appreciate this and are not so well satisfied with the situation as they claim to be is shown by the fact that to-night they are reviving the threat of night sessions. If they attempt anything of this kind, it is believed that it will be accepted as a challenge and that there will be considerable filibustering. The threat of night sessions, if carried out, is likely to result in the continuance of the debate exclusively to these night sessions, as the enemies of the bill could easily keep it off the floor while appropriation bills were up.

The friends of the bill claim to-night that not more than five or six speeches will be made on each side. The speeches for the bill, they declare, will be made by Senators Frye, Hanna, (Rep., Ohio,) Chandler, (Rep., N. H.,) Mason, (Rep., Ill.,) Foraker, (Rep., Ohio,) and McMillan, (Rep., Mich.,) and those against it by Senators Vest, (Dem., Mo.,) Berry, (Dem., Ark.,) Bacon, (Dem., Ga.,) and presumably Butler and Pettigrew. In reality there will be a good many more speeches, and there will be enough to hold the Subsidy bill where it is until the appropriation bills come up. For example, Senator Clay (Dem., Ga.,) has already made one long speech on the bill and has repeatedly declared that that speech was simply the first instalment.

It is also rather curious that of the six speeches which are to be made by supporters of the bill there are to be made by Senators who have been reputed to be anxious to kill the bill, namely, Chandler, Mason, and McMillan. The boomers of the bill are pointing triumphantly to the fact that Chandler, Mason, and McMillan are on their side and are going to speak for the bill. The fact is, however, that if Chandler, Mason, and McMillan want to kill the bill they cannot take any more effectual way of doing it than by making long speeches about it—a fact to which Senator Mason at least is believed to be peculiarly alive.

The advocates of the bill are claiming Democratic votes, and say that it will pass the Senate by a vote of 52. They point with pride to the fact that Senator Quay (Rep., Penn.,) is in favor of the bill in spite of what Senator Hanna did to him last year.

THE PROGRAMME IN CONGRESS.

Appropriation Bills Will Probably Consume the Time of Both Houses This Week.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The Senate will take up the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation bill Monday, as soon as possible after convening. There is little in the bill that ordinarily would create debate, but it does not seem improbable that several days may be required to act on it.

Senator Aldrich, (Rep., R. I.,) Chairman of the Finance Committee, probably will report the War Revenue Reduction bill Monday or Tuesday, and he will ask immediate consideration for that measure. The rules of the Senate give preference to revenue bills, as they do to appropriation bills, and no order of the Senate will be necessary to make a place for that bill. It is not probable that any effort will be made to displace appropriation bills with that measure, but all Senators seem united in the opinion that it necessarily must become a law during the session, and if there should be an occasion when it would be necessary to decide between it and some bill other than an appropriation bill, the preference almost certainly would be given to the Revenue bill.

The present impression, however, is that this bill will be soon disposed of. Democratic Senators probably will make an effort to secure additional reductions, but, failing in this, will vote for the bill. The Pension and Military Academy Appropriation bills also are in the calendar and will receive early attention. The Indian Appropriation bill will be reported early in the week, but will not be pressed.

Senator Morgan (Dem., Ala.,) has not indicated his purpose with reference to the Nicaragua Canal bill, but his friends say that he will delay a reasonable time, and that if England does not act upon the amendments to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, he then will move consideration of the Canal bill.

Renewed effort will be made Monday or Tuesday in executive session to secure the confirmation of James S. Harlan as Attorney General for Porto Rico, and also to secure ratification of the treaty with Spain for the cession of the remaining islands of the Philippine group.

The House of Representatives will devote most of its attention during the coming week to appropriation bills, a series of them—District of Columbia, Fortifications, Naval, Post Office, and Agriculture—being ready for consideration. At the outset, however, there will be a day or two given to other measures having right of way. The Army Reorganization bill will be reported back promptly from the Committee on Military Affairs, probably to-morrow, and sent to conference with a general disagreement to all Senate amendments. It may be reported back during the latter part of the week, and a sharp contest is promised, Mr Richardson of Tennessee, the minority leader, having intimated that there will be a discussion of each paragraph.

The District of Columbia is entitled to to-morrow, and will seek to hold the day for the consideration of local measures. The bulky Postal Codification bill also is before the House as a continuing order, and will require much of the time not given to appropriation bills. Efforts are being made to have the bill to promote the efficiency of the Revenue Cutter Service made a special order for Tuesday.

The appropriation bills referred to will consume the time during the rest of the week, except Friday, which is private pension day, and Saturday, when eulogies to the memory of the late Senator Gear of Iowa will be pronounced.

MINISTER LOOMIS ISOLATED.

Venezuela Continues to Intercept State Department Dispatches—The Scorpion at La Guayra.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—All efforts on the part of the State Department to get into communication with Minister Loomis in Venezuela have so far failed, and the conclusion is that, in spite of the American protest, the Venezuelan Government still continues to intercept Mr. Loomis's dispatches.

Aside from a brief dispatch from the commander of the gunboat Scorpion, which is now at La Guayra, Venezuela, there was no news of importance received here to-day in official circles regarding the situation growing out of the asphalt concessions in that country. This dispatch came to Secretary Long, and reported that the latest news from Caracas indicated that all was quiet there. The Scorpion, her commander said, would proceed to Curacoa for coal. After this it is expected the vessel will return to La Guayra, where she will await the department's orders.

WAR TAX REDUCTION.

Senate Committee Takes Off Part of Tobacco Tax and Will Probably Reduce That on Telegrams.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20. — The Senate Committee on Finance was in session the greater part of to-day, making an effort to complete consideration of the War Revenue Reduction bill in order to be able to present its report to-morrow. It did not succeed, but the work was so nearly completed that it is believed one or two more meetings will suffice for that purpose. There are still many items of the bill which have not been finally passed upon, but all of them have been so completely canvassed that there will not be great difficulty in reaching a conclusion.

The committee is still withholding official announcement of its proceedings from the public, but some facts concerning its conclusions are known. It is not probable that there will be a very much greater total reduction than was made by the bill as it passed the House, but the reduction will be differently distributed. The most important conclusion reached is to reduce from 12 to 9 cents the tax on tobacco. There is also to be a reduction of the tax on cigars and snuff. The House left all these items untouched.

The Senate committee's decision as to those articles will reduce the revenue receipts about $10,000,000. This reduction will be made up by declining to accept all the House reductions. Consequently many of the articles from which the House took off all the tax will be given half the former rate by the Senate committee.

It is probable that on proprietary articles, the formulas of which are public, the tax will be entirely removed, while upon those, the formulas of which are secret, it will be retained entirely. The tax on steamship tickets will be reduced. The tax on steerage tickets may be removed entirely. The tax on stock transfers probably will be continued on the par value of the shares as at present, but this matter has not been definitely passed upon. The members of the committee express the opinion that to place the tax upon the selling value of stocks would be an invitation to fraud.

The beer tax has been discussed at considerable length, but no absolute decision has been reached. The present tendency is to leave the rate as fixed by the House. The tax on telegrams also remains undecided. Some of the members of the committee have made an effort to have the law amended so as to reduce the tax to a half cent per message, but to make the telegraph companies pay it. This proposition has not been accepted in its entirety, but the reduction seems probable. The form of the bill will be altered materially.

TO DISFRANCHISE THE NEGRO.

Maryland Democrats Want a Special Session of the Legislature to Take Action in the Matter.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 20.—Just as soon as Gov. Smith receives from Washington the official report of the census of the negro voters in the eastern and southern counties of Maryland he will, it is now believed, call an extra session of the Legislature to meet in February Col. L. Victor Baughman, one of the Democratic leaders and ex-Senator Gorman's proxy at meetings of the National Committee, has come out flatfooted for an extra session of the Legislature. The Colonel favors the disfranchisement of the illiterate voters.

In discussing the negro question, he said that, while the native negro might not be dangerous to Maryland institutions, this State was becoming the dumping ground of worthless negroes from the south. Hundreds of them having no legal residence were, according to the Colonel, counted in the census in order that the representation of the Republican counties in the Legislature might be increased.

It is evident from the statements of Col. Baughman and other party leaders on the inside that their only hope of carrying the State this Fall for a Legislature that will insure the return of Arthur Gorman to the United States Senate is by disfranchising the negro vote and even protesting against the census returns. Col. Baughman declares that of the seven additional members of the Legislature secured under the new census, six are to come from Republican counties. Of these four are from southern counties—Prince George's, St. Mary's, Anne Arundel, and Charles.

Mr. Gorman has craftily expressed an opinion that an extra session is not necessary, but his closest friends, like Col. Baughman, in the leadership of the party are advocating it, thus shifting responsibility from the "big boss." Three secret conferences of the Governor and other leaders were held in Baltimore the past week. At the conferences the question of an increase in the legislative representation from Republican counties received as much attention as the proposition to disfranchise the illiterate voters. In their complaint of the census they go so far as not only to question its accuracy, but also to discuss new State enumeration as a basis of representation in the House. They have looked up the State law on this question, and have discovered a section under which they believe a new State census can be ordered.

A week ago Mayor Hayes was opposing an extra session scheme. He declared against disfranchisement of the negro. State Senator Bryan echoed his views. It was believed that their joint opposition would kill the scheme. Three days ago Mr. Gorman had a talk with Mayor Hayes, and now the Mayor changes his tune. In reference to his conferences with Mr. Gorman he says:

"I said to him that I fully approve of the extra session of the Legislature to do what we can under our State Constitution to take a correct census of our city and State. I do not believe that our city or State should have the new representation in our General Assembly based on an unfair and incorrect National census, which, I grievously fear, for Baltimore and certain of the counties is doctored to suit political ends."

A SECRET CONFERENCE.

Republican Legislators and County Committeemen Discuss the Police Bill and Other Measures.

A political conference concerning which there was great mystery was held at the headquarters of the Republican County Committee, at 1 Madison Avenue, last night. It was attended by the Republican Senators and Assemblymen of the city and several connected with County Committees. Legislation affecting the city was discussed until nearly 11 o'clock.

So wary was Executive Chairman William H. Ten Eyck of leaks that he placed Sidney H. Goodacre, the Sergeant at Arms of the committee, on guard at the entrance door to the building, with instructions not to allow reporters to pass the threshold. But Mr. Ten Eyck was soon given to understand that he did not own the building, and the reporters trooped past Goodacre despite his protests.

There were present at the conference Senators Audett, Fuller, Marshall, Elsberg, and Slater, Assemblymen Morgan, Cotton, De Graw, Waite, Rainey, Blackwell, Price, Weber, Wilson, Remsen, Adams, Henry, Seymour, Bennet, Smith, Weekes, Bell, Sherer, and Vacheron, President Robert C. Morris of the New York County Committee, Executive Chairman W. H. Ten Eyck, Walter B. Atterbury of Brooklyn, Thomas Braniff of Richmond, and Secretary George R. Manchester. Assemblyman Adler was detained at home by sickness.

Secrecy was enjoined on all of the conferrees, and at the close of the meeting President Morris made the following formal statement:

"It was a meeting of the Republican legislators of Greater New York, for the purpose of interchanging views. It was not a meeting for either favoring or opposing any legislation."

Although Mr. Morris was plied with numerous questions, he would make no additional statement. It was learned from another source, however, that the Bureau of Elections bill was discussed at great length, while the report of the Charter Revision Commission received a good deal of attention. The single-headed police bill was also considered, and both Messrs. Morris and Ten Eyck denied that they knew anything of an intention to make Chief Devery one of the deputies under the proposed law.

There will be another conference at Albany during the week, when the question of reapportioning the Congress districts will be more fully discussed. This State gains three districts, and two of these will be erected in Manhattan. The others will be so rearranged in Kings and New York as to insure the election of additional Republican Representatives.

Frederick Haidy, Republican leader in the Third Assembly District of this county, who is Assistant Treasurer of the Police Board, is talked of as New York's representative on the Bureau of Elections Commission.

The Oregon Senatorship.

PORTLAND, Oregon, Jan. 20.—It practically has been settled that there will be no caucus of the Republican members of the Legislature to select a candidate for the United States Senate. The opponents of ex-Senator H. W. Corbett concede that he will receive from 30 to 35 votes. Senator McBride claims to have 20 votes. Binger Hermann, Commissioner of the General Land Office, his friends claim, will have 10 votes on the first ballot. The fact that the 28 Democrats in the Legislature were unable to agree upon a candidate at a recent caucus is regarded as an indication that they will split up their votes and that probably several will be cast for Republicans.

A ROTHSCHILD IN A DUEL

Baron Robert Wounds Count de Lubersac Near Paris.

Adversaries Fought Sixteen Fierce Bouts with Swords—Affair Grew Out of a Quarrel at College.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—The long-expected duel between the Count de Lubersac and Baron Robert de Rothschild was fought with swords at 11 o'clock this morning, on Baron Edmond de Rothschild's estate at Boulogne-sur-Seine. The carriages with the principals, seconds, doctors, and a few friends arrived there from Paris shortly before 11. Count de Lubersac's seconds were M. Sohege and Count de Laborde, and those of Baron de Rothschild were Baron Leonino and Viscount de Bondy. The duel began at 11:10, and lasted ten minutes, when Count de Lubersac received a lunge perforating his arm, at the elbow, to the armpit. The duel was then stopped.

Both the Count and the Baron fought most determinedly, neither flinched and neither showed the slightest desire to spare the other. Sixteen engagements took place, all of a desperate character. The combatants attacked each other furiously. The sleeves of their shirts were literally torn to pieces by the points of their swords as the duellists repeatedly lunged at each other. Several times they came to close quarters and their seconds were obliged to separate them.

At the sixteenth onslaught Baron de Rothschild lunged at the Count, who tried to parry, but failed, and the Baron's sword penetrated his arm, just above the elbow and issued at the armpit. The spectators hastened around the wounded man, and two well-known physicians, Drs. Berger and Poirrier, examined the wound. They declared the Count's life was not in danger, but that it was impossible to continue the duel. Count de Lubersac was then taken back to Paris.

Baron de Rothschild is still performing military service with the Fifty-fourth Regiment of Infantry in Garrison at Compiegne. He only attained his majority yesterday, and lost no time in settling his account with Count de Lubersac.

The Rothschild-Lubersac incident, which brought out a remarkable crop of duels, had its origin in a boy's quarrel, dating from the time when Count de Lubersac and Baron Rothschild de Rothschild were at the same college. They quarreled one day in regard to a tennis court which was occupied by Rothschild and which Count de Lubersac wanted. During the quarrel Lubersac called his adversary a "dirty Jew."

Ill-feeling was revived after they left college by an expression attributed to Baron Robert de Rothschild respecting Count de Lubersac, which was repeated to the latter soon after his admission to the Jockey Club. The Count then wrote a letter, in which he announced himself ready to meet the Baron on the field of honor, although, as he expressed it, "you know how you and your people inspire me with disgust."

Baron de Rothschild sent as his seconds MM. de Saint-Alary and de Neuflize to Count de Lubersac, who appointed Count de Dion and Count Boni de Castellane as his seconds. Baron Robert de Rothschild's seconds stated in a letter subsequently published that their efforts to secure an encounter had failed because of the refusal of Count de Lubersac's seconds to allow the duel to take place when they discovered that Baron de Rothschild was still a minor.

Letters of Baron Robert to his seconds and to the Count added fuel to the flames, and the Count announced his purpose to again send his seconds when the Baron should attain his majority. He also wrote to Baron Robert's cousin, Baron Edouard de Rothschild, son of Baron Alphonse de Rothschild, stating that as the son of the head of the Rothschild family, he should hold him responsible and should insult him at their first meeting.

A duel followed between Count de Lubersac and Baron Edouard de Rothschild April 12 of last year, in which the latter was slightly wounded in the forearm in the first bout.

Count de Lubersac, a few days previously, fought with and wounded M. Michel Ephrussi, and a third duel, arising from the same controversy, was fought between Count de Dion and M. de Saint-Alary, in which the latter was wounded.

WORSHIP OF THE GOLDEN CALF.

Century's Dawn Gives the Victory to Money and Makes the Millionaire King, Says Dr. Myers.

"The trinkets of a wedding this last week are the American substitute of grass for gold," said the Rev. Dr. Cortland Myers, preaching yesterday in the Baptist Temple, Brooklyn. "Why," he continued, "should the press be flooded with pictures of presents of a wedding in the small town of Newport? What is Newport, and who are these great personages?

"All this is a revelation of the vast host of worshippers falling down before the American false god. Money secures the reverence, and the sin of idolatry is in our life. More attention and honor are given to these young people than to the nuptials of Kings and Queens. Neither one of them is known for anything except ability to drive an automobile.

"The dawn of the twentieth century gives the victory to money and makes the millionaire king. Just because a young man happens to be heir to a fortune he is the heir to fame and favor, but, alas! too, almost always of failure. Why worship failure? We need a better definition for life and manhood and kingship and success. This century will find its victory in the convictions that money does not make the man; that life does not consist in the abundance of the things which a man possesseth, and that glory belongeth only unto him that hath earned it.

"It is unchristian and un-American to worship a golden calf. The real royalty of the land may have been wedded this past week without even a newspaper notice because we are blind to values and know not realities. Money is the smallest part of life and that is the most important lesson of the hour. What a man takes with him when he dies ought to be the measure of attention given him while he lives.

"All this is productive of the black cloud in the sky of our Government at the dawn of this new century. Some of the States have disgraced themselves by sending to the United States Senate money instead of men. It is policy instead of patriotism, poison instead of protection. Heaven speed the day when we shall batter into fragments the idol of gold and worship only God and the divinity in man."

FIRE ON RANDALL'S ISLAND.

Dwelling and Greenhouses Destroyed—Children in House of Refuge March Out Singing.

The children who are inmates of the House of Refuge on Randall's Island were aroused from their beds last night by a fire which threatened to extend to the dormitories and caused considerable excitement while it lasted.

The fire started in a two-story frame dwelling which is occupied by the instructors in farming and horticulture and their families. It was discovered first in a room in the basement and is thought to have been caused by an overheated furnace. By the time J. R. Scott, the florist, and Jacob Faulhaber, the farmer, had hurried their wives and children out of the house it was in flames from top to bottom.

The house is only a short distance from the dormitories, and as a precaution, Superintendent Sage of the House of Refuge, ordered the fire alarm sounded. It was 7:25 o'clock, and all the 725 boys in one building and 100 girls in the other were sleeping soundly. By Superintendent Sage's watch it was one minute and forty-five seconds later when every boy and girl was in line, and a moment later all moved out of the building in perfect order, singing "Hail Columbia." The trained boys' fire brigade of fifty-four members was sent to its post in readiness to quench any stray sparks, but fortunately had nothing to do.

The water pressure on the island was so poor that it was found necessary to send in an additional alarm to Manhattan. A fireboat which responded to this alarm, instead of crossing to the east side of the island, where the fire was located, mopped on the west side in order to save time, while a hose was stretched across the island to the fire. By the time the fire was extinguished the house had been burned to the ground and the greenhouses, which are near it and connected with it by a covered passage, were in ruins. As soon as the fire was under control the children were sent back to bed again. The damage is estimated at about $5,000.

WALTER E. STEVENS DEAD.

Night Superintendent of Presbyterian Hospital Had Been Ill Four Days.

Walter E. Stevens, for thirteen years past the night Superintendent of the Presbyterian Hospital, died in that institution last night after four days' illness, of pneumonia.

Mr. Stevens was born in Gloucester, England, fifty-two years ago. After receiving his degree from Trinity College he was admitted to the bar. Twenty years ago he came to New York. He had a brother a Colonel in the British Army, and now at the front in South Africa. His mother and two sisters live in London. Superintendent Stevens was unmarried.

He was a popular official. It was in part his refusal to leave his work Wednesday that caused his death. He had complained of feeling ill, and when a physician told him he ought to go to bed he refused, saying the hospital was too full; that he was needed to look after things. He grew speedily worse, however, and was obliged to take the physician's advice. The physicians declare that had he cared half as much for his own comfort as he had for others he Prospects of the Teams in the Championship Series.

COLUMBIA WILL COMPETE

Two of Last Year's Players Have Agreed to Form Part of the Seven —Eyer Elected Captain.

Yale and Princeton opened the local intercollegiate hockey season last week, and games will now continue at short intervals until the middle of March. The feature of the season still so young has been the disqualification of the Columbia hockey team by the Faculty Committee on Athletics at the university.

As soon as the members of the seven realized finally that the action of the Faculty was irrevocable they pluckily set to work to do all that was possible to build up a team for the substitute material. The only bit of luck that came to Columbia was that she was enabled to enlist the services of two players who were members of last year's team, George Eyer, a Science senior, and George De Witt, a Science sophomore, who did not try for the team this year on account of the pressure of their college studies and the abundance of hockey material. At the critical pinch, however, when the university feared that it would not be represented on the ice at all, Eyer and De Witt volunteered to play.

Eyer has been elected Captain of the team and instructs the men in the St. Nicholas Rink.

The former 'Varsity team has now been metamorphosed into the scrub, and plays against the newly organized 'Varsity team. Capt. Eyer says that the probable line-up will include Von Bernuth at goal, Benedict at point, and Eakin, an old Drisler School player, at cover point. Akin, at Cutler School last year, and McKee, formerly of Berkeley School, together with De Witt and Eyer, will be the forwards. Columbia's opening game will be with Princeton at the St Nicholas Rink Saturday.

Yale has all her seven from last year, except Smith at goal and Campbell as forward. The latter entered the Columbia Law School last October and was one of the players disqualified by the Faculty.

Princeton appears to have improved considerably over last year's form. Paull at goal is much better than Wilson, and Hamas at point is superior to Ford. Little at cover point and Alexander, Purnell, and Poe on the forward line occupy their old positions. McAlpin is a good new man.

Reports from Brown indicate that the team is of about the same strength as last year. The seven is composed of Chase, Steere, Low, Pevear, Bates, Phillips, and Pain, the latter the place occupied by Cook last season.

The Pennsylvania team appears to be an unimportant factor, as it was defeated by the weak Brown seven in the opening game at Philadelphia last week. The standing of the teams:

	Won.	Lost.		Won.	Lost.
Brown	1	0	Pennsylvania	0	1
Princeton	1	1

SEVENTH REGIMENT'S SHOOT.

Lieut. Beach Won Revolver Match with a Perfect Score.

In the Seventh Regiment's regular weekly shooting competition on the regiment's rifle range at the armory, on Sixty-fifth Street and Park Avenue, a revolver match was one of the events scheduled, and resulted in an exceedingly close contest. A perfect score was required to win it. Lieut. O. M. Beach of Company B accomplishing this feat, with Capt. W. J. Underwood of Company G only one point behind him, and Lieut. T. C. Wiswall third, another single point behind.

The scores ranged down in much the same manner in the class match. J. D. Theos, Jr., of Company B, winning by scoring 34 on each range, 200 yards and 500 yards, with a total of 68.

The company competition for the Kemp and the Col. Emmons Clark Trophies will be continued on each company drill night this week. The Kemp Trophy is won by the highest total score by twenty-five men of any one company and the Clark Trophy by the highest total score of the twenty-five men; shooting for the Kemp Trophy is added to the score of an additional team of twenty-five men. In the competition, Company F leads for the Kemp Trophy with a total of 1,067 points, while Company K leads for the Clark, with 2,007 points. The best records in the competition are 1,124 for the Kemp and 2,144 for the Clark. The scores for the regular weekly shoot follow:

SPECIALS FOR THE DOG SHOW.

Additions to Regular Prize List Made by Enthusiasts.

Some attractive additions to the special premiums have been made to the prize list for the Westminster Kennel Club's annual dog show, to be held in Madison Square Garden Feb. 19 to 22 inclusive. The special classes, so increased, will be a great feature of the coming exhibition, as these premiums are expected to attract a large number of entries from owners of dogs other than those who are known as breeders and dealers.

One of the specials of note is a challenge cup, worth $200 for the best great Dane owned by a member of the Great Dane Club, offered by Mrs. J. W. M. Cardeza. For St. Bernards the St. Bernard Club has offered the club medal for the best stud dog, to be shown with three of his progeny, the qualities of the progeny only to be considered. A silver challenge cup for the best pair of field spaniels, and a similar cup for the best kennel of cocker spaniels are offered by the American Spaniel Club. One other special for field dogs is offered by Walton Ferguson, Jr., to replace the Brokaw Challenge Cup for the best heavyweight pointer bitch.

For terriers specials are announced, one, a challenge shield, by A. D. Cochran, for the best Airedale dog, another, a cup, by the same donor, for the best American-bred Airedale dog, and a challenge shield by John L. Arden for the best bitch of the same breed, and, by the same, a cup for the best American-bred bitch. Mrs. Joseph B. Vandergrift and E. M. Oldham have added specials for Pomeranian terriers. The Welsh Terrier Club, the Bulldog Club of America, the Vancrest Kennels, and an anonymous donor are contributors of other special premiums. Entries to the specials, as well as to the classes regularly announced by the Westminster Kennel Club, will close on Feb. 4 with James Mortimer, Superintendent of the show, Room 1,001, Townsend Building, 1,123 Broadway.

NEW SPRING SALE OF HORSES.

Fasig-Tipton Schedule Increased by a Third Big Event.

To the two great horse auctions held each year by the Fasig-Tipton Sales Company, in Madison Square Garden, an addition has been announced under the title of "The First Spring Event," which, like the other sales held regularly by the company, will be exclusively for light-harness horses, trotters, and pacers, the date fixed for the introduction of the innovation being March 19, 20, and 21. This third sale will be established as a fixture. The announced addition to the schedule gives three more sales in the present season, one of which is a special event for thoroughbreds, the dispersal sale of the Bitter Root Stud of Hamilton, Mon., the property of the Marcus Daly estate, in the usual sales ring at Madison Square Garden, on Jan. 30 and 31, and Feb. 1.

Coney, 2:02¾, in an exhibition, and Anaconda, 2:02¾, both from the racing stable that James Butler is to sell out, are a couple of the stars of the big combination, while from the Butler string other notables are the stout and game Gayton, 2:08¼; Ed S. Young, 2:11¼, and Baron March, 2:15. Some other famous horses in the "400" catalogue are Airich, 2:12¼; Our Jack, 2:13½; Dariel, 2:07½, and Page, 2:09¾.

CLASS A BILLIARD TOURNEY.

The Players of Note Who Will Enter in the Contest.

The positive announcement by Wayman C. McCreery that he will not be a competitor this year in the Amateur Athletic Union Class A tourney for the amateur billiard championship promises to have the double effect of leaving a very open contest for the championship, and at the same time strengthening the hold of Wilson S. Foss on the championship emblem, won by him last February in the tournament held in the theatre of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club. A recent bereavement is the cause of Mr. McCrery's determination, and as he was the most dangerous, steadiest, and most persistent of the opponents Mr. Foss met, his absence from the contest means that the other Class A players must make great improvement before the trophy held by Amateur Champion Foss is in danger.

The championship this year will be played in the Knickerbocker Athletic Club theatre again, beginning on Feb. 3, with the conditions governing the tourney the same as last year—fourteen-inch balk line, with the anchor shot barred, each game to be of 400 points. Only one game will be played on the opening day, that beginning at 8 o'clock in the evening, but thereafter two games will be played each day to the finish, one at 3 o'clock and the other at 8 o'clock. Under the conditions, the winner of the championship shall have the privilege of challenging Mr. Foss for the championship and championship emblem. Should the winner in the tourney decline to challenge, the second men then shall have the privilege, but there is little danger that the first right will not be claimed, and already interest in the prospective meeting between the old and new champion is keen. Mr. Foss must defend his title or forfeit it not less than twenty-four nor more than forty-eight hours after the tournament is decided. His friends, after carefully reviewing the prospective field for the competition, are confident that Mr. Foss will win the second game in the series of three that he must win to hold permanently the championship trophy.

Mr. Foss, while he holds the championship, is ineligible for entry in the Class A tourney, and with Mr. McCreery not in the contest this year, the best of the players expected to make up the field are: C. G. Threshie, the Class B champion in 1899; Charles S. Norris, winner in the recent tournament for the championship of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club; Dr. L. L. Mial, who competed in Class A last year; J. A. Hendrick, who showed fine skill in the recent Knickerbocker Athletic Club tournament; C. F. Conklin, who but a short time ago won a handicap in Chicago against ten opponents, never losing a game, and finishing with a grand average of 1.6; and Messrs. Cutler and Schmitt, noted Boston players. Aside from the chance to meet Mr. Foss, there will be three prizes for the first three men in the tournament, with additional premiums for the highest run and the best single average.

CRESCENT A. C. ANNUAL MEETING.

Members Applauded Reports Showing Prosperity of the Organization.

The large membership of the Crescent Athletic Club, the most exclusive and prominent organization of its kind in Brooklyn, was excellently represented at the annual meeting of the club, held Saturday night in its city house, Clinton Street, near Fulton. The gathering was as enthusiastic as it was large, and the reports on the success and progress made by the thriving association in the year ended were received with much applause. There was perfect harmony throughout, the elections of officers being unanimous, while the approval of the course pursued by the Governors was unstinted. The most gratifying reports read were those relating to the development of athletic sports. Aside from club competitions, the Crescent's teams achieved many notable victories, chief among which were the winning of the championship in the Amateur Hockey League, with a series of ten consecutive wins, and a success that was almost as decisive and sweeping in capturing the championship of the Amateur Athletic Association Baseball League, the opponents at baseball being the teams from New York, Knickerbocker, and Montclair Athletic Clubs and the Englewood and Knickerbocker Field Clubs.

The club's golf season was a most prosperous one. There were thirty club tournaments held besides the competitions for the President's Cup and the championship cup. The Golfing Committee of the club thanked the following members for prizes given by them: Charles J. Patterson, the Decoration Day Cup, won by R. G. Langdon; Messrs. James and E. Lowndes Rhett, the Independence Day Cup, won by A. A. Adams; J. V. Wilson, the Labor Day Cup, won by James Rhett; Cornelius B. Van Brunt, the Consolation Cup, won by George S. O'Flyn; George W. Beckel, the Championship Cup, won by R. M. Goddard; Howard S. Bowns, the Aggregate Cup, won by Cornelius B. Van Brunt; Dr. B. W. Eberhauer, the Record Cup, won by Sidney Maddock, and the President's Cup, won by A. A. Adams. Reports of a similarly gratifying nature were made regarding other branches of sports.

The club's membership was reported as follows: Life, 36; non-resident, 137; resident, 1,500, (limit;) total, 1,723. A waiting list of 97 is now on hand of proposed names. Two hundred and fifty-three new members were elected during the year.

In the matter of finances the Secretary's statement showed a total of $138,-163.17 as the club's receipts, against a total of $121,011.24 for expenditures.

The selection of officers was as follows:

Nominating Committee, class of 1901 — Fritz Brose, William C. Nesmith, Henry N. Read, M. D., Frank H. Sayre, and Charles A. Sherman.

Members of the Board of Governors—For the class of 1904, Charles M. Bull, Henry R. Ketchum, Henry L. Lanahan, Charles A. Morse, Jr., James H. Olmsted, Carl G. Rasmus; for the class of 1903, Howard Drakeley.

The board will meet next week and elect from their number the officers for the year.

TRACK ATHLETICS AT COLUMBIA.

Many Respond to the Call for Candidates for the Team.

General interest in track athletics has been aroused among Columbia men since Ernest Hjertberg has been in charge as trainer. In response to the call issued by Capt. J. Boyce Smith, Jr., 142 athletes have presented themselves. The number out for the hurdles and pole vault is somewhat small when compared with those trying for the other events, and contests will be held in the gymnasium to stimulate interest in these two events.

For the sprint twenty-six men in all have turned out. Of this number five—Morley, Weekes, Slocovich, Berrien, and Van Hoevenberg—are members of the 'Varsity football team. Weekes is one of the strongest sprinters in the university, having equaled the world's indoor record for the sixty-yard dash. Berrien and Van Hoevenberg are also fast men. Besides these, M. B. Dean, F. P. Delgado, A. Wortman, and W. P. Hatch of last year's team will run. The freshman sprinters are showing considerable promise, especially Eugene Ashley and W. P. S Earle. The middle-distance runners number thirty. Of these G. C. Atkins, C. B. Marshall, O. M. Bishop, A. R. Dorman, W. M. Van Cise, J. McAneney, and J. Meehan are members of last year's team. The new men are numerous and promising. Only seven candidates have reported thus far for the hurdles.

There are more men trying for the long-distance events than for the others. Thirty-six men are out for this class, of which number seven, W. Duden, C. Ropes, E. D. Opperheimer, C. Scharps, T. L. O'Connell, J. P. Richmond, and C. W. Iglehart, had experience last year. These men are also members of the cross-country team.

The pole vault, like the hurdles, is not well patronized, only eight vaulters having made their appearance. J. B. Smith, A. Whittaker, and C. Eastmond have had previous experience, while F. Whittaker is the most promising of the new men.

In the jumps, there are eighteen candidates. Ernst and Brenneman did good work on the team last year. Pitcher, Updike, Rytienberg, and Dyrssn, among the new men, have shown some ability.

Staten Island Y. C. Anniversary.

The Staten Island Yacht Club of Richmond Borough held its tenth banquet at the Hotel St. George, New Brighton, on Saturday evening. Over 200 members and their guests were seated at the tables. Commodore C. F. Wiegand presided. The club has a comfortable home at Stapleton and another on the Shrewsbury River at Highlands, N. J. It has a membership of 150, and its fleet is composed of twenty-eight vessels.

Joint Athletic Game.

The Union Settlement Athletic Club and Company K of the Eighth Regiment will hold a joint set of games in the Eighth Regiment Armory, Ninety-fifth Street and Park Avenue, on the evening of March 9. The members' games of the club will be held on Thursday evening.

CROSS COUNTRY RUNNING

Cold Weather Compelled the Harriers to Move Swiftly.

CHAMPIONSHIP ARRANGED

Regular Weekly Events Held by Local Clubs—Dead Heat in Pastime A. C.'s Run.

Of an even dozen members of the Pastime Athletic Club who started out for the regular Sunday cross-country run, one reconsidered after he had been jogging with his comrades for about a mile of the four-and-a-half-mile course covered. The weather fell somewhat short of being ideal for cross-country sport, for bare-limbed runners, in their cotton trunks and shirts, and eleven others of the enthusiasts were putting in their best paces trying to keep warm when they missed Philip Umpstarter. Looking back for him, Umpstarter was discovered making a course of his own toward home, a fire, and more clothing.

He waved a firm denial and ran homeward faster when called on to return. The remaining eleven finished the run, which was started on Jerome Avenue at One Hundred and Sixty-fifth Street, and circled back to the starting point. The slow men had the finish to themselves, and T. Fagan and T. Fray, with four minutes' handicap, finished together in what was judged to be a dead heat. H. G. Schroeder got in third, with R. Rattbaber fourth, all of these being of the slow division. Of the scratch men R. Pfortner was the first to finish, followed in the order named by J. Lynch, T. McDonald, and T. J. Brennan. The time of the run was 0:32, the athletes having had a very rough trip over frozen ground and patches of ice that caused not a few falls.

The Star Athletic Club held a run that perhaps was rather lightly attended over the club course in Long Island City. Owing to the extreme cold, but three and a half miles were covered, but all the old runners were out, including many visitors. The course led from the clubhouse to Nott Avenue, thence to Thompson Avenue, to Calvary Cemetery, thence home. The athletes did not take much time to stop and walk, and fast time was made. C. T. Kelly, Star Athletic Club, won, with F. J. Hussey, Star Athletic Club, second; G. W. Lewis, Xavier Athletic Club, third; T. Kennedy, Star Athletic Club, fourth; Henry W. Schell, Star Athletic Club, fifth; J. J. Shevlin, Star Athletic Club, sixth; J. J. Delehantey, Star Athletic Club, seventh; F. J. Moore, Flushing Boat Club, eighth; N. Vanderberg, Star Athletic Club, ninth, and J. Gelgerm, Star Athletic Club, tenth; and Robert W. Kennedy, Star Athletic Club, eleventh. Time, 20:00.

Capt. John C. Doyle led the runners of the Brooklyn Athletic Club over a five-mile course at Maspeth, L. I., in the morning. Frank Veres finished second, with Bernard W. Dudley third, Herman Classen fourth, and William H. Classen fifth. The time was 37:23½.

The cross-country runners of the Williamsburg Athletic Association competed for medals on a course over the fields toward Laurel Hill, crossing the Cooper farms, Berlin, and East Bushwick and return, about six and a half miles. Thirty-one started, and in a close finish James H. Grievers won, with J. E. Solan second, Joseph E. Reydell third, John Reydell fourth, William Burgher fifth, and M. Bracken sixth. The time was 0:50:01½.

The members of the Marquette Club held their Sunday cross-country run over the Bay Ridge course, covering a circular course about four miles and a half. Gerald Drew was the first man home, followed in by Hugh Flaherty, second; J. F. Madden, third; T. Munsees, fourth; F. Manvel, fifth, and A. Krause, sixth. The time was 0:39:51½.

The Cross-Country Championship Committee met in the house of the Star Athletic Club, corner of Fourteenth Street and Vernon Avenue, Long Island City, yesterday to perfect plans for the coming annual cross-country championship contest. It was decided to hold the event over the full eight-mile course of the Star Athletic Club on Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22, providing enough teams enter to make up the race. The Star, Xavier, Pastime, New West Side, and Brooklyn Athletic Clubs have already decided to enter teams in the event, while a number of other teams are almost certain to run.

The committee will offer prizes for the first team and second team whose members finish in the lowest number of points, while individual trophies and single medals will be offered for the first man in and the one who makes the best time over the course.

To make the event representative, the committee decided that individual entries could be made and that any member of a club in good standing in the Amateur Athletic Union whose club would not enter a team could enter individually for the single prizes.

Michael J. Flynn, President of the Star Athletic Club; Thomas J. Nevins, St. Bartholomew's Athletic Association, and J. W. Strumpf, Grace Athletic Club, compose the sub-committee in charge of the event. They invite interested persons to meet them next Sunday afternoon at the same place at 3 P. M. to complete preparations for the big event.

NO CREW FOR N. Y. U.

Athletic Finances at the University Too Low to Support Rowing.

In spite of the efforts of a number of the students New York University will not be represented by a crew this year. Although the matter has not come before the students for final decision, there is no mistaking the sentiment of the majority on the question. The principal objection is the financial expenditure necessary to support a crew.

At present New York University is represented in college athletics by four teams, all self-supporting. The total return from these teams, however, is not sufficiently adequate to meet rowing expenses. Then, too, there is but a small amount of material for a crew.

Owing to the approach of the mid-year examinations but little is being done in athletics. The gymnastic team, which had such bright prospects a short time ago, has taken a slump. Belcher was the mainstay of the team, but he has been compelled to cease training. Of the new men the most promising are F. Peck and W. C. Belcher, a brother of F. J. Belcher. The latter will in all probability make the team this year.

The track team will be represented in the Forty-seventh Regiment games in Brooklyn on Wednesday by F. Grasmuck and A. Walz, in the 100 and 220 yard dashes; C. E. Funk, novice half mile, and F. B. Heartsill, mile run. The team will make a number of entries in other indoor games during the Winter. Capt. Jones will jump at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club games in February, and later in the month he will take a trip to Boston to compete in the Boston Athletic Association games. On March 2 he will compete at the Georgetown University games, at Washington. Manager Metcalfe is at present arranging for the Spring meets. The fixed dates are the Hamilton meet at New York, the Philadelphia relay races, and the intercollegiate games. Arrangements are on foot for meets with one or two of the following colleges: Columbia, Cornell, Colgate, Amherst, and Syracuse.

Capt. Taylor of the baseball team will call the candidates for the team out the first week in February.

Cycling in California.

Cycle racing will soon be in full swing on the Pacific Coast. There is an excellent track at Los Angeles, another is being built at San Diego, and a third at San Bernardino. Later, other tracks will be added at Fresno and San José, and probably at Sacramento and San Francisco.

The new tracks will be eight laps to the mile and constructed for a speed of ten seconds better to the mile than the track in Los Angeles. The riders have already shown miles at a 1:30 gait, and motor miles at better than that by several seconds on the Los Angeles saucer track. The new courses will allow 1:20 to the mile. Each will be eight laps to the mile, and lights will be provided for out-of-door night racing, which is possible all Winter.

Four nights of racing will be run on each circuit, the south and the north, but the racing in the north will not be taken up until April or May, when the Winter visitors have moved north from the sunny Southern California clime. The riders now in the East will many of them reach California just about the time this circuit is ready to open.

Princeton's Baseball Coaches.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 20.—Capt. Green of the baseball team has announced that ex-Capt. Arthur Hillebrand has been chosen coach for the baseball team, and that he will arrive here about April 1 to take entire charge of the candidates. Cage practice will begin about Feb. 20, and Catcher William Clarke of the Boston League team will arrive here in March to assist in the preliminary practice. He will remain until April when the team takes its Southern trip. It has also been officially announced that James Robinson will train both the baseball and track teams.

Marcus Daly's Horses Delayed.

The arrival of the stallions from Bitter Root Stud Farm, Hamilton, Mon., owned by the Marcus Daly estate, which was expected yesterday, was delayed by snow and storms in the West. At the Morris Park race track, where the horses are to be quartered until the date of the disposal sale of the Daly breeding establishment, on Jan. 30, it was said that, though the stallions had been started for New York, they would not get in until some time tomorrow. The stallions, eight in number, chief among them Hamburg, were shipped from Montana nearly a month ago, but broke the journey by stopping for a rest near Chicago in Illinois. They had started to complete the trip when the Winter weather delayed them.

BESIEGED IN A CHOP HOUSE.

Former Manager Shuts Himself In His Rooms and Will Not Leave.

According to the story told to Detective Helmke of the West Thirtieth Street Police Station by representatives of the firm of George Farrington & Sons, the owners of Browne's Chop House at Broadway and Thirty-ninth Street, William E. Wunderlich, who was formerly manager of the place, has been living in rooms on the top floor behind barricades, contrary to the wishes of the proprietors, for the past week.

A message was sent to the West Thirtieth Street Police Station asking that a policeman be sent to the chop house last night, and Helmke was sent in response to it. He was told by representatives of the proprietors of the place that he was wanted to dispossess Wunderlich who was ensconced in his rooms on the top floor. Wunderlich, who has been manager of the chop house, went to Europe a short time ago. While he was away he was deposed and a man named Schubert put in his place.

According to the story told to Helmke, Wunderlich came back to his old apartments above the chop house which were fitted up sumptuously and refused to leave them.

He has been there in a state of siege for the past week. Helmke told the new manager of the place that if he could decoy Wunderlich to the ground floor he would eject him, but that he would not go upstairs to do it. Schubert was unable to do this, however, and says that he is going to go to court to have Wunderlich dispossessed to-morrow.

ROYAL GIFT TO J. A. BAILEY.

Francis Joseph Presents a Cigar Case to the Circus Man.

BERLIN, Jan. 20.—It is learned here that Emperor Francis Joseph has presented James A. Bailey, the American circus proprietor, with a gold cigar case set with diamonds, rubies, and sapphires, accompanied by an autograph letter.

AFRAID TO STOP WORK.

A Metropolitan Railway Conductor Taken Away in an Ambulance.

Charles Fisher, twenty-four years old, a Metropolitan Street Railway conductor, was taken from the Sixth Avenue car barns, at Fiftieth Street, last night suffering from an extreme case of pneumonia. His temperature was 105.

Fisher's case is a pathetic one, as he was recently married. He got a position after repeated applications as a conductor. He was first made to spend several days breaking in, like all new men, for which no compensation was given. Then he became "extra man." Gradually he worked up, until he got a "swing run," and finally, after weeks of hard work and strict attention to duty, he got a regular car. It meant a couple of dollars a day for a reasonable number of hours.

When he reported for work yesterday he was ill enough to be sent to bed. His wife had tried to persuade him to remain at home. But fear of displeasing his superiors and the loss of his "regular car" spurred him on, and by pluck he managed to stick out the day.

At 10:30 o'clock last night he left his car after the last trip and staggered over to the starter.

"I'm done up, boss," he said. "I'm sick. I've got an awful headache." He managed to count out his money and sign the reports, and then he fell over.

He was almost unconscious when picked up and raving. It was plain he was very ill, and an ambulance was called from Roosevelt Hospital, to which he was taken.

"That man ought to have been in a hospital two days ago," said the ambulance surgeon. "He has no very great chance now."

In the ambulance Fisher raved and tossed and talked of his wife and of his car.

"I was sick, boss," he pleaded pathetically. "Don't cut me."

"Cut" is the word the men use when they are either dismissed or reduced to a lower rank.

SUFFERING IN CUBA.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, Jan. 20.—This section of the island is now suffering from the severest cold known here for years. Much distress has been caused among the natives, who are entirely without protection from the rigors of the climate. A temperature of 60 degrees is quite unprecedented. Many children are without suitable clothing and are very badly off.

A telephonic message from the Guamas Mine, forty miles west of Santiago, reports snow on the summit of Mount Torquino, at an altitude of 8,000 feet. Telegraphic reports from the north coast say that a severe norther is raging and that shipping is delayed.

536-Mile Trip in an Automobile.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 20.—Hiram Percy Maxim of this city started with a gasoline automobile about 6 o'clock yesterday morning on a series of continuous trips between here and Springfield, and about 10 o'clock to-night the tenth consecutive round trip was completed. The engine has not stopped once in all the time. In 40½ hours 536 miles were made.

Referees' Notices.

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF NEW YORK. —TITLE GUARANTEE & TRUST COMPANY and another, plaintiffs, against DOROTHEA WEIBEL et al., defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action, and bearing date the 24th day of December, 1900, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 21st day of January, 1901, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Samuel Goldsticker, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All that plot of land in the City and County of New York, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point in the northerly side of One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street, distant four hundred and thirty-eighth feet easterly from the intersection of the northerly side of One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street and the easterly side of Seventh Avenue; and running thence easterly along the northerly side of One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street, one hundred and eighty-seven feet; thence northerly, parallel with Seventh Avenue, one hundred and ninety-nine feet ten inches to the southerly side of One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Street; thence westerly, along the southerly side of One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Street, one hundred and eighty-seven feet; and thence southerly, again parallel with Seventh Avenue, one hundred and ninety-nine feet ten inches to the northerly side of One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street at the point of beginning, together with the buildings to be erected thereon.

Subject to a certain mortgage for one hundred and five thousand dollars and interest, now a lien on said premises, made by said Dorothea Weibel to the said Title Guarantee & Trust Company, bearing date the thirtieth day of April, one thousand nine hundred, and recorded in said Register's Office in Section 7, Liber 113 of Mortgages, Page 292.

Subject also to a certain party-wall agreement contained in instrument recorded in said Register's Office in Section 7, Liber 81 of Conveyances, Page 288, and to covenants against nuisances contained in various deeds.

Dated New York, December 27th, 1900.

LEOPOLD WALLACH, Referee.

WILLIAM H. STOCKWELL, Attorney for Plaintiffs, 146 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, New York City.

The following is a diagram of the property to be sold: Its street numbers are 105 to 117 (inclusive). West One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street and 104 to 116 (inclusive) West One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Street:

Decisions Handed Down.

From The Topeka (Kan.) Capital.

Some days ago a man from an Eastern Kansas town, well acquainted with Topeka, was showing a couple of friends through the State House. They wanted to see the Supreme Court rooms. He thought he would have a little fun with them, and started on a climb for the dome. Well," remarked one of them, as he stopped on the 457th step to puff a while, "I never understood until right now why it is customary to speak of decisions being 'handed down' by the Supreme Court."

Referees' Notices.

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF NEW YORK. —THE METROPOLITAN IMPROVEMENT COMPANY, Plaintiff, against PHILIP HAUSEMAN and others, Defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale duly made and entered in the above-entitled action, bearing date the tenth day of January, 1901, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, at No. 111 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City and State of New York, on the sixth day of February, 1901, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by William M. Ryan, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All that certain piece or parcel of land situate, lying, and being in the Borough of Manhattan, in the City and State of New York, and bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point on the southerly side of Eighty-second Street distant one hundred and two feet westerly from the corner formed by the intersection of the southerly side of Eighty-second Street with the westerly side of Broadway, lately known as the Boulevard, and running thence southerly at right angles to Eighty-second Street ninety feet and four inches; thence westerly and parallel with Eighty-second street twenty-seven feet and five inches; thence again southerly at right angles to Eighty-second Street seven feet and ten inches to the middle line of the block between Eighty-first and Eighty-second Streets; thence westerly along said middle line of the block twenty-seven feet and seven inches; thence northerly at right angles to Eighty-second Street one hundred and two feet and two inches to the southerly side of said street, and thence easterly along the southerly side of Eighty-second Street fifty-five feet to the point or place of beginning.—Dated New York, January 14th, 1901.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL R. R. CO.
Public notice is hereby given that a special meeting of the stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad Company will be held at the Company's Office in Chicago, Illinois, on Saturday, January 26, 1901, at 12 o'clock in the forenoon, for the purpose of acting on these five propositions and transacting such other business as may, in connection therewith, come before the meeting.
FIRST—That in order to provide necessary moneys for the purchase of additional cars and locomotive engines needed for the accommodation of the growing traffic on the Company's lines of railway; the construction of additional second tracks, side tracks, and station and terminal facilities; the reduction of grades; the elimination of grade crossings at different places along said railway lines, and other improvements of a permanent character, some of which purchases, additions and improvements have already been undertaken, and for other corporate purposes, the capital stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company be increased by an issue of 60,000 new shares of $100 each, from 500,000 shares to 650,000 shares of $100 each, thus making the whole capital stock of the Company $66,000,000.
SECOND—That each shareholder shall have the privilege of subscribing at par on or before March 4, 1901, for one share of such new stock, for every ten shares of stock registered in his name on the transfer books of the Company at the close of business on December 26, 1900, and for fractions of shares in like proportion—payment for the new stock to be made in full at the Company's office in the City of New York, on or before Monday, March 4, 1901.
THIRD—That stockholders entitled to subscribe for fractions of shares shall, upon payment therefor, receive scrip convertible into full-paid stock when presented in sums of $100 or multiples thereof, but such scrip shall not draw dividends.
FOURTH—That the shares, or fractions of shares, of the new issue, if any, not subscribed and paid for on or before March 4, 1901, may be disposed of by the Board of Directors at such price, or prices, not less than par, as may be approved by them.
FIFTH—That the new shares shall be entitled to participate in all dividends which may be declared payable after March 4, 1901.
For the purposes of this meeting, the stock transfer books will be closed at 3 P. M. on Thursday, December 20, 1900, and remain closed until the morning of Monday, January 7, 1901.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

After more than a week of almost continued reaction, the stock market will open to-day for business in a much stronger position, technically, than at any time since election. Weakly margined accounts and those built on the "pyramiding" system no longer threaten. In the week just past timid as well as financially weak speculators have tumbled out their stocks in large volume, while at the same time overventuresome traders have sold stocks short aggressively—short selling indeed being largely in evidence even at the low figures of Saturday. All the while the larger interests, undoubtedly welcoming the reaction, were buyers of the securities so sold; buyers, because the vast projects, including railroad concentration of interests, which they have in mind, are yet only partially completed. More stocks were needed for the purposes in hand; probably they have now been acquired. Under the circumstances, a sharp upward movement in prices may come to pass now at any time; though perhaps in the event of unfavorable foreign developments temporary recessions may not be escaped.

The only unfavorable feature at home is in the steel and iron trades, where undeniably conditions are not as good or as harmonious as they might be. It is not altogether a hopeful sign when palpable stock market, stock rigging stories must needs be invented in order to bolster up stocks.

Money conditions continue essentially favorable. Expert opinion is that, gold exports or not, even lower rates both for time and call money will rule for some time to come.

Argentine Wheat Crop.

BUENOS AYRES, Jan. 20.—The Argentine wheat crop, it is estimated, will yield 2,600,000 tons.

Coopers' Union Against the Brewers.

The Coopers' Union has started an agitation against a bill which the Brewers' Association has introduced in the National Senate to do away with the issuing of separate revenue stamps for one-sixth, one-eighth, and one-quarter barrels of beer. The association says the multiplication of sizes leads to unnecessary trouble and expense, which would be avoided if only barrels and half-barrels were sold. The coopers say that if the other sizes were done away with it would throw many hundreds of coopers out of work. The Central Federated Union at the request of the coopers yesterday instructed its Secretary to write to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House protesting against the bill.

Labor Men and Mr. Coler.

A letter has been received from Controller Coler in reply to a request from the Central Federated Union, that it be allowed to employ outside counsel to assist the Corporation Counsel to defend the prevailing rate of wages law, which is to be tested by the contractors in the courts. The Controller said he had referred the matter to the Corporation Counsel. At the meeting of the union yesterday, Delegate O'Brien said it took three weeks to bring this reply from Mr. Coler. The Secretary was instructed to write to Mr. Coler protesting against this delay, and also to write to the Corporation Counsel, asking him to hurry up his reply.

School Teachers and Trades Unions.

The Central Federated Union passed a resolution yesterday instructing the Secretary to write to the Charter Revision Commission asking that labor unions be exempted from the clause prohibiting school teachers among other city employes from being members of political or similar organizations or trades unions. The resolution was passed on hearing the report of William J. O'Brien of the Law and Legislation Committee, who had been instructed last week to investigate that part of the charter. He reported that if this provision became part of the city charter school teachers would be prevented from organizing if they wished to do so.

Referees' Notices.

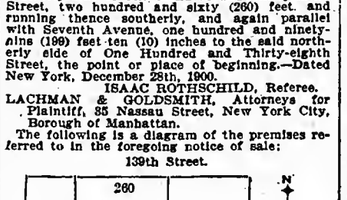
SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW York, County of New York, place of trial.—CENTRAL REALTY BOND AND TRUST COMPANY, plaintiff, against DOROTHEA WEIBEL and others, defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action, bearing date the 14th day of December, 1900, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, in the City of New York, Borough of Manhattan, on the 24th day of January, 1901, at twelve o'clock noon on that day, by Philip A. Smyth, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All those certain lots, pieces, or parcels of land, situate, lying, and being in the City of New York, Borough of Manhattan, and bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point on the northerly side of One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street, distant one hundred and seventy-eight (178) feet easterly from the corner formed by the intersection of the northerly side of One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street with the easterly side of Seventh Avenue; running thence easterly and along said northerly side of One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street two hundred and sixty (260) feet; running thence northerly, parallel with Seventh Avenue, one hundred and ninety-nine (199) feet ten (10) inches to the southerly side of One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Street; running thence westerly and along said southerly side of One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Street, two hundred and sixty (260) feet, and running thence southerly, and again parallel with Seventh Avenue, one hundred and ninety-nine (199) feet ten (10) inches to the said northerly side of One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street, the point or place of beginning.—Dated New York, December 28th, 1900.

ISAAC ROTHSCHILD, Referee.
LACHMAN & GOLDSMITH, Attorneys for Plaintiff, 35 Nassau Street, New York City, Borough of Manhattan.

The following is a diagram of the premises referred to in the foregoing notice of sale:



The approximate amount of the lien or charge, to satisfy which the above-described property is to be sold, is $199,791.84, with interest thereon from December 5th, 1900, together with costs and allowance, amounting to $466.10, with interest thereon from the 14th day of December, 1900, together with the expenses of sale. The approximate amount of the taxes and water rents is $3,149.23, with interest, such amount to be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money, or paid by the referee.

The premises will be sold subject to a prior mortgage, now overdue, made to secure the sum of $145,600.00, together with interest thereon from May 9th, 1900, at the rate of 6% per annum, accrued and to accrue up to the time of the delivery of the referee's deed herein; subject also to a certain party wall agreement, made between the said Dorothea Weibel and one Gustave L. Morgenthau, dated October 30th, 1899, and recorded in the office of the Register of the County of New York, on the said day in Section 7, Liber 61 of Conveyances, Page 291, and indexed under Block No. 2,007 on the land map of the City of New York, which party wall agreement affects the easterly wall of the most easterly of the buildings erected upon the mortgaged premises and fronting upon One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Street, and the westerly wall of the most easterly of said buildings, fronting upon One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street; subject also to another party wall agreement made between the same parties, dated June 26th, 1899, and recorded in the office of the Register of the County of New York, on July 7th, 1899, in Section 7, Liber 58 of Conveyances, Page 156, and indexed under block No. 2,007 on the land map of the City of New York, which agreement affects the westerly wall of the most westerly of said buildings, fronting upon One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Street, and the westerly wall of the most westerly of said buildings fronting upon One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street; subject also to certain restrictions and covenants contained in a deed made by said Gustave L. Morgenthau and Lulie R., his wife, to Dorothea Weibel, dated October 26th, 1899, and recorded in the office of the Register of the County of New York, October 30th, 1899, in Section 7, Liber 62 of Conveyances, Page 240, and indexed under block No. 2,007 on the land map of the City of New York; subject also to certain monthly tenancies.—Dated New York, December 28th, 1900.

OWNERS OF PROPERTY in the Bedford-Stuyvesant district will confer a favor by letting me know early in the Spring their offerings for rent.

The renting inquiry begins on Lincoln's Birthday, (February 12th,) and is fairly under way by Washington's Birthday.

This activity lasts until about March 15th, falling off rapidly thereafter.

Don't wait till the market is over before asking your tenants their intentions. Have it settled with them all the first week of February—or before if you can.

The best business people are early in the field for homes. That's the kind you want for tenants, and will get if you follow my advice.

TELLS OF ANARCHIST PLOT

A Greek Says that He Was Selected to Kill a Man.

SOME PROMINENT AMERICAN

His Heart Failed Him and He Refused to Do It, Whereupon He Was Stabbed.

YONKERS, N. Y., Jan. 20.—The complainant in an assault case which came before City Judge Kellogg this morning told a somewhat startling tale, and would have told more had the Court not cut him short and turned him over to the police, that they might obtain the details and work upon the case. It was the story of a man who claimed he had been selected to murder some prominent American and had journeyed all the way from Greece at the bidding of his superiors, who had backed out, and whom a misdirected knife thrust saved from the penalty of his weak heart.

The man is Elias Masuras, who has been living on Clinton Street, this city, for a short time. He has a bad stab wound over the left eye. His story of the wound is that the knife was intended to enter his eye and pierce his brain, but that it was driven too high, and only struck the frontal bone and slid along, causing the gash, which, although severe, is not serious.

Masuras entered the police station late last night and asked Lieut. Lent, who was on duty at the desk, to arrest the man who had assaulted him. At that time Masuras's face was covered with blood, which was still flowing through a bandage which had been wound about his head. He was taken before Justice Kellogg and named the men who he claimed had assaulted him. As a result the Justice issued three warrants. During the night James Kipataukas, another Greek, living at 3 Clinton Street, was arrested. The other two men for whom warrants were issued were not found. The prisoner was arraigned this morning and Masuras was placed upon the stand as a witness.

Up to that time the story, as he claims it to be, had not developed. On the stand, when Masuras was told to tell the story of what led up to the assault upon him, he said that in Greece he had been a member of an Anarchist society. Some time ago it fell to his lot to kill a public man in the United States, and he was ordered to come to this country and place himself under the orders of the American branch of the society. He never heard the name of the man whom he was to murder, and understood that, as in other cases, the man who was to be the victim was to be selected after his arrival in this country. After reaching America Masuras, according to his own story, came to Yonkers and affiliated himself with a branch of the organization in this city and one in New York, but became frightened, and finally drew out and refused to carry out the mission entrusted to him.

He then bought out a peanut stand, and also peddled peanuts about this city. From the time he drew out he claims he was annoyed and threatened by the members of the society. He remained firm in his determination not to obey the order given him, and yesterday six of the men came here and for a time coaxed him to return to the society, and when he still refused, began to threaten him. He was still firm, and then one of the six men, which one he could not say, attempted to drive a knife into his left eye. The blow was aimed too high, with the result already told.

Masuras was apparently willing to go on and tell more about the society, but Judge Kellogg adjourned the hearing and committed the prisoner to jail pending further examination. Masuras was taken in hand by the police, and as a result five more warrants were issued, and during the day Joseph Kipataukas of 3 Clinton Street, a brother of the first prisoner, and Frank Hestaigus of East Ninety-third Street, New York City, were arrested by the Yonkers police.

One other Yonkers man and two New Yorkers are named in the other warrants, and the police are searching for them. The local police say the Yonkers man has not escaped, and that he is in hiding here and they are certain to take him. The police refuse to go further into details, but assert that they believe the story told by Masuras, and the affair has led them upon an Anarchist band of a dangerous character.

The police say to make public at this time all they learned from Masuras might defeat the ends of justice. He is being closely guarded, and will not be allowed to get away should he desire to do so. The guard has also to see that he is not molested or killed by any of the alleged Anarchists.

DRIVER DEFIES A POLICEMAN.

Is Arrested for Reckless Driving After a Lively Chase.

Herman Hauser, twenty-four years old, of 217 West One Hundred and Fifteenth Street, driving a team attached to a two-seated runabout at Broadway and One Hundred and Fifth Street yesterday afternoon, declined to stop when commanded by Bicycle Policeman John Brennan.

"You've been driving twelve miles an hour," said the policeman when he overhauled Hauser after a lively chase.

"I've asked these people out for a time and they're going to get it," replied Hauser, pointing to the two women and a man in the other seats.

Hauser was taken to the West One Hundredth Street Station. He was charged with reckless driving and having a concealed weapon. A revolver had been found in his pocket by the doorman. The other man drove the women home.

PRISONER WANTED AS A WITNESS.

Fasinello, Held on Larceny Charge, May Testify in Priori Case.

According to Assistant District Attorney James Brande, Peter Fasinello of 43 Thompson Street, who was arraigned with Joseph Parinegeani of 116 Sullivan Street in the Centre Street Police Court yesterday morning, charged with having stolen fifteen pounds of Sumatra tobacco from Harris Silver, a cigar manufacturer of 100 Rivington Street, will be wanted in Albany to-day as a witness in the case of Lorenzo Priori, the murderer, to whom a reprieve of twenty days has been granted by the Governor. The Assistant District Attorney asked for this reason that Fasinello might be either released or given into the custody of an officer. It is said that Fasinello knows something of the disposition of the pistol with which the murder for which Priori was sentenced to be executed was committed.

Magistrate Mayo committed both prisoners to the Tombs in $1,000 bail, but said that he would take bail for Fasinello at his house at any time in order to help the District Attorney.

MAGISTRATE'S PLEA FOR MERCY

Mr. Crane Saves Two Boys from Prison and Sends Them to the House of Refuge.

"It is a duty of a Magistrate to save and not make criminals," said Magistrate Crane at Yorkville Court yesterday, when by his convincing arguments he induced a complainant to have mercy on two boys.

These boys were William Cohen, seventeen years old, of 328 East Eighth Street, and Morris Kronowitz, sixteen years old, of 21 Clinton Street. They had been arrested by Detective Smith of the East Twenty-second Street Station on Saturday on a charge of attempting to pass a forged check at the Fifth National Bank. The check was for $25, made payable to the order of B. Rosenberg, and bore the forged signatures of A. Krawatz and J. Katz, members of the hat manufacturing firm of Demmerle & Co., 46 West Fourth Street.

A few minutes before the closing of the bank on Saturday Kronowitz, one of the prisoners, stepped up to the paying teller's window and presented the forged check. Thomas W. Smith, the teller, saw at a glance that it was a forgery, and had the lads arrested.

Mr. Krawatz, one of the men whose name had been forged to the check, and Mr. Smith, the paying teller, were in court yesterday to press the complaint of forgery against the two prisoners.

When the case was called, Magistrate Crane turned to the prisoners and asked, "How old are you?"

Kronowitz responded: "I am sixteen years. Please let me go home."

Cohen said: "I am seventeen years old. I used to work for Mr. Krawatz."

In answer to further questions they said that they never had been arrested before and were the sole support of their parents.

"I am willing to apologize to Mr. Krawatz," said the Cohen boy.

"Boys, this is no case where an apology will answer," said the Magistrate. "You have both committed a crime, and can be sent to prison. I am here as a Magistrate to see that the law is obeyed, but I think it is always good to temper justice with mercy. It is a hard thing for me to send you to prison, and stamp you as criminals, but—"

"What can be done to them so that they will realize their offense?" interposed the paying teller, who had been nodding approvingly at the remarks of the Magistrate.

"If this charge of forgery is withdrawn," answered Mr. Crane, "I can send them to a reformatory. That will save them the stamp of being criminals and not mar their future lives."

"I am willing to withdraw my complaint, then," said Krawatz. "Judge, I leave the boys in your hands."

"It is always a good thing to lend a helping hand," remarked the Magistrate. "These boys have undoubtedly been tempted. There is so much temptation to do wrong in this city. I have been a boy myself, and I know what temptation is. Keeping the boys out of prison and saving them the stamp of being criminals not alone saves these boys, but also their families. There is enough hardness in this world, so let us be charitable."

Krawatz bowed as the Magistrate concluded, and said, "Judge, you have the right kind of heart."

"Yes," said Mr. Smith, the paying teller, "the Judge took a right view of the matter. It might have marred the lives of these boys had they been sent to prison."

Cohen and Kronowitz were then formally committed to the House of Refuge, where they will have an opportunity to reform.

HAD AN AVERSION TO HIGH HATS.

It Impelled Walter Niepoth to Assault Passers-by Who Wore Them.

"It's one on me, Judge; I was drunk last night, I guess," said Walter Niepoth, a well-dressed young man, who refused to give his address, when fined $10 for disorderly conduct by Magistrate Hogan in the West Side Police Court yesterday morning.

Policeman Steuel of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, said he first observed the prisoner at Broadway and Forty-second Street shortly after midnight yesterday morning, in company with a woman. Suddenly Niepoth left the woman, ran across Seventh Avenue, and assaulted a corpulent individual who was in evening clothes and wore an opera hat and cape overcoat. The policeman seized Niepoth, but the stranger refused to make a complaint against him, and he was allowed to go. Two other men wearing high hats happened along shortly afterward, however, and were also assaulted by Niepoth.

Niepoth's explanation of his conduct when he was locked up was that he had an unconquerable aversion to high hats. He refused to give his address, saying he did not wish to disgrace his family. A friend paid his fine.

AMERICAN WARES IN GERMANY.

What a Consul Says About Fountain Pens and Other Things.

A promising market for fountain pens, safes, and various kinds of American office furniture is mentioned in a report of the American Consul at Mannheim, H. W. Harris. At the Heidelberg University, for instance, where there are 1,500 students, only a small number of fountain pens are in use, and few, if any, are offered for sale. The students content themselves with the old-fashioned method of carrying ink in bottles from and to their lectures. The Consul says that there, as also in Mannheim and other German cities where fountain pens are rarely seen, the lowest-priced American pens should find a ready market.

The attention of American manufacturers has been called to the market for safes. A comparatively small number of safes are to be found in the cities. Those in use are for the most part crude-looking affairs, with old-style locks. German offices are rapidly adopting modern office furniture, and the report advises the possibility of finding ready sale for American safes, desks, typewriters, file cases, cash registers, &c.

Improved devices for registering the attendance of employes are being introduced to some extent, though many factories still do not employ them. So far as Mr. Harris could learn, the various devices in use in the United States for registering the whereabouts of employes at work as watchmen employed in factories at night are not used there.

RUNAWAY WRECKS DRUG STORE

Horse Enters the Place and Kicks in the Side of the Telephone Booth.

The drug store of J. L. House, at Albany Avenue and St. Mark's Avenue, Brooklyn, is at present a wreck, as the result of a runaway. Opposite the drug store, on Albany Avenue, is the St. John's Roman Catholic Home for Boys. This is surrounded by grounds and situated on the top of a little hill. On Saturday afternoon John Owens, a driver, was unloading a can of milk from a wagon belonging to the home, when the horse took fright and ran away. It ran down the hill, across the street, and through the door of the drug store. There it was held fast by the wagon, which stuck in the door. The wagon hit the door with such force that the plate glass windows on both sides of it were shattered.

Inside the store were House, his clerk, and a customer, who was in the telephone booth. The horse struck the telephone booth with its fore legs, smashing in the side, but did not hurt its occupant. Then it overturned the counter, smashed the soda water fountain, and upset a number of bottles on the floor. It had just succeeded in kicking several holes in the flooring, when House and his assistant recovered from their fright sufficiently to seize its head and make an attempt to quiet it.

Owens, the driver, arrived at this time and succeeded in soothing the horse. He was unable to back it out of the store, however, until several men had worked for some time extricating the wagon from the door in which it was wedged.

House was unable to open his store yesterday. He estimates the value of the property destroyed as between $700 and $800.

FOUND FROZEN TO DEATH.

Body of G. W. McGinnes, a Retired Merchant, Lay in His Garden.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 20.—George W. McGinnes, a wealthy retired merchant of this place, was found frozen to death in the garden of his home this morning. He was eighty years old. For several years his mind had been deranged.

Mr. McGinnes crept out of his bedroom window last night, and, after falling ten feet from the roof of the veranda, crawled to the rear of the garden, where his body was found. An only son, Walter, survives him.

POLICE COURT LIKE AN ICEBOX.

Ink Freezes Over and Magistrate, Lawyers, and Prisoners Shiver.

Owing to some trouble with the heating arrangements of the Criminal Court Building, the Centre Street Police Court, which was the only court in the building open yesterday, presented a curious appearance when it was opened for business. The windows were covered with a thick coating of ice, the ink in the ink wells was partially frozen, and Magistrate, lawyers, and prisoners were shivering and blue with the cold.

Magistrate Mayo, after sentencing the first of a line of blue-lipped prisoners to two days in the Tombs, hurried to his private room, and returned a few moments later dressed as if for a sleigh ride. By that time the Court Clerk and the stenographer had fled to another part of the building to warm themselves over a radiator, and it was some time before they could be found and brought back again to their official duties. It was not until the court had been open for over an hour that the steam radiators began to give out any warmth at all.

Engineer Watson, who has charge of the heating arrangements of the Criminal Court Building, said that the low temperature in the Police Court was due to the fact that he had been supplied with a kind of coal which burned out faster than he expected.

Nurse Accused of Larceny.

A man said to be Thomas Donahoe, thirty-seven years old, a former nurse in St. Mary's Hospital, Brooklyn, and to have served one term in the Kings County Penitentiary, was arrested at the Manhattan end of the Brooklyn Bridge last night by Detective Charles Farley of the Central Office. J. B. Carbury, a broker at 320 Produce Exchange, and a millionaire, whose home is in Westfield, N. J., was ill nine months ago. Donahoe was the nurse who attended him. One day Donahoe left abruptly. That same day $500 worth of jewels was missed from Mr. Carbury's room. The millionaire asked Capt. McClusky to try to find Donahoe and see if he knew where the jewels had gone. Farley was put on the case. It is thought Donahoe will be able to explain this morning. If satisfactory, his explanation may secure his release.

Must Explain His Wife's Injuries.

John Lemon of 15 East One Hundred and Twelfth Street was arrested by Detective Read of the East One Hundred and Fourth Street Police Station last night on a charge of being a suspicious person. The police say they expect him to explain how his wife, who is in a serious condition in the Harlem Hospital, received the cuts and bruises with which her body is covered. Mrs. Lemon has three children. On Saturday afternoon they went to Mrs. Burke, who lives next door, and told her that their mother was sick. Mrs. Burke found Mrs. Lemon on a bed, unconscious and bleeding from several cuts on her face. She was taken to Harlem Hospital, and did not recover consciousness until yesterday. She admitted to the doctors that she had quarreled with her husband on Saturday.

Hanged Himself to a Gas Jet.

George Ledermann, a German carpenter, hanged himself in his room, at 537 East Eighty-second Street, yesterday morning. He was seventy-two years old. Since his wife died, a year ago, he had made his home with his son Ernest and the latter's wife. His son found his body hanging from the gas jet when he went to awaken him. The old man had been despondent since the death of his wife.

Another Smallpox Case.

James Johnson, twenty-four years old, a negro, of 220 West Sixty-third Street, was taken from his home last night to the Reception Hospital by Health Department officials. He is said to be a smallpox patient.

Broadway Tabernacle Anniversary.

The sixtieth anniversary celebration of the Broadway Tabernacle, which began on Wednesday, was continued yesterday. The church, since Friday, had been gorgeously decorated with United States flags and other banners and gilded eagles. In the morning the pastor, the Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, preached a historical sermon dealing with the growth of the city for the past three-quarters of a century. There was a Bible school celebration in the afternoon, and in the evening a meeting of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, after which followed a fellowship meeting. During the latter addresses were delivered by various clergymen from different parts of the city.

ON THE LONDON EXCHANGE.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—On the Stock Exchange last week prices were very irregular. Consols closed at 96½, this being lower than they had been since 1802. Americans were unsettled and distinctly lower, owing to realizations, but they closed above the worst figures. St. Paul and Denver preferred fell 1 point; Erie first, Northern Pacific, and Wabash, ¾; Norfolk and Southern Pacific, ⅝, and the others from ¼ to ½, except Reading first, which rose ½, and Union Pacific, which rose ⅜. Mines, while still depressed, showed signs of recovery Saturday, on the decision to wind up, voluntarily, the affairs of the London and Globe Finance Corporation, Limited. Rands were ⅝ better.

OUR LONDON CABLE.

A SLOUGH OF CHEAP CREDITS

The Five Per Cent. Bank Rate a Sort of Market Bogy—Futility of Any Attempt to Establish a Higher Rate than the Present—Effect of the Government's War Expense Policy—American Railways.

Cable Correspondence.

Copyright, 1901, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Our money market still wallows in the slough of cheap credits, and nothing the Bank of England can do lifts it for more than an hour or two. Last Wednesday the Stock Exchange payments produced a momentary shortage, and about £2,000,000 was borrowed at the Bank for three or four days at 5½ per cent. On Friday most of this money was paid back, and the market rate for seven-day loans lay undisturbed at 3 per cent.

This is what I have always insisted must be the outcome of any effort effectively to establish a higher bank rate in the existing circumstances. The 5 per cent. rate has merely acted like a sort of market bogy turning a French check or two in our favor, but not raising it far enough to prevent France from buying all the parcels of gold that come into our open market. Equally powerless has it hitherto been to lift the New York rate to a figure causing gold to leave them for London. In reality the open market discount rate is weaker now than it was before the bank rate went up. On Friday short remitted bills were discounted at one-sixteenth under 4 per cent., and such paper at all dates seldom cost beyond 4⅛ per cent. to melt.

The cause of all this I need hardly reiterate. It lies in the foolish and short-sighted fashion in which the Government is still providing for war expenses. Every estimate put before the country has been falsified. Our expenditure is now on a higher scale than it was when Parliament met in December, and all the Government can do is to borrow from the Bank. A week ago its floating obligations thereon were again £900,000 up, and about £12,500,000. The credit thus created and paid out inevitably gluts the short-loan market and drags discount down, all the more effectively because many branches of our trade are now slack.

As for our stock markets, they just stagger along acutely suffering still from the effects of the deadly London and Globe blow. We were timid over the settlement last week. There were no further failures, but the place was like a hospital, as one member said to me, with hundreds dismasted and limping.

I am afraid there is more trouble to come, and our railway dividends now being declared are not of a quality to inspire buying. Our small array of bears have dropped considerable money lately over short sales in your shares, but speculation of that kind is still of an insufficient magnitude to hurt the market much, and bold sellers continue to hope for a recoil. I cannot quite see how it is to be brought about while credit is so cheap with you, but the wahbly aspect of your market these last few days has anew stimulated selling for a fall here.

Along with that, however, old holdings continue to be parted with for money. Operators on your side, therefore, must not count upon any effective support from us in sustaining quotations. Our short account is still altogether too meagre to be of the least value in helping to stem the backward wishes of Wall Street.

On the Continent the markets are fully as inert as they are here. The German Boerses cannot get the means to play with, and both these and the French are still crippled by their industrial commitments, many of which represent securities of companies in a moribund condition.

Paris, too, is sick over its South African mines and drops them in upon London whenever it gets encouragement from a manipulated rise. Nowhere is there any elasticity or hopefulness, however much The Bourse Chronicle may talk "easy times just about to come."

THE MANCHESTER MARKET.

MANCHESTER, Jan. 20.—The market last week was largely under the influence of the lower prices of cotton, and many manufacturers accepted lower offers. There was much talk of the China business done, but it could not be located.

The statement that there have been large shipments of stored goods of that market seems to be exaggerated. The business with Japan is beginning to revive, and Java is sending orders for high-priced fancies at last year's prices. For low-price prints India offers frequently, and some business is reported in other Eastern markets. The home trade also is looking up, but the news from South Africa has checked the Cape buyers. Many spinners having booked large contracts for yarns, they display considerable firmness.

Export yarns were inactive last week, but had a better tone. There were moderate sales reported of both mule and water twist for India.

GERMAN MONEY AND TRADE.

BERLIN, Jan. 20.—Business on the Boerse during the week was stagnant, but prices were fairly firm. Outsiders showed less inclination to sell shares, and the volume of business sunk to low proportions. The Boerse failed to respond to the violent fluctuations in New York, which were the cause here of renewed reserve regarding American railroads, of which the German holding has lessened. The prices on the Boerse yesterday reacted in a more marked manner upon the receipt of New York's lower prices. Iron and coal shares, which were well maintained all week, lost generally yesterday. Northern Pacific common has been rather heavily sold. The short market shows increasing interest in obligations of Austrian, Russian, and Italian railroads. Swiss railways continue active and rising. Germany selling and Switzerland buying. The excellent annual report of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company has failed to affect Lloyd shares, because it is believed that a new issue soon will be necessary. Bremen continues selling Lloyd shares here largely. Domestic Government loans are strong.

The Bavarian loan was a great success, and the oversubscriptions have been so heavy that the allotments will be very small as compared with the offers. The Saxon loan Tuesday is expected to be heavily subscribed for. The price of Saxon 3s rose during the week above the subscription price of the loan.

The German market is beginning to show an interest in foreign loans. The Frankfurter Zeitung, which is regarded as a financial authority, reports that Roumania is taking steps to negotiate a loan in Berlin, and that paper also expects that the plan for the conversion and consolidation of the Argentine public debt on a 4 per cent. basis will ripen soon and that German capital will participate largely therein. German municipal and industrial loans continue coming on the market. The great Berlin street railroads will increase their capital 17,000,000 marks.

The plethora of money has grown more marked. Private loans have declined to 3½ and calls are offered at 2¼. The plethora is already commented upon as an unfavorable sign, denoting stagnation in manufactures, trade, and industry. The demand for money grows less. The Reichsbank statement is considered satisfactory, but it is not believed the bank will reduce the rate of discount before the Bank of England makes a reduction. Foreign exchange has changed more favorably for Germany, whose gold situation is considered strong.

Iron prices continue falling. English Pig No. 3 was offered on the Dusseldorf Boerse this week at 68 marks, against 80 marks Jan. 8. German iron also fell heavily.

In the competition for rails for the Dutch railroads the German mills underbid the Belgian mills 7 francs. The German piping syndicate has increased its rebates on gas pipes 5 marks per ton.

The Vulkan Shipbuilding Company of Bremen has declared a 5 per cent. dividend upon its enlarged capital.

The receipts of the German railroads for December last were 128,500,000 marks, an increase of 5,000,000 marks.

Bank of Spain's Report.

MADRID, Jan. 20.—The report of the Bank of Spain for the week ended yesterday shows the following: Gold in hand, no change; silver in hand, increase, 2,314,000 pesetas; notes in circulation, increase, 4,162,000 pesetas.

QUEEN VICTORIA RALLIES SLIGHTLY

But There Is Said to be No Hope of Her Recovery.

THE END EXPECTED SOON

It May Be a Matter of Days, Perhaps Only of Hours.

A RETURN OF CONSCIOUSNESS

Improved Condition of Her Majesty, Who Was Kept Alive by Stimulants on Sunday Night, Astounded Physicians.

COWES, Isle of Wight, Jan. 22.—Another day has passed without any great change in the condition of Queen Victoria. The slight improvement mentioned in the official bulletins merely indicates a postponement of the inevitable. Paralysis is spreading to vital parts. The end may be a matter of days or only of hours; but the members of the royal family who are now dragging out a weary visit at Osborne House know that the death of her Majesty is merely a question of a short time.

One account says the Queen is expected to live until Thursday morning, unless unexpected complications occur.

The most noticeable feature of yesterday was the satisfactory portion of the time the Queen spent in consciousness, which she regained early in the afternoon and still retained at 10 P. M. At that hour she had not seen Emperor William, local rumors to the contrary notwithstanding. Royalty at Osborne thus had a chance to recuperate from the terrible ordeal undergone during the early hours of Monday.

It is stated that the members of the royal family were called to a room adjoining the Queen's bedchamber no less than four times yesterday morning, and were kept in momentary expectation of being summoned to witness the end up to 5:30 o'clock. Her Majesty's physicians then had only a vestige of hope that they would be able to keep the Queen's feeble life in existence until the Prince of Wales arrived.

To secure this result they resorted to the frequent use of brandy and champagne. These stimulants, used to an extent which only the greatest emergency justified, worked their process, and when the Prince of Wales and Emperor William entered the castle grounds at 11:30 A. M. they were told that the Queen was a trifle better than had been expected.

The desperate remedies employed on Monday morning to enable her Majesty to live until her eldest son's arrival will not be used again to the same extent, for the doctors are fearful that the remedy might be almost worse than the disease. They trust to prolong her life by a moderate application of stimulants, combined with as much nourishment as can be assimilated. Such expedients as were employed during Sunday evening and Monday morning are not considered justifiable.

QUEEN ASKS FOR BROTH.

The Queen's rally astonished no one more than her physicians, and when, at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, they heard her ask for chicken broth, their amazement almost equaled their delight. Privately, however, they build no false hopes upon these fading signs of what has been one of the strongest constitutions with which a woman was ever endowed.

Despite the favorable afternoon, the doctors dreaded greatly the period between 6 o'clock and midnight. When that was safely passed they seemed hopeful of her Majesty living at least through another day, although the memory of the previous night's relapse kept their anxiety at high tension.

Another of the Queen's physicians, Sir Thomas Barlow, reached Osborne House yesterday morning, a little before the carriages dashed up bearing Emperor William, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, and the Duke and Duchess of Connaught. Sir Thomas is an authority on cerebral affections, and doubtless his diagnosis led to the inclusion in the noon bulletin of the explanation of references previously made to "symptoms," the nature of which were not specified.

The news of the death, when it occurs, is likely to be publicly announced in London before it is announced here, as, according to present arrangements, the first telegram is to be sent to the Lord Mayor of London.

There is an enormous telegraphic staff at Cowes, and additional facilities were installed yesterday at Osborne.

Already the villagers are bewailing the fate that is likely to befall Cowes, for it is known that the Prince of Wales will probably never make Osborne House a place of residence.

There is an entire absence of local excitement. The town has settled down in patience and sadness to await the inevitable.

OSBORNE HOUSE PACKED.

The palace is packed. There is scarcely room for the Emperor of Germany and his staff. The accommodations are so severely taxed that the Battenberg children slept to-night at Viscount Gort's residence, East Cowes Castle, and the royal yachts at Cowes are being fitted up for the accommodation of visitors.

After luncheon at the castle the Prince of Wales, Emperor William, and the Duke of Connaught strolled around the grounds and visited the local Sailor's Home. The Bishop of Winchester, who has been at Osborne since Saturday, visited the rector of Whippingham. Meanwhile most of the ladies at Osborne House snatched a few hours of sleep.

Then a dull evening dragged into night, and the uneasy sleepers, around whose royal home the wind howled pitilessly, got what rest they could in the intervals of a vigil which the whole world was keeping in company with them.

THE BULLETINS.

COWES, Isle of Wight, Jan. 22.—The following bulletin was issued at Osborne House at 11 o'clock yesterday morning:

The Queen has slightly rallied. Since midnight her Majesty has taken more food, and has had some refreshing sleep. There is no further loss of strength. The symptoms which give rise to most anxiety are those which point to a local obstruction in the brain circulation.

R. DOUGLAS POWELL,
THOMAS BARLOW,
JAMES REID.

The following was posted at 5 P. M.:

The slight improvement of this morning is maintained.

JAMES REID.

At midnight the following bulletin was posted:

There is no material change in the Queen's condition. The slight improvement of the morning has been maintained throughout the day. Food has been taken fairly well, and some tranquil sleep secured.

THE KAISER AT OSBORNE.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—A special train left Victoria Station for Osborne at 8 o'clock yesterday morning, carrying Emperor William, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, and the Duke and Duchess of Connaught.

On his arrival at Portsmouth Emperor William was met by a guard of honor. The party, however, dispensed with the usual formalities, and immediately went on board the royal yacht Alberta. As the yacht started for Cowes the band of the flagship, the first-class battleship Majestic, struck up the National Anthem, and Emperor William and his royal relatives reverently bared their heads.

COWES, Isle of Wight, Jan. 22.—Shortly before noon yesterday, Emperor William, the Prince of Wales, and their party drove up to Osborne House. A good-sized crowd met them as they disembarked at Cowes. Never has Emperor William arrived at any place in England with so little ostentation. No salutes were fired, no cheers were given. The men of the guardship Australia silently manned her sides. The crowd was equally undemonstrative, the people contenting themselves with baring their heads, the Emperor bowing in response. It was a greeting given to the grandson of a dying woman rather than to the ruler of a great friendly nation.

The party drove to Osborne House in open carriages. The Prince of Wales appeared to be half-dazed, and the Duke of York's eyes were red, while the Duchess of Connaught did not cease crying.

There was intense relief at Osborne House on the arrival of the imperial and royal party, for several times in the course of the morning it had been feared the Queen would not live to hear of the Prince of Wales's return.

BERLIN, Jan. 21.—The Foreign Office has received information since Emperor William's arrival at Osborne House that the condition of the Queen is hopeless.

It is learned that the object of the Emperor's visit was to deliver special parting messages on behalf of himself and his mother.

The British Embassy officials have canceled all invitations and acceptances.

The Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung makes the following announcement:

"Dowager Empress Frederick, because still seriously ill, is, to her very great sorrow, prevented from going to Osborne to meet her exalted mother."

The effect of the sad news regarding Queen Victoria upon her eldest daughter has been very unfavorable. Empress Augusta Victoria, upon learning of this, had intended to go to Cronberg in order to inquire personally as to the condition of the Kaiser's mother, but later news from Cronberg was somewhat reassuring, and, for the moment she gave up the idea of the trip. However, Prince and Princess Henry of Prussia, Prince and Princess Frederick Charles, and the Hereditary Princess of Saxe-Meiningen, who arrived at Cronberg yesterday, will remain with Empress Frederick for a time.

The palace in Berlin has become as silent as the grave. All the guests have departed.

ANXIOUS CROWDS IN LONDON.

Tension Very Great—Gratitude for Foreign Sympathy.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The scenes about the Mansion House yesterday exemplified the intensity of the common anxiety which has made all interests here akin. Thousands gathered there as the day wore on, and nothing could be more impressive than the profound silence with which the announcements of the alternating phases of the crisis were heard.

The more favorable bulletin received at noon hardly lessened the universal apprehension; and everywhere that bulletins were posted, sorrowing crowds gathered.

Up to 3 A. M. no further bulletins had been received in London since the one issued at midnight.

The Queen's illness was so sudden, and, in the first onset, was expected to be so brief, that no arrangements were made for the posting and circulating of bulletins. An agitation is on foot to have them posted immediately in all Post Offices throughout the United Kingdom.

At present the provinces have no means of knowing anything except from the newspapers, and the result is that all kinds of baseless rumors are circulated.

For instance, at Chelmsford County Court yesterday a report was received that the Queen was dead, and the Judge, in tears and with great emotion, referred to the sorrowful tidings, which later on he was able to deny.

A painful mistake was made early in the afternoon. The flag over one of the Embassies was lowered, and people rushed off with the news that the Queen was dead. Without waiting for a verification, other flags in the vicinity were lowered, and some time elapsed before the error was rectified.

Preparations in official quarters for all eventualities indicated the expectations of those who might be supposed to be best informed. The royal apartments in Windsor Castle were made ready for a sudden return of the Court, and all State officials in any way concerned held themselves in readiness for prompt action.

The inner circle of the Cabinet was in session yesterday afternoon, in connection with the official procedure after her Majesty's death. The Secretary of State for Home Affairs, the Right Hon. C. T. Ritchie, who had temporarily left Osborne, was resummoned yesterday.

Many functions in Great Britain and on the Continent have been abandoned.

Emperor Francis Joseph countermanded the Court ball at Vienna, fixed for last evening.

The engagements of Cabinet Ministers and other notable persons to appear at public dinners, at charitable fairs, or at the dedication of new public buildings, &c., are being canceled, and it seems likely that all functions of this sort will be postponed throughout the United Kingdom. The Duke and Duchess of Devonshire have recalled their invitations to a house party, and their example is being followed by other titled entertainers. Many private dinners have been deferred.

A special train is held in readiness to convey the members of the Cabinet to Osborne at any moment.

On all sides it is a tale of public and private engagements and functions postponed, and a settled gloom rests over all classes of society. The newspaper editorials reflect this feeling and the suspense the country is enduring, together with the gratification and consolation derived from the sympathy testified on all sides from abroad.

Bishop Potter's allusion to the Queen in his address on Sunday evening in New York City to students and college men is everywhere commented upon with very keen satisfaction. The Daily News says:

"Bishop Potter compared her Majesty to Washington. No American could go further than that."

The Daily Telegraph says:

"It seems but a brief interval since England was the centre of almost universal hostility. To-day all international hostilities are hushed and stilled as they never were before by any one other single event in the annals of the world."

The Daily Chronicle observes:

"In the United States the Nation and the Government display once again the irrepressible sentiment of a cognate people. The strain of common blood which flows in British and American veins has been rarely more manifest or more warmly recognized."

This evidence of universal sympathy extended toward England in her hour of trouble is, in fact, the leading theme, and The Standard remarks:

"There is no enemy of England too bitter and no professing contemner of crowns and thrones too fanatical to admit the virtues and services to mankind of Queen Victoria."

"In the United States, as we were entitled to expect," says The Times, "the sorrow which overshadows the mother country has silenced ungenerous criticism. The personality of the Queen is understood and honored by Americans, and we can hardly desire any higher tribute to her admirable qualities, both as sovereign and woman, than those quoted by our New York correspondent."

THE WORLD'S SYMPATHY.

Papers Almost Unanimously Express Admiration for the Queen.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The dispatches received here from nearly every capital in Europe, and from India and all the British colonies, show the press and the people to be sympathetic over the Queen's illness. The one exception seems to be Belgium.

A dispatch from Pretoria says the news has caused a profound sensation there.

Special prayers were offered in the churches of all garrison towns on Sunday evening.

The Colonial Office has received dispatches from the Governments of the Australian and South African colonies expressing their anxiety and distress at the Queen's illness.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—The dispatches from Osborne are eagerly followed here. The evening newspapers publish more frequent editions, which are quickly sold.

The articles in most of the papers are sympathetic, though they give evidence of the anti-British feeling aroused by the South African war. Many of the writers ascribe Queen Victoria's collapse to the cloud of melancholy enshrouding her on account of the situation in South Africa and the unceasing death roll. Mr. Chamberlain is spoken of as the evil spirit responsible for the painful circumstances of her Majesty's end.

Anglophobe writers, like MM. Drumont and Millevoye, publish, however, in the Libre Parole and Patrie, respectively, ruthless depreciations of the Queen.

Le Temps, in a kindly article, says:

"Queen Victoria had become the symbol of the nation and empire, the glories and prosperities of her long reign and the century of progress and well-being. In her maturity she was the ideal constitutional sovereign. The Prince of Wales has had his tastes, deeds, and Court. Even if he desired to efface himself and to follow the example of his mother his sex would render the step more difficult. The death of the Queen will be, probably, in more than one domain, the signal for grave changes. It is the end of an era."

Le Figaro says that the death of Queen Victoria will be much regretted in France, not only because she has always been pacific, but because she has always shown a fondness for France. The paper refers to the "hostile attitude of the Nationalists toward England" as leading to a desertion by the English of the health resorts of France, and asks if the Prince of Wales, when King, will abstain from visiting the country.

President Loubet has received a telegram from the Prince of Wales thanking him for his message of sympathy.

Bulletins were posted at the British Embassy and British Consulate and were read by a number of visitors. Many French notabilities called at the British Embassy and inscribed their names, including President Loubet, M. Crozier, Chief of the Protocol, Gen. Zurlinden, the Belgian and Swiss Ministers, and President Faure's widow and daughter.

The Government is being kept closely informed from London.

BERLIN, Jan. 21.—Most of the German newspapers express sincere concern as to Queen Victoria, and praise Emperor William for going to Osborne. The Agrarian and Pan-German journals, however, take a different tone. The Deutsche Tages Zeitung, the leading Agrarian organ, concludes an abusive article as follows:

"The rising of English power is now followed by a decline. That she has seen the beginning of such a decline has given Queen Victoria a death stroke. She saw the commencement of the decay of that power, the splendid development of which she had witnessed during a long life. This is the tragic finale of her prolonged reign.

"The most important question for Great Britain now is whether the new King will be able to find his way out of South Africa again."

Some of the papers already discuss the Prince of Wales as the sovereign, and the Berliner Tageblatt prints a dispatch asserting that he is Germanophobe in his feeling.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 21.—In most of the comment on Queen Victoria's illness the personal note dominates the political. The Czar's subjects freely admit that her Majesty has been one of the principal bulwarks of peace. The Russia and Novosti alone touch the political chord. The Russia says:

"England's prestige is largely due to the Queen. To spare Queen Victoria much has been forgiven to her Ministers. With her will depart Britannia's good genius."

The Novosti says:

"England is discontended with the situation, and the dissatisfaction will possibly be expressed more plainly if Queen Victoria dies. Her successor will probably entertain different views on many questions. He is credited with strong French sympathies. The power of an English sovereign is greater than commonly stated, therefore the change may produce a revolution in international politics."

ROME, Jan. 21.—In the Senate to-day Gen. Count Giuseppe de Sonnaz, commanding the Fourth Army Corps, recalled the "warm friendship and sympathy that have always united the Governments and peoples of Great Britain and Italy," and moved that the Senate should ask officially for information regarding the condition of Queen Victoria, and should express heartfelt wishes for her recovery.

Marquis Visconti-Venosta, Minister of Foreign Affairs, joined in the sentiments expressed by Count de Sonnaz, and supported the motion, which was carried unanimously.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 21.—A report that Mr. Kruger has sent a telegram of sympathy to Osborne House is without foundation. Up to a late hour this evening he had not done so.

AMERICAN TRIBUTES.

Prayer Offered by Senate Chaplains at Washington and Albany.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—At the opening of to-day's session of the Senate the Chaplain, in his invocation, referred with deep feeling to the condition of Queen Victoria.

"With a multitude which no man can number," he prayed, "we come with tremendous anxiety and the profoundest awe to the bedside of the great, good Queen, who lies on the border of two worlds. Living for more than threescore years in the fierce light which beats upon a throne, by her conduct and character she has won not only the loyalty of her own people, but the veneration and homage of all true-hearted men and women around the world. And now, as it seems, she is to depart from the earth, crowned with the blessings and love of countless myriads of the human family, let Thy Heavenly Grace cheer and sustain her in this supreme hour.

"Likewise minister Thy tenderness and sympathy to all the members of her bereaved family, and to the people of her realm, who feel as if their mother were departing from them. We confide her, her children, and her people, to Thy Almighty care and Providence through Jusus Christ our Saviour."

The British Ambassador and Lady Pauncefote have no invitations out at present, but, with the members of their large embassy, have recalled their acceptances to all social functions.

The German Ambassador, who was to give his first formal entertainment on Feb. 8, has canceled that function. In the event of Queen Victoria's death, the German Embassy, as well as that of Russia, will go into mourning for the remainder of the season.

The Belgian Minister and Countess de Lichterveide have recalled their dinner invitations for Saturday evening, and, in the event of the Queen's death, will neither entertain nor be entertained for a period of thirty days. The legations of Portugal and of the Netherlands will also observe a period of thirty days' mourning. It is expected that the Ambassadors of France and Italy, as well as the other European representatives, will also observe a period of mourning.

This, with the continued illness of Mrs. McKinley and the canceling of engagements by the President, will put an abrupt end to all official society functions for the present season.

ALBANY, Jan. 21.—Prayer was offered for the spiritual consolation of Queen Victoria in the Senate to-night by the Rev. E. H. Brown of the First Methodist Church. He said:

"May Thy benediction rest upon all who are in authority. Wilt Thou graciously remember the good woman, the gracious sovereign of our great sister nation, who is approaching the last hour of her long and precious life—grant Thine infinite comfort to the millions of her sorrowing subjects who respect and revere and love their Christian Queen."

LONDON, Jan. 22.—While expressions of sympathy and love are pouring in from every quarter of both hemispheres, none are so appreciated as those from the United States. The Globe voices the general sentiment, saying:

"From other lands hopes come of the recovery and eulogies passed on the character of 'Queen Victoria.' In America, almost without exception, it is under the simple title of 'The Queen' that the illustrious patient is referred to, and deep affection is implied. The term can hardly be overestimated."

EMPRESS FREDERICK VERY ILL.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The following statement as to the condition of Dowager Empress Frederick appears in The Daily Chronicle:

"It is with sincere regret that we announce that the Empress Frederick's condition has become materially worse. There has been a serious development of the disease from which she is suffering, and her physical pain is intense.

"All idea of any journey in pursuit of health has been definitely abandoned, and it is in the highest degree improbable that she will ever leave Cronberg."

This is somewhat at variance with dispatches from Berlin to the other morning papers, which report that the condition of the Dowager Empress is a trifle more favorable, but as has already been announced, the news that Queen Victoria was dying had a very serious effect upon her eldest daughter.

The Dowager Empress was very anxious to go to Osborne, and did not abandon the hope of doing so until it was represented to her that it would be utterly impossible for her to undertake the journey.

King Leopold Not Going to Osborne.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 21.—King Leopold has countermanded the arrangements made for his journey to Osborne.

AUTOMOBILE OMNIBUSES.

Fifth Avenue Line Leases Three from New Haven Company.

Manager Howard Scribner of the Fifth Avenue Stage Coach Line has completed arrangements for the transfer of the automobile stages of the New Haven Stage Line to the Fifth Avenue line. A deal by which the New Haven automobiles come into the possession of the Fifth Avenue line was closed yesterday in New Haven by him.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 21.—The New Orange Street automobile stage line, operated for more than a year as an experiment, has been given up because of lack of business sufficient to pay expenses.

The New Haven Electric Cab Company, backed by the Woods Motor Vehicle Company of Chicago, has been experimenting here, and hundreds of automobilists throughout the country have visited this city to watch the business done. There has not been enough patronage to half cover expenses and the field has been abandoned.

The three large busses of the company, carrying twenty-two people and costing $5,500 apiece, have been leased to the automobile line running on Fifth Avenue for a royalty on the receipts.

The Woods Company, now occupying a plant in Chicago, are considering a removal to this city, and offers of a good site have been made the Chicago firm.

PRINCETON STUDENT DROWNED.

W. E. Bayles of the Preparatory School Was Skating on Thin Ice.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 21.—Walter E. Bayles, a student in the Princeton Preparatory School, was drowned this afternoon in Millstone Creek, near Kingston, a village three miles west of here.

Young Bayles, with three classmates—Heim, Danby, and Rafferty—went to the mill dam on the Millstone in quest of skating. They found that the ice was very thin and weak, but were unwilling to give up skating after their long walk, and Bayles started to skate across the middle of the pond. After taking a few strokes, the ice broke without warning and he sank. His companions were unable to afford him help, as he was completely hidden by the ice. The body was found, after several hours' search.

Two Princeton sophomores—Philip K. Hay and Christopher C. Augur—were drowned at the same place last year.

MRS. NATION BEGINS HER CRUSADE ANEW

With Other Women Wrecks Two More Wichita Saloons.

Says She Is Destined to Wreck Every One in the City—Spent Last Night in Jail.

WICHITA, Kan., Jan. 21.—Mrs. Carrie Nation came back to Wichita to-day after her recent incarceration, under a smallpox quarantine, and the net result of ten minutes of work by her this afternoon are two wrecked saloons, the pieces of which are being sold to-night for souvenirs. Mrs. Nation was assisted by Mrs. Julia Evans, Mrs. Lucy Wilhoit, and Mrs. Lydia Muntz, all of the local Women's Christian Temperance Union organization.

With hatchets concealed under their cloaks the women entered the saloon of James Burns, on Douglas Avenue, and did not leave a complete piece of glass or a working slot machine in the place. All showcases, both for liquors and cigars, as well as the plate-glass windows and doors were broken into smithereens. Next they ran to John Herrig's saloon and had everything in the front of the room, including the plate glass windows, broken when he appeared with a revolver and placed it at Mrs. Nation's head and said that he would blow out her brains if she did not desist. She yielded before the pointed revolver, and with her companions ran to the Carey Hotel bar, where she made her first attack on the saloons of Wichita three weeks ago.

In the barroom three policeman met Mrs. Nation, and she struck at Detective Sutton with a poker. He shoved her aside, and a youth struck him in the face. A policeman struck the youth and knocked him down. The police then overpowered Mrs. Nation and her friends and took them to the City Prison, followed by 2,000 persons. Mrs. Evans's little daughter pushed her way through the crowd, screaming, and begged for the release of her mother, but the policemen were deaf to her entreaties.

Chief of Police Cudbon discharged the prisoners after they reached the jail, and is heartily condemned by the citizens. The women made him a promise not to wreck any more saloons before noon to-morrow.

Mrs. Evans's hand was badly cut by broken glass, and her husband, who is a physician, sewed it up.

After leaving the city building, Mrs. Nation, in the coolest manner, began a street lecture to the immediate crowd that had surrounded the city building, saying that she expected to begin saloon wrecking again at noon to-morrow, when her truce with the Chief of Police expires. Shaking her fist at the crowd, she said:

"Men of Wichita, this is the right arm of God and I am destined to wreck every saloon in your city."

The women procured a wagon and rode through the streets singing "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and other hymns. They halted in front of the saloons they had smashed and held prayer meetings. The damage done by the women is estimated at between $1,500 and $2,000.

David Nation, the husband of Mrs. Nation, was in this city, but took no part in the wrecking of the saloons nor did he go to the city jail when his wife was arrested.

The affair created great excitement, and it is estimated that 5,000 persons, men and women, have viewed the wrecks since 5 o'clock.

Mrs. Nation caused a new sensation to-night by slapping Sheriff Simmons in the face, taking hold of his ears, and giving him a rough handling generally. Mrs. Nation was at the Union Station in the act of buying a ticket to a neighboring town when the Sheriff pulled at her sleeve, saying: "You are my prisoner, Madame." Mrs. Nation turned about, and, seeing Sheriff Simmons, gave him a violent slap across the face. She followed this up by taking hold of his ears with both her hands and wringing them violently.

The station was full of women, who began screaming, and tremendous excitement followed as the Sheriff, who is a very small man, struggled with his powerful antagonist. A policeman came to his rescue, and with the aid of some bystanders they succeeded in picking up the woman in their arms and placing her in a cab, which was driven rapidly to the county jail. She insisted on being placed in the private room for women, but Sheriff Simmons put her in a cell in the steel rotary, where she began to pray and sing hymns.

ANARCHIST SCARE AT YONKERS.

Turns Out to be a Peanut Vendor's Plot and Not a Revolutionary Conspiracy.

Special to The New York Times.

YONKERS, N. Y., Jan. 21.—Elias Masuras, the Greek who contended when he rushed into Police Headquarters with a big gash under his left eye a few days ago that an attempt had been made upon his life because he would not obey an injunction by Anarchists to kill a prominent American, did not stick to his story on the witness stand to-day. That an attempt was made upon his life, however, seemed to be undoubtedly true.

Masuras said on the witness stand to-day through an interpreter that on Friday morning last a crowd of six of his fellow-countrymen surrounded him on Riverdale Avenue, with dirks in their hands, and assaulted him. These six men are are now in prison. They are:

James Theiphilopolas, Paranites Theiphilopolas, and Louis Theiphilopolas of 3 Clinton Street, Yonkers; Thomais Charalopolas of 235 East Ninety-ninth Street, Lewis Theiphilopolas of 401 East One Hundred and Seventh Street, and Christos Theiphilopolas of 235 East Ninety-ninth Street, New York. All of the Theiphilopolases are related.

It was brought out at the preliminary hearing to-day that the real cause of the conspiracy against Masuras was peanuts, and not a political propaganda. The witness himself intimated that Yonkers is in the clutches of a peanut "trust," and that it was his refusal to bow to the octopus, rather than his reluctance to kill a minion of plutocracy, which caused his compatriots to turn upon him. He dared, something like a month ago, to shake off the shackles of the combine and start up business for himself. He was soon given a hint that he had better come back into the fold again, or he would rue it. Masuras replied:

"The laws of this country will protect me."

He continued to sell his peanuts independently, somewhere near Getty Square, and was finally given a period of time within which to desist or die.

The assault on Riverdale Avenue followed. To-day he identified the men. "By the help of God I got away from them," he testified to-day, "but not without a wound on the face where one knife glanced off my cheekbone. The evidence of the truth of what the complainant said was manifest.

Further questioned, Masuras, and others who have a knowledge of the "trust" operative in Yonkers, said that all those connected with it were engaged before leaving Greece. They came over here, principally through the instrumentality of Christos Theiphilopolas, it was alleged, with the agreement that they were to get $100 a year and their food. All of the accused men were held in $500 bail until this morning, when the jury trial will be had.

BENJAMIN D. SILLIMAN ILL.

Aged Lawyer's Condition Causes Anxiety to His Physicians.

Benjamin D. Silliman, the oldest living graduate of Yale University, who is well known in this city as a lawyer, is seriously ill at his home, at Pierrepont and Clinton Streets, Brooklyn. Mr. Silliman was ninety-five years old on Sept. 24, and his physicians are very uneasy over the attack of bronchial pneumonia from which he is suffering.

Mr. Silliman was taken sick early Wednesday evening. He is delerious at times, but yesterday morning he showed considerable improvement.

FOUR HURT IN AN EXPLOSION.

Escaping Gas Ignites in a Section of the Rapid Transit Tunnel Excavation.

Four men were seriously burned and otherwise injured by an explosion of gas which occurred late last night in the excavation for the rapid transit tunnel in Fourth Avenue, near Twenty-second Street. The injured are:

EDWARD SHERIDAN, 30 years old, 204 East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street. Burned about the face and hands; hair burned from head and slight bruises.

FELIX McCABE, 22 years old, 204 East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street. Burned about face and hands. Taken to hospital unconscious.

JOHN CANFIELD, 30 years old, 539 Canal Street. Burned about face and hands.

JOHN TYNAN, 35 years old, 177 Fiftieth Street, Brooklyn. Hands and face badly burned. Eyebrows scorched.

The injured were taken to Bellevue Hospital by Ambulance Surgeons Donnelly and McDonald.

At the place where the explosion occurred the excavation is about twenty feet deep. Two shifts are employed to burry the work along. The night shift numbers twenty-five men, who work in gangs of five men each under the foremanship of Michael Nolan.

The four men who were injured, with another man who happened to be in another portion of the excavation, were at work near Twenty-second Street, when there was a loud report, and a sheet of fire descended into the pit and another sheet rose into the air. The avenue was brilliantly lighted for several blocks, and in a few minutes the excavation was lined with anxious inquirers, who asked about the men at work. Some laborers descended into the pit and brought up the four men.

According to the police, a large gas pipe is held in place in the excavation by stays. Running along the side of the pipe is an electric wire used to furnish the workmen in the tunnel with light. It is believed that the wire became worn and ignited the escaping gas from the pipe, causing the explosion.

The reserves from the East Twenty-second Street Station were summoned, but their services were not needed except to prevent the crowd from tearing down the rails that guard the sides of the excavation.

It was feared that a large number of men had been injured, but this proved to be untrue. A large water pipe that lay near the gas pipe was not injured.

STARTS A BOOM FOR HILL.

Hugh McLaughlin Says the ex-Senator Is the Biggest Man in the Democratic or Any Other Party.

Special to The New York Times.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 21.—Hugh McLaughlin of Brooklyn and a party of twelve, including ex-Fire Chief Nevins of Brooklyn, arrived last night and will go to Mr. Nevins's Winter home on Merritt's Island. Mr. McLaughlin to-day started a boom for David B. Hill for the next Democratic nomination for President. He submitted to an interview and during the course of it said:

"Gov. Hill is the biggest man in the Democratic Party or any other party in this country. Cleveland has already served his party long enough and Bryan has done damage enough for one man."

"Who will be the reform candidate for Mayor of Greater New York?" was asked.

"There's only one that knows, and he ain't going to tell—that's the Lord."

"Well, who will be, in your opinion, the candidate of Tammany Hall."

"Tammany Hall, Sir, represents the people, and when the people speak, then the voice of Tammany Hall will be heard—you'll have to wait for that."

"The Kings County organization is in harmony with Tammany and Mr. Croker, isn't it, Mr. McLaughlin?"

"The Kings County Democracy is always in harmony with anything that is for good government," was the aententious reply.

"What do you think of Bishop Potter's anti-vice campaign?" was asked.

"I don't think about it. When you have whisky for sale, or beer on Sunday, and the Bishop sees it, it's vice, but when the beer and the whisky is champagne at the club in cut-glass decanters, the Bishop's got nothing to say."

PNEUMATIC TUBES ABANDONED.

Postal Appropriation Bill Is Reported Without Any Provision for Maintaining the Service.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The Post Office Committee of the House to-day reported the Postal Appropriation bill. The appropriation for pneumatic tubes was left out. The report that the bill was reported last week probably arose from the fact that the committee made its decision to exclude the tubular appropriation last Tuesday. In spite of the effort of the Merchants' Association to have the provision reinserted, the bill will probably be passed without it, since such an amendment could be blocked by a point of order.

Chairman Loud of the committee was asked to-night why the appropriation for the tubular service had been dropped. He replied: "I cannot speak for my colleagues, but I can give you my own opinions. I felt, and I believe others felt, that the Government was not getting enough for its money; that the rates were exorbitant, and that as the contracts expire it was the part of wisdom to wait before extending the contracts on the old basis and see if something more economical and effective could not be obtained.

"The Government was paying $225,000 for this service. In New York the field, covered at an expense of $160,000, was about five miles, in Philadelphia three-quarters of a mile, and in Boston half a mile. There was no saving to make up for it. The wagon service had to be continued. The tubes carried only first-class matter. The saving in time in New York was only about twenty minutes. The tubes could not be connected with the Forty-second Street Depot, and the mail had to be taken out at Forty-fourth Street, pouched, and sent over to the depot, which cut down the saving in time to twenty minutes.

"This is the feature of the system which affects not New York alone, but the whole country, and there, if anywhere, would be found the argument against its continuance on the old expensive basis.

"There is no prejudice against the tube service. The only question is whether the particular kind of tube service the Government was getting did not cost more than it was worth. Since only first-class matter can be sent through the tubes, the tubes should be less expensive. A three-inch tube ought to do that work as well as an eight-inch tube. In course of time no doubt this problem will be solved. The commercial organizations of New York ought to be able to solve it. In foreign countries when a man wants his mail sent by tube he pays an extra rate for the privilege. I think something of that sort might be done here.

"If this service had been extended to the other large cities, as was contemplated, and the basis of cost had remained the same, the expense would have mounted up into the millions—and all for first-class matter only, and without effecting any corresponding reduction in any other department. In its present shape the tube service is not of much use for out-going mail. It might be used to advantage in sending mail from one part of the city to another, provided the cost could be lessened, but still only for first-class matter.

"The tube service has a future, and the only question at present is how to give the Government the worth of its money. On its present basis it is too heavy a strain."

Urge Retention of Southern Fast Mail.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 21.—At a meeting of the Commercial Club this afternoon a resolution was adopted calling upon the Alabama Representatives in Congress to use their utmost endeavors to see that the appropriation for the fast mail service from Boston and New York to the South is not stricken out of the General Post Office Appropriation bill. There has been some fear that the fast-mail appropriation would be omitted, and this step was taken to prevent such action.

VENEZUELA CHARGED WITH BLACKMAILING

Will Restore Asphalt Property for $1,000,000, It Is Alleged.

Other Foreigners Declare They Are Being Plundered—Washington Expects News from the Scorpion's Commander.

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad, British West Indies, Jan. 21.—The arrivals to-day from Venezuela confirm the critical state of affairs in that republic. A former Venezuelan Minister asserts that the politicians at Caracas are making a determined raid on the Bermudez Asphalt Company. He adds that they tried it before, on a modest scale, squeezing $30,000 out of the company when the United States Minister, Francis B. Loomis, protested and stopped further action of this description.

The Government, the Minister also says, listened to reason then, but has now lost its head through greed, and offers to restore the company's property for a million dollars, although it is said to have been illegally taken by a dictatorial decree.

In addition, the assertion is again made that if the foreign Governments permit the action of the Venezuelan authorities to pass without some protest, all foreign investors will be driven from South America, for the latter claim they are always being illegally plundered. In this connection the assertion is made that no former Venezuelan Government would dare to act as this one does toward Washington. It is explained that the Venezuelan authorities are counting on the disinclination of strong nations to coerce weak ones.

At the office here of the Orinoco Company, where two steamers were recently seized by Venezuelan authorities, the manager says the British Minister at Caracas, W. L. D. Haggard, has informed the American Minister that the British Government will not protect the company because its shareholders are Americans. The company is said to be losing heavily through the seizure of the steamers.

The commander of the French cruiser Suchet, stationed at Carupano, a seaport town of Venezuela, State of Bermudez, fifty-seven miles northeast of Cumana, for the protection of the large French interests in that vicinity, reports that disturbances are increasing.

The insurgents of Venezuela have just gained a battle near Guiria, a seaport town of Venezuela, 135 miles east of Cumana, on the Gulf of Paria.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—In all probability something definite will be received shortly throwing light on what is happening in Venezuela. Lieut. Commander Sargent reports that he is going to Curaçao, nominally to coal. It is suggested at the State and Navy Departments that he is going there so that he may send dispatches without fear of their being tampered with by the Venezuelan Government. It is even probable that he may have some of Minister Loomis's dispatches.

Curaçao is in the Dutch West Indies, and there are several points in Venezuela where Lieut. Commander Sargent could coal if the situation were not so strained. Porto Cabello, for instance, is half way between La Guayra and Curaçao. It is a seaport on the Venezuelan coast, where American war vessels frequently coal, and the Scorpion will pass it on her way to Curaçao. Naval officers say that if the Scorpion is really going so far out of her way to coal it is because difficulties are placed in the way of her getting it at a Venezuelan port.

It is hardly believed that the Venezuelan Government would go so far as to refuse coal blank to let an American vessel coal at Porto Cabello or any other Venezuelan port, but there are a number of ways in which the same end could be reached without an absolute refusal. The authorities could, for instance, claim that they were out of coal, or they could name a high price. There are still no dispatches from Minister Loomis bearing on the situation. The Venezuelan authorities have allowed him to send one dispatch, but it does not bear in any way, it is asserted, at the State Department, upon the trouble between the two countries, and relates to an unimportant matter of routine. If he has succeeded in getting dispatches into Lieut. Commander Sargent's hands they should be here very soon.

EXPEDITION TO THE NORTH.

Dr. Daly of Harvard Plans One to Labador, Iceland, and Greenland.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 21.—A geological and geographical expedition to Labrador, Iceland, and Greenland is being planned for the coming Summer. Last Summer five Harvard men went to Labrador with Dr. R. A. Daly of the University Museum, Department of Geology and Geography. This year's expedition, which is also under Dr. Daly, promises to be much larger and more elaborate.

As planned at present, the expedition will have a large steamer and take sixty men, if that number can be found who wish to go. In this party it is hoped to have students of geography, geology, botany, zoology, mineralogy, and all branches of natural history. The expedition is not limited to Americans, but men of all nationalities are asked to go. A doctor will attend the men.

Explanatory lectures will be given on the regions visited from time to time by the leader of the expedition. Labrador will be investigated again. A fee of $500 is to be charged to all men, of which $250 is to be paid down before March 1, and the balance before June 1. The expedition will start

MISS TRAVIS MAY HAVE BEEN MURDERED

Police Believe Davis, Her Fiance, Gave Her "Knock-out" Drops.

Book Dealing with Poisons and Antidotes Found on Him—Supposed to be Shamming Insanity.

What the police believe to be another case of murder by "knock-out" drops was revealed yesterday upon investigation into the death of Margaret Travis, the domestic employed in the St. Luke's Home, who was found dead in a hotel room with Clarence A. Davis, to whom she was engaged to be married. The case at the present stage puzzles the police and the hospital authorities, but the police say they have reason to think that a carefully planned murder was committed.

The principal reason for the murder theory is founded on the behavior of the prisoner since he was taken from Thaybold's Hotel, One Hundred and Twenty-second Street and Amsterdam Avenue, where the tragedy happened. The police say he is shamming insanity. When suspicion had been aroused at the hotel and a policeman was called in to break open the door of the room which Davis had hired, the inmate, even before the door was opened, seemed crazy.

"Where is the girl?" the officer shouted through the closed door.

"She's gone to hell! She's gone to hell!" the man answered.

When the door was broken open he was found laughing and grinning, crouching behind the door, twirling the girl's hat in his hands and repeating:

"She's gone to hell! She's gone to hell!"

Davis was taken to the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Police Station by Patrolman Frye. There, the police say, he overacted his part, and that when he was locked in a cell and thought he was not observed he acted rationally enough except for an occasional wild yell. From the station he was transferred, in charge of an officer, to the J. Hood Wright Hospital. There he continued his antics.

The hospital authorities, when asked whether or not the prisoner was insane, declared they had nothing to say. Last night, however, they declined to have more to do with the man, and he was sent in charge of a policeman to the prison ward of Bellevue Hospital, where the experts will pass on his mental condition.

Another clue against the prisoner was a book of general information. The curious thing about the book is that no matter how it is laid down it will open, if done at random, at the same place, and if put down on the back and allowed to fall open, will also open at the same place. This place, or page, deals with poisons, their effects upon the human system, symptoms, antidotes, and so on. This portion of the book is very much discolored and marked with fingers.

The following telegram sent to the New York police from Schenectady still further confirms their suspicion:

The Clarence M. Davis who is in a New York hospital suffering from a narcotic poison has lived in this city only five weeks. Nothing is known of his past here except that he is a native of Kentucky. He left this city last Saturday, and told friends that he would never return. He said he was in serious trouble with a woman in New York, and that he was going to that city to "have it out" with her.

The detectives, in searching the clothes of Davis, found three love letters, all written by the dead woman, and addressed to him at Troy.

The theory of the police is that the scheme was to pretend that both the prisoner and the girl had become ill from drinks which had been sent up to the room. It is thought that, after taking some of the same poison as was administered to the girl, the prisoner took an antidote to save himself. Even before it was known that the girl had died from poison, the police, acting on the poison and their antidotes clue, found in the book on the prisoner's person, requesting the hospital authorities to pump out his stomach, with a view to submitting the contents to a chemical analysis if that were found necessary.

Dr. O'Hanlon performed an autopsy on the body of the girl at an undertaker's establishment at 1,459 Third Avenue yesterday afternoon. The cause of death, the physician said, was pulmonary oedema due to depression of the heart, for which no reason could be assigned. The conditions indicated either narcotic poisoning or asphyxiation from illuminating gas, and it will require a chemical analysis to determine the cause. There were no indications of disease and no marks of violence on the body. By order of Coroner Bausch, Dr. O'Hanlon sent portions of the body to Prof. Dillon Brown of the Pediatrics Laboratory, 251 West Fifty-fourth Street, for chemical analysis.

A search about the room for evidence of the crime disclosed the two glasses supposed to have contained the drinks which Davis had sent up to the room. The contents of the glasses had dried up, but were taken for chemical analysis, if necessary. No poison bottle was found, only a flask containing some whisky, and of this the police also took charge, with a pillow case on which the girl's head rested and which had a blue spot upon it as if made by acid.

Dr. O'Hanlon, who is the Coroner's physician who discovered that the insane Frenchman Hilliard had died a violent death in Bellevue, said last night:

"It is impossible to say what caused the death of the woman until the result of a chemical analysis has been made. The result of my autopsy shows, among other things, that the girl led a reproachless life. So far as can be deduced from the result of the autopsy, the girl may have been killed either by gas or by some narcotic poison. Gas, however, is out of the question, as there was not a trace of it in the room where the body was found. Davis may really be insane, or he may be shamming, or he may be enlarging on a slight demonstration that cannot be settled without further examination. But there are several phases to the case outside of my own department which make things look peculiar."

When Davis arrived in Bellevue last night he continued talking irrationally, saying first that he was married to the girl, then that he did not know her, and then that he was engaged to her.

Annie Travis, who also works at the St. Luke's Home as a domestic, and who is a sister of the dead girl, said that Davis first met Margaret some weeks ago at the St. Luke's Home, where Davis was calling on another domestic. At that time she understood Davis was a bridge worker. Davis, she said, became infatuated with her sister, and she soon came to like him, and he called frequently. Just before the holidays Davis finished his work in this city and obtained a position in Troy. He wrote her sister many letters. Last Thursday her sister got a letter from Davis saying he was coming to the city on Saturday.

At St. Luke's Home it was learned that Davis called on the young woman last Saturday and that he begged her to go with him. The girl refused, saying that it was not her night off. Davis and she were in the reception room, and for over an hour he coaxed before she consented to go with him. Then she said she would ask the Superintendent of the home, Mrs. Darby, for permission to leave. Instead, she went to her room, and when she came back was dressed and ready for the street. She had not asked for permission to go out, but simply disappeared. When the people at the home next heard of her she was dead.

HIS PLAN TO ESCAPE FOILED.

Prisoner Tried to Dig a Hole in the Floor of His Cell.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Jan. 21.—Thomas Doyle, who was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment on Thursday last for the killing of Maurice E. Baldwin, a farmer, of Springfield, began to plan his escape from the county jail immediately after returning from the courtroom.

He secured a piece of sharp steel and began to loosen the floor bricks under his cot. The work was begun Thursday night, but one of the "trusties" heard the noise and told the Warden, who put a watch on Doyle's cell. The Warden's suspicions were confirmed, and last night he told Doyle he would have to remove him to another cell while the one he had been occupying could be cleaned. When the transfer had been made Doyle's scheme was laid bare.

Questioned by the Warden, the prisoner said he had hoped to dig a hole in the flooring sufficiently large to enable him to drop into the main corridor. On reaching the corridor he expected to be able to saw through the bars of a window.

Doyle was taken to the penitentiary today.

Two New Smallpox Cases.

Assistant Sanitary Superintendent Dillingham said yesterday that two new cases of smallpox were reported to the Health Board up to noon yesterday. They were: John Smith, twenty-three, 248½ West Fortieth Street, and George Bogel, one year, 344 East Forty-sixth Street.

FRENCH ASSOCIATIONS BILL.

Speech for the Measure by the Premier and Argument Against It by Count Albert de Mun.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—The Chamber of Deputies to-day resumed the debate on the proposed law of associations. There was a brilliant assembly, in view of the announcement that Count Albert de Mun (Conservative, representing one of the Morlaix districts,) and M. Waldeck-Rousseau, the Premier, two of the finest orators of the Chamber, would speak.

Count Albert reproached M. Waldeck-Rousseau for denouncing the militard of frances belonging to the religious congregations as an economic peril, in order to revive the ancient dread of monastic wealth and serfdom, which had long since disappeared. Moreover, he said, this sum was grossly exaggerated in order to create a greater impression. He warned the Government that its policy was imprudent and ill-advised.

The Count de Mun concluded as follows:

"You have begun a religious war, and this will weigh heavily on you. As to us, we shall continue to combat you, and hope to find in this Chamber a sufficient number of friends and lovers of liberty to aid us."

M. Waldeck-Rousseau replied that the bill would be a test point as to whether civil power or religious authority was to have supremacy. The Government, he added, asked the Chamber to continue the confidence accorded to it during the past eighteen months by voting this portion of its programme. If they (the Ministers) had not thought the House would do so, they would no longer assume responsibility for the task they had accepted. The Premier denied that the Church was in any way threatened, declaring that the Government simply desired by the bill to assure peace and the regular development of the institutions of the country.

The Chamber, by a vote of 298 to 226, directed that the Premier's speech be posted throughout the country.

Oscar Resumes Reins of Government.

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 21.—At to-day's council of state King Oscar of Sweden and Norway resumed the reins of Government, after his recent illness, the Crown Prince, Gustavus, retiring from the regency which he had held while his father was incapacitated from attending to business.

Argentina's Wheat Flour Surplus.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The Buenos Ayres correspondent of The Times says: "Official statistics estimate the exportable surplus of wheat flour at 1,750,000 tons. Trade circles regard this an exaggerated estimate, believing that the surplus will be about 1,200,000 tons."

Adviser to Sir Alfred Milner.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph H. Hertz, at present in Cape Town, has been appointed a member of the High Commissioner's Consultative Committee—a body of twenty gentlemen advisory to Sir Alfred Milner in his capacity of Administrator of the Transvaal and Orange River Colony.

Plague Raging Among British Troops?

BRUSSELS, Jan. 21.—According to "Le Petit Bleu, bubonic plague is raging among the British troops in Cape Colony, and many deaths that are attributed to enteric fever and dysentery are really due to plague.

CIVIC COUNCIL FORMED.

Delegates of Labor and Other Organizations Adopt a Constitution and By-Laws—Objects of the Council.

The Civic Council of New York City, proposed at former meetings of the Committee of One Hundred, as a means of improving industrial conditions, was launched last night at a meeting in Webster Hall, 119 East Eleventh Street, by an assemblage consisting of sixty-six delegates of labor organizations and thirty-four from reform and other civic bodies. Ernest H. Crosby, President of the original People's Club, presided. The whole evening was taken up with the adoption of a constitution and by-laws, and a motion to elect Mr. Crosby President was cut short by a motion to adjourn shortly before midnight.

The council will strive to continue as a non-political body, and will take part in the coming campaign only to the extent of looking up the records of candidates and exposing those hostile to the best interests of labor.

A clause excluding from membership all who hold political office brought forth much acrimonious discussion. When a proposal was made to except civil service appointees from this provision, H. G. Zimmer, a delegate from the Structural Iron Workers' Union, declared that civil service was pretty much of a fraud, and that he knew that political organizations maintained substitutes to pass the examination under the names of their henchmen, who then went into office on their ratings. D. B. Van Vleck, a clerk in the Tax Office, then said he had obtained a good place on his own merits and without being under obligations to any boss, and he knew of others who had fared as well. Some of the delegates inquired then if Park employes, street cleaners, and letter carriers were to be barred from membership, but Mrs. Adele M Field smoothed things over by suggesting that the meeting construe a political officer to be one exercising in some degree a Governmental function, and that ordinary working employes were not to be included.

The constitution as drafted proposed that two-thirds of the membership should be representatives of trade and labor organizations, and a proposal to modify this to a simple majority brought forth angry protests and was voted down.

The stated objects of the council are as follows:

To serve as a central delegated body through which the organizations represented in it may act upon civic and social matters, particularly upon those affecting the interest of wageworkers, by influencing public opinion, securing needed legislation, and demanding that the laws be rightly administered and enforced.

Neither the Committee of Fifteen, the Tammany Committee of Five, nor the City Club was represented at last night's meeting, nor were they mentioned in the proceedings, and it was said that none of these had been invited.

Among those who took an active part in the discussions were Mrs. Frederick Nathan, President of the Consumers' League; the Rev. W. D. P. Bliss, ex-President of the Committee of One Hundred; Charles Frederick Adams of the Single Tax League, and Robert E. Ely of the League for Political Education.

The election of officers will take place Monday evening at Arlon Hall.

POLICEMAN SHARPLY REBUKED.

Michael McManus Charged with Refusing to Support His Family.

The fact that a policeman on full pay was before him for failing to support his family and for allowing his three children to be sent to city institutions caused Magistrate Crane in the Yorkville Court yesterday to deliver a sharp lecture to Patrolman Michael McManus of the West Thirty-seventh Street Station, who was arraigned before him. McManus, who is thirty-four years old, and lives at 267 Tenth Avenue, was arrested at the instigation of Agent Watson of the Children's Society. The complainant told Magistrate Crane that McManus has not supported his wife or children since 1897.

On Jan. 30 of that year Mrs. McManus applied to Magistrate Brann in the Yorkville Court to have her three children, Lizzie, Michael, and John, aged two, three, and nine years, respectively, sent to some institution. The girl was sent to St. Elizabeth's Home, and the boys to the Catholic Protectory. Watson said that up to Sept. 20 last McManus did not pay a cent toward the care of the children. On the latter date he was arraigned in the Yorkville Police Court and was paroled on his promise to pay $2 toward the care of each child each week. He paid for two months and then ceased. Watson then caused his arrest.

"This is one of the most aggravated case I ever heard of," said Magistrate Crane: "You're a policeman, with a good salary, and yet you want the city to provide for your children. You are a disgrace to the department that has so many good men. I have no mercy for you."

McManus pleaded not to be sent to prison. "I will send you to prison," hastily put in the Magistrate, "and put you under bonds for trial in Special Sessions. Make your excuses there." McManus was then put under $300 bonds.

Inspector Thompson has ordered a full report of McManus's case to be sent to him. McManus was on duty last night on Eighth Avenue, between Thirty-ninth and Forty-second Streets. He said he had complied with the order of the Court to provide the $300 bond.

TROOPS FORCE INDIAN TRIBE TO PAY A FINE

Waziris Must Settle for Crimes and Depradations.

Tribe Is One of the Fiercest and Most Treacherous in India—Crops in Good Condition.

Foreign Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

SIMLA, Dec. 20.—Some few weeks ago it was intimated that there was at least a chance of another frontier campaign speedily being on foot. The cause of the impending trouble was the extremely turbulent behavior of the Mahsud Waziri tribe, as treacherous and bloodthirsty a community of ragged ruffians as is to be found through the East. Last month the head men of the tribe were called together to meet the chief civil officer of the district. The latter read them a lecture on the enormity of their behavior during the last two years or so, and concluded his harangue by announcing that a long-suffering Government could stand it no longer, and that the tribe must forthwith either pay a fine of 100,000 rupees or submit to such further punishment as the authorities might determine.

The further punishment in question was not a punitive expedition of the ordinary type into the enemy's country, but a strict blockade of his boundaries; a blockade which would absolutely prevent all egress or ingress, which would cut off the tribe absolutely from the rest of the world, which would stifle all trade, and end by depriving the evildoers of even the necessaries of life.

Now a sum such as 100,000 rupees is a large amount for a comparatively small community inhabiting a barren and inhospitable country to collect at short notice. Moreover, the Waziri is perhaps the most avaricious of all the various tribes which abound beyond the border. And this is saying a good deal. For the Afghans, and with them the remainder of the Pathan and other tribes which occupy the wild hill country between India proper and the dominions of the Amir of Kabul, claim to be part of the lost tribes of Israel, and there is this to be said for the assertion that both their physiognomy and habits support the contention.

Among them all, however, the Waziri parts with his cash the most unwillingly. Perhaps it is because he seldom has much, and even that little he has probably risked his neck for on some marauding and murdering raid or excursion. So that, bearing in mind this trait, there were many among those who knew him best who boldly prophesied that sooner than pay up so large a sum, he would fight to the last, and would run the risk of fire and sword swallowing up his barren hills rather than bow the knee to the Government of India at such a price. These, however, have so far proved false prophets.

Possibly the knowledge of the extraordinary completeness of our arrangements for coercing them helped the Waziri firebrands of Tirah to the wise conclusion that, on this occasion at any rate, discretion was the better part of valor. For on all sides the tribesmen found themselves hemmed in by a wall of bayonets. Additional troops were moved up to the Waziri frontiers, and a chain of posts some 200 miles in length, with movable columns of all arms at suitable intervals, now encompasses the whole Mahsud breed. On the north, east, and south of his country the Waziri finds himself surrounded by our arms. On the west there are the precipitous scarps and ravines of Afghanistan, and at their feet there lies in wait for any chance Mahsud another tribe of Waziris, the Darwesh Khel, who are at feud with the former and only too glad to have an opportunity, if such arise, of paying off numerous old scores of long standing.

For the Waziri is hated throughout the whole length of the border. He is treacherous to the extreme, in a bloodthirsty land where treachery is almost esteemed a virtute, and long since has attained the level of a fine art. He is an avaricious, sneaking, murderous, marauding ruffian, more beast than man; and thus it comes about that his very name stinks in the nostrils of the other tribes of the border, many of whom are somewhat elementary in their notions of honesty and fair dealing. They look upon the Mahsud as a dog, who need expect no pity, as he gives none, and nothing would please them better than to see the whole community wiped out of existence in the course of a war with our troops. Such a contingency, however, may now be regarded as remote.

The Waziri, looking around, sees no sign of help anywhere. The rest of the border is, for the time being, extremely quiet. Our hands are entirely free to deal with him. Seeing this, he has decided to pay up the fine demanded, and at present the various headmen are busily engaged in collecting the amount. The Mahsuds have already been hard hit by the blockade established against them. They are unable to get down to India to sell their hides and wool; they are unable to import from India the grain and salt of which their own country is destitute, and without which they would speedily starve. It is to be hoped that this lesson will not be lost on them, and that for some years to come there may be a cessation of the murderous outrages, the raids, and robberies which they have for a couple of years past carried on with comparative impunity.

Early in the present week Lord Curzon returned to Calcutta, after a tour which had lasted more than eight weeks, and which was in some respects of an eventful character. The Viceroy is brimming over with energy. He would tire out half a dozen ordinary men, and he has already managed to see more of India than any of his predecessors. He darts from place to place by road, rail, or boat, with extraordinary rapidity. He sees everything, inquires into everything, is accessible to all. His speeches during the course of this tour alone would fill a couple of good-sized volumes.

During the next three months, however, the Viceroy is tied down at Calcutta. The Legislative Council meets to-morrow, and there is a fairly heavy programme before it. Then there is the budget to be considered, and a good deal of consideration it will need to make both ends meet. The cost of the famine has been enormous, probably as much as £10,000,000, when the bill comes to be made out in full. But, overtopping all other subjects, there is the great question of army reform and rearmament. Even the most bigoted economists now admit that it would not be safe to allow things to go on on the present lines much longer. The country, to tell the plain truth, is unprepared for a big war, say, beyond the northwest frontier. There are not enough men, not enough transport, not sufficient reserves of anything.

The armament of the troops, too, especially the artillery, is much behind the times. The native regiments have not nearly enough British officers, without which the smartest sepoy corps soon becomes as helpless as a flock of sheep. All these various questions are now engaging the earnest attention of the Government of India, and it is hardly necessary to add that their solution will cost a good deal of money. The problem of the moment is how that money is to be found. New taxation is admitted by all to be out of the question, and the only alternative is a sterling loan.

The position is somewhat lightened for India in some respects. Certain charges, amounting to more than £250,000, which have hitherto been defrayed by India, are in future to be paid by the British Government. Then India has at present some 30,000 troops of her normal garrison loaned to the British Government in South Africa and China, the cost of which the latter is defraying. This is a welcome windfall to the financial authorities out here, and will to a certain extent make the problem of finding the necessary money easier.

The great famine of the past twelve months is now practically over, there being only about a couple of hundred thousand people remaining in receipt of Government relief, as compared with the 6,500,000 in August last. From all provinces save one there come favorable reports regarding the agricultural prospects, and should the usual Winter rains be sufficient in quantity and come at the right time there is every chance of bumper harvests resulting.

The one exception is Bombay. In parts of that province, especially in what is known as the Deccan country, around Poona and Sholapur, the outlook is distinctly gloomy. There has been no rain for months. The soil is parched and hard as bricks. The crops have withered for want of moisture where they stand. This drought has, of course, reacted on the cattle. There is no fodder for them to eat and but little water for them to drink. Copious rains now might ameliorate, though they would not save the situation. Otherwise, there will be severe famine over a large area. This, coming after a cycle of lean years, culminating in the great distress of last year, will try the poor agriculturists of the Deccan territory.

The weather conditions of the next few weeks will now determine the exact severity of the ordeal through which they will have to pass before the monsoon rains of August next bring relief.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN.

Time was when the oyster business in this town was, for the amount of capital invested, a good paying one. It paid so well, in fact, that capital was attracted to it by a number of small investors. Sharp rivalry had the usual result. Profits were cut down, and it became hard work for even the best managers to get along and make money. That is the situation now, particularly among the men who are known in the trade as "oyster shuckers." Some time ago there was launched a scheme for a consolidation of interests in the business with an English syndicate back of the plan, according to current rumor. David C. Sanford, who is probably more familiar with the oyster business of Long Island Sound than any other one man, was the promoter of the enterprise. He found the consolidation of interests to be so difficult a task that after about a year of investigation, speculation, and conference the matter was abandoned. Recently the scheme has been revived, with a lot of American capital back of it. The new plan differs somewhat from the old one, in that it is proposed to confine its operation to the oyster planters and growers of this State—including Long Island—New Jersey, Connecticut, and Rhode Island. Practically all of the good lands under water fit for oyster growing in these sections are now in the hands of cultivators. It is proposed to get control of, or an interest in, all these beds, so that the managers of the syndicate can limit production, control exports, and fix prices. All of this, it is asserted, will be of ultimate benefit to local oystermen. J. L. Housmann of this city is at the head of the syndicate now interested, and Mr. Sanford again looms up as its confidential adviser and agent. He says all the capital necessary is at hand and that under the new plan there is no doubt that the scheme can be pushed through to a successful issue. The Chesapeake Bay and Potomac River oyster supply is not taken into consideration in this scheme.

It was in a drug store where they were talking about the proposal to create a witch hazel trust. The manager of the store took up a bottle of the distilled witch hazel and pointed at the picture of a lot of naked South American Indians engaged in bringing to the distillery huge bundles of twigs. From this picture the natural inference was that this was the way in which the shrub from which the witch hazel or hamamelis of commerce is extracted was brought to the distilleries in some wild and hardly habitable region. "That picture," he remarked, "is one of the pretty little fictions of trade that have created a decided impression. It has, I have no doubt, brought to the concern shrewd enough to adopt it many thousands of dollars in profit. But it was all a 'fake,' as we call such things nowadays. As a matter of fact, the great bulk of all the witch hazel distilled is made in factories along the line of the Shore Line Division of the New York and New Haven Road. The bark from which it is distilled is all harvested in the New England States, near where the distilleries are located. The savages that bring the bark to the factories bring it in farm wagons. The nearest they come to being untutored savages is when they are at their homes engaged either as country farmers or charcoal burners. There has always seemed to be a great mystery about this popular astringent that is used in almost every home in the country. People know or stop to think that it is distilled from the bark of one of the most common of our wild shrubs. Now that the talk of a trust to control the manufacture of the extract has reached the papers, the facts as to witch hazel are appearing. I have had several of my customers ask me if it is true that witch hazel is not an imported remedy, but merely a Yankee herb concoction. It is a fact that it is entirely a Yankee industry, and all the bark from which the distillation is made is gathered in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut. The latter State is the chief source of the supply. Madison, Guilford, Clinton, Westbrook, and the contiguous Connecticut shore villages have a lot of families that are mainly supported by their harvestings of witch hazel. It is there that the most popular of the proprietary brands of the astringent is all made, herb gathering, Indians labels, and all."

"I don't suppose it is a matter that the average man takes much interest in, but it is a fact, all the same, that the matter of the construction of greenhouses, particularly for rose growing, has become one of so much importance that there are four firms in this city alone that make a specialty of this work," said a Broadway florist. "The construction of greenhouses has become so scientifically perfect that we are able to do more in the way of rose growing than ever before. When I began business, some twenty years ago, the houses were the most primitive sort of affairs, and were erected by any carpenter who knew how to wield hammer and saw fairly well. The roofs were masses of heavy timber, ostensibly to keep the snow from crushing in the glass. Now the roofs are models of light and graceful construction, cedar and steel taking the place of the heavy beams and rafters of my early days. They are as different as their way as are the beds in which the roses are grown and their manner of construction. These are now artificially heated, and a thin bed of soil takes the place of the old bed of mulch and earth a foot or so in thickness. But this is all in keeping with the improved methods of heating and automatically keeping the temperature at exactly the right point week after week, no matter what the temperature may be outside the houses. Rose growing has become almost an art, just as has the construction of the houses, and the demand of the very wealthy for such numbers of roses has made their own rosehouses almost a necessity. That accounts for the horticultural builders who have sprung up as specialists within the past few years. Our business, too, has largely become one of specialists. There are men who devote themselves entirely to roses, others who make a specialty of carnations, others of violets, and still others who make a business of growing only asparagus of the various sorts for decorative purposes. Few of these specialists ever touch any other kind of flower. Most of them would, in fact, be wholly at sea if asked to take charge of greenhouses where all sorts of flowers and plants are grown. The whole business is tending toward the work of specialists, both in growing and selling. The expert at orchids is most in demand just now, as these flowers are the fad of the very rich who can afford them. Those men who made themselves specialists in the chrysanthemum, find their occupation almost gone. They now wish that they had gone in for a special education in the growing of roses, which is in many ways the hardest and most trying of all a florist's specialties, as he has so many enemies to fight to bring his plants and blooms to perfection."

"No, I have not been vaccinated, and I do not intend to be," said a well-known actor, in a Broadway resort, last night. "I am immune, and smallpox can't touch me."

Several men who had been tenderly rubbing their arms moved up nearer to the speaker, and asked why the actor was so confident of his ability to avoid the disease.

"Well, I confess that I was once scared nearly to death by fear of smallpox," said the actor, in explanation, "but what I went through in those days has made me fearless ever since. I was gaining my first stage experience here in New York as a 'super,' some fifteen years ago, when the manager sent for me one morning and told me I must take a small part in the play that night, as the man who played it had been sent to the hospital. There wasn't any trouble about the lines—there were only a few—but I didn't have suitable fleshings or any other costume for the part. I told the manager so. He said that would be all right, as the sick man was just my build, and I could wear his costume. Well, I did as I was told. The next day, when I picked up the paper, I was horrified to read that the man whose part I had taken was suffering from the smallpox, and had been hustled off to North Brother Island or some other place set aside for such patients.

"It then came over me like a flash that I had been wearing the costume worn by a man who had the smallpox. I dared not say anything for fear of losing my job, but you can bet I bought another costume and destroyed the other one as soon as possible. It did not occur to me to get vaccinated, but for the next two weeks every pimple that appeared on my face almost gave me a convulsion. But I did not get the smallpox then, nor have I ever had it since. That's why I consider myself immune."

Hardware Stock Damaged by Fire.

Fire broke out on the first floor of the five-story brick building at 107 Chambers Street last night. The flames caused a damage of $7,000 to the wholesale hardware stock of Bergen & Blumberg, who occupy the second story. The damage to the building was $3,000. Both losses are fully covered by insurance.

COLLEGE ENTRANCE BOARD.

Prof. Butler Gives Out List of Examiners for Many Institutions.

The following list of examiners for the year 1901, appointed by the College Entrance Examination Board of the Middle States and Maryland, was given out yesterday at Columbia University by Prof. Butler, the Secretary of the board:

CHEMISTRY.—Chief examiner, Prof. Ira Remsen, Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md.; associates, Prof. C. L. Speyers, Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.; R. H. Cornish, Wadleigh High School, West Twelfth Street, New York.

ENGLISH.—Chief examiner, Prof. F. H. Stoddard, New York University, New York City, N. Y.; associates, Prof. Edward E. Hale, Jr., Union College, Schenectady, N. Y.; A. H. Smyth, Central High School, Philadelphia, Penn.

FRENCH.—Chief examiner, Prof. A. Guyot Cameron, Princeton University, Princeton, N. J.; associates, Prof. J. C. Bracq, Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Prof. I. H. B. Spiers, Penn Charter School, Philadelphia, Penn.

GERMAN.—Chief Examiner—Prof. M. D. Learned, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Penn. Associates—Prof. Hans Froelicher, Woman's College, Baltimore, Md.; Thomas D. Bronson, Lawrenceville School, Lawrenceville, N. J.

GREEK.—Chief Examiner—Prof. Herbert Weir Smyth, Bryn Mawr College, Bryn Mawr, Penn. Associates—Prof. James R. Wheeler, Columbia University, New York, N. Y.; Dr. David A. Kennedy, Dearborn-Morgan School, Orange, N. J.

HISTORY.—Chief Examiner—Prof. Lucy M. Salmon, Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Associates—Prof. William I. Hull, Swarthmore College, Swarthmore, Penn.; Henry P. Warren, Albany Academy, Albany, N. Y.

LATIN.—Chief Examiner—Prof. Charles E. Bennett, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y. Associates—Prof. J. H. Westcott, Princeton University, Princeton, N. J.; Principal Lawrence C. Hull, Polytechnic Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y.

MATHEMATICS.—Chief Examiner—Prof. Henry Dallas Thompson, Princeton University, Princeton, N. J. Associates—Prof. Thomas S. Fiske, Columbia University, New York; Principal F. S. Boynton, High School, Ithaca, N. Y.

PHYSICS.—Chief Examiner—Prof. E. L. Nichols, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y. Associates—Prof. W. S. Franklin, Lehigh University, Bethlehem, Penn.; Frank Rollins, Peter Cooper High School, New York.

It will be observed that in accordance with the principle upon which the board is organized, the secondary school teachers are represented upon each group of examiners. These examiners will begin at once to prepare the papers and other tests to be set at the uniform examinations, to be held under the jurisdiction of the board at a number of points throughout the United States, beginning on Monday, June 17 next, and continuing throughout the week.

Every college in the Middle States and Maryland, without exception, and almost every college wherever situated, has formally expressed its willingness to accept these examinations as a satisfactory substitution for its own separate admission examination as heretofore conducted.

Prof. Butler states that in New York City the board's examinations will be held at New York University, at Columbia University, at some point in or near Twenty-third Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, and at least one point in the Borough of Brooklyn.

In the opinion of Prof. Butler, the substitution of the board's examinations for the separate college admission examinations heretofore existing will continue with rapidity, until in a few years the only college admission examinations held in June will be the uniform examinations of the board. Each college, of course, will continue to examine candidates in September, in order to cover the cases of delayed and delinquent students and in order to award scholarships and prizes and for other purposes. The secondary schools, at whose instance the College Entrance Examination Board was established, are cordially supporting the plan.

It is announced that students or teachers wishing further information should apply at once to the Secretary of the board, at Sub-station 84, New York City, for the necessary application blanks and for documentary information.

HIGHWAYMAN ON TROLLEY CAR.

Motorman in New Jersey Has Desperate Struggle with a Negro.

WOODBURY, N. J., Jan. 21.—An attempted murder and highway robbery occurred at an early hour this morning on a car of the National Park trolley road. Soon after midnight the car was stopped by a masked highwayman. The motorman, whose name is Borton, was alone on the car. The highwayman jumped on the car and, pointing a revolver at Borton's head, fired. The ball passed through the motorman's cap.

Borton managed to get his own revolver from a pocket in his overcoat and returned the fire. The shot passed through the robber's coat. A fierce fight in the car followed. After struggling desperately for several minutes, the motorman made an effort to get hold of the controller handle, and as he did so the robber broke away and, jumping from the car, escaped. Before he leaped from the car Borton tore the mask from the man's face and saw that he was a negro.

The highwayman fled into the woods and Borton went in pursuit of him. Another car came along and Borton's car was found standing on the track. The crew went in search of him and found him in the woods still looking for the negro.

BLOWS OUT WIFE'S BRAINS.

Then Philadelphian Takes a Drink and Tells What He Has Done.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 21.—John Toomey, forty-two years old, recently discharged as cured after living for four years in the Norristown Insane Asylum, to-night walked into his home at 2,619 East Thompson Street, placed the muzzle of a revolver in his wife's mouth, and blew out her brains. He is a bartender in the saloon of J. J. Ward.

After killing his wife and firing three more shots into her body he went to the saloon, took a drink, and coolly told his friends what he had done. A policeman arrested him and locked him up.

Toomey was married on Sept. 10 last to Miss Annie McGrath of Newark, N. J. He several times showed signs of insanity, and she left him soon after the wedding. A week or two ago she returned to the home. No one saw the tragedy.

Morphine to Execute Criminals.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 21.—In the House of Representatives to-day Representative H. B. Passage moved that the method of executing criminals be changed from hanging to administering morphine. The motion was tabled. The proposed change came up in consideration of a bill fixing the Michigan City Prison as the legal place for the execution of criminals. The bill has been passed by both branches, and is now in the hands of the Governor.

Striking Miners Killed by a Posse.

EARLINGTON, Ky., Jan. 21.—Union miners, 150 strong, to-day started on a march from Boxtown to the Carbondale mines in Hopkins County, to stop the non-union men at work there. On the way a Sheriff's posse of five men attempted to stop them and were answered by a shot. A fusillade followed, the miners retreating. One of their number was killed and another died of his wounds in a few hours. Boxtown is reported deserted, but officers are searching for members of the marching party.

WORKINGMEN AND THE CHURCH

Laborers Express Their Ideas Concerning Their Relations—No Church for Poor Men.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 21.—The Rev. Charles Stelzle will deliver a series of sermons on the workingman and the Church, with the causes and the extent of the gulf between them, beginning next Sunday evening. In gathering his facts he sent out 200 letters to laborers and labor union leaders asking these questions: "What is the chief fault that workingmen find with the Church? How do they regard Jesus Christ? What, in your opinion, takes the place of the Church in the life of the average workingman? What, in your opinion, should engage the attention of the activities of the Church?"

Out of a hundred letters answered, Stelzle says that his correspondents have attacked the Church. He adds that many of the complaints, he feels, are well founded. Nearly every labor leader who has replied has argued that the Church is not for the poor man, that he is not made welcome within its walls, that, in fact, it is a rich man's club. They have written him that many who go to church on Sundays are employers who squeeze their men six days in the week, and they almost all go on to say that the Church is a hypocrisy.

Workingmen differ widely in regard to a substitute for the Church. Some say flatly that it has come to be the saloon; others name the home; while these are many votes for socialism, the labor union, the lodge, or an outing. In socialism many of the workers seem to have found great comfort.

All the replies distinguish between the Church and the religion of Jesus Christ. The majority profess a reverence for the Saviour, though ranging in their estimate of Him from humanitarianism to theophany. But they write that the religion taught by the Apostles is not to be found to-day in any religious constitution, and they had rather read their Bibles, when so inclined, for themselves.

The Church, it seemed to be the consensus of opinion among Mr. Stelzle's correspondents, should discuss sociological questions and such topics as will interest all. They complain that now too often the sermon is an appreciation of a popular novel, while the labor troubles, if treated at all, are handled from one standpoint only.

SUGAR-LADEN VESSEL SINKS.

Steamship Talisman Strikes a Wreck at Entrance to Newtown Creek.

The Norwegian steamship Talisman, Capt. Barenberg, of Tonsberg, laden with sugar from Demerara, sank at the Long Island City side of the mouth of Newtown Creek early yesterday morning.

The vessel left her anchorage off Liberty Island for Newtown Creek, and was not far from the mouth of the creek when she struck. It is supposed, a submerged wreck. She was at once headed for shallow water, and when she had got as far as the Long Island City side of the mouth of the creek she went down bow first. She now lies with her stem in the air and her deck a foot or so above water.

The Unique, the barges Conqueror and Comrade, and the derrick Reliance set to work to try and raise the vessel, the cargo, consisting of bags of raw sugar, being taken out of the hold and loaded on lighters.

The Talisman is a steel ship of 1,178 tons and was built by Roper & Sons at Stockton, England, in 1896. She is 270 feet long, 39 feet beam, and has a depth of 14.4 feet. She is owned by W. Wilhemsen, and her agents are L. W. & P. Armstrong.

Schooner John Russell Going to Pieces.

CAPE MAY, N. J., Jan. 21.—The three-masted schooner John Russell, bound from a North Carolina port for New York, which went ashore on Cold Spring bar in a heavy gale early Saturday morning, will be a total loss. The vessel has been driven further up on the bar, and is going to pieces. The cargo of lumber was jettisoned. The life-saving crew took off the crew of the wrecked schooner this morning.

BOROUGH SCHOOL BOARD.

Meets and Arranges for Many Transfers—Eligible List of Teachers Exhausted.

The School Board of the Borough of Manhattan held a special meeting last evening for the purpose of considering a report of the Committee on Teachers. It was adopted by the board, and this action involves the transfer of about 300 teachers in nearly all department of the schools of Manhattan.

Several new and old schools were reorganized according to the plans recommended by the Board of Superintendents at the last meeting of the Borough Board. The reorganization, in some instances, means the transfer of entire departments of teachers and children; the reorganization being necessitated by the completion of new schools. These new schools will relieve the overcrowded condition of many of the old schools, and also make room for many new pupils.

THE REPUBLICAN CLUB ELECTS NEW PRESIDENT

Henry E. Tremain Defeats ex-Judge W. M. K. Olcott.

OTHER OFFICERS CHOSEN

Successful Candidate Makes a Speech and Ridicules Mr. Cleveland's Recent Public Utterances.

The annual election of officers of the Republican Club last night was very closely contested, General Henry E. Tremain defeating ex-Judge W. M. K. Olcott by two votes. The best of feeling prevailed, and when the result was announced at midnight Mr. Olcott paid a glowing tribute to his successful opponent.

The battle was in reality a victory for the Platt machine, about every office-holding member and his immediate friends being ranged on the side of Gen. Tremain.

There were 306 votes cast, and the successful candidates were:

President—Henry E. Tremain; First Vice President—Charles H. Denison; Second Vice President—Edward A. Newell; Third Vice President—John A. Dutton; Recording Secretary—Edwin A. Jones; Corresponding Secretary—Fabius M. Clarke; Treasurer—J. Edgar Leaycraft.

Executive Committee, for term ending January, 1906—Louis Stern, Charles H. Treat, P. C. Costello, William Einstein, and Lucien Knapp.

Executive Committee, for term ending January, 1905—Henry Melville.

Committee on Membership, for term ending January, 1904—Herbert H. Gibbs, William Greenwood, and Sinclair Tousey.

Committee on Membership, for term ending January, 1902—Jacob Halstead.

Finance Committee—Samuel Thomas, Anson G. McCook, Frank C. Loveland, Daniel O'Dell, and William C. Beer.

Committee on Library and Publications—John McDonald, Alfred E. Ommen, Edmund J. Palmer, Herbert Parsons, Philip Bloch, Robert M. Gignoux, James M. Finlay, William W. Bryan, and Antonio C. Astarita.

When the tellers announced the result ex-Judge Olcott arose and said:

"I move that all of the candidates who received a majority of the votes cast be unanimously elected. I have known Gen. Tremain for twenty-five years, and in all that time he has been conspicuous for his good deeds.

Gen. Tremain will make a President that this club will have reason to be proud of. I honor the man and with every drop of blood that is in me will work hard to make his administration successful. I stand here without any regrets, and I congratulate Gen. Tremain on his victory."

Cheers for Judge Olcott followed, and he called for three cheers for Gen. Tremain who, responding, said:

"Allow me to thank you for this distinction, and to ask your patience and considerate assistance in discharging the responsibilities you have imposed on me for the ensuing year. If it be an imperative custom that I should make a speech, there is no better time to break that record than when I am promoted from the ranks to succeed the distinguished outgoing President—the world's champion speech maker.

"If club prosperity is the rage during my administration, then my speech had better be deferred to the close of my term. If adversity is to befall us, then it were better that I say nothing. If I make promises and fail to do things, I had better have remained silent; if with your help we succeed in doing things, then my speech were needless.

"Anyhow, I find myself for the moment in sympathy on one point with a speaker at the Holland dinner last week. A distinguished Jerseyman came over from Princeton to enjoy the hospitality of the New York Hollanders. He admitted he could not make a speech 'without distress.' He proved it. He admitted he would 'sermonize.' Then the gloom became so heavy that the Dutchmen's pipes went out. Still he talked on; and the atmosphere became so damp that the Hollanders sent for umbrellas. Anyhow, they settled, for themselves the ever-recurring National question, 'What shall we do with our ex-Presidents.'

"Well, this benign philosopher—sometimes known as the 'Stuffed Prophet,' having in mind the defeat of his own party and the consequent National hilarity of the country, reviled America's 'excess of light-hearted gaiety,' and accused everybody, since he himself was 'ill,' of 'headlong National heedlessness.' Complaining, for instance, of the rejection of his so-called arbitration treaty—the most war-provoking treaty negotiated for a generation—Mr. Chamberlain only sees the Nation 'with the germs of decay fastened upon its vitals.'

"By 'germs of decay' he means Republicanism. Out upon such a pitiful, brutal, futile vision. 'Germs of decay' have never sprung from Republican policies. Vigor, intelligence, and vitality always characterize Republican domination. But this is not the time to follow his vicious indictment of the American people.

"It is a phenomenon that a Democratic ex-President deems his own party astray, hopeless unless it can be led back (presumably by himself) to what he vaguely styles 'Democratic first principles,' while the only other Presidential candidate that the Democracy has had for sixteen years replies to him in Yankee fashion by asking him what he calls the 'first principles of Democracy'? Republicans look on calmly and ask themselves, 'What is Democracy?' Grover, with his egotism, thinks he is 'it'; while Bryan, with his frothy charlatanism, says he is 'it.'

"The great Kentucky Democratic editor—doubtless despising both—declares in his New Year's address that the Democratic leaders lack perspective—historic and economic perspective, while, as he says, the Republican leaders show their superiority by not wasting themselves on throes and passions but by addressing themselves to the facts of the situation.

"That is what this club is doing. It is teaching men, young and old, how to be good and useful Republicans. It believes that by being a practical Republican the North American citizen becomes something better than a sentimental prowler in the park of patriotism. It believes that in Nation, State and municipality the people are best served by law makers and by administrations for which the Republican party is directly responsible. In this belief let us all work together for the ensuing year."

Resolutions of respect to the memory of Robert E. A. Dorr and C. C. Beaman were offered. These were spoken to by C. C. Shayne, Charles H. Treat, and others.

Benjamin E. Hall, from the Committee on State and City Affairs, presented a report indorsing the work of the Charter Revision Commission.

Lemuel E. Quigg attacked the report, especially that portion making the Mayor's term of office four years. After debate the report was laid over for two weeks, when it will be discussed at a special meeting of the club.

William E. Kisselburgh and about twenty-five others were elected to membership.

BRYAN SPELLBINDER IN JAIL.

Complications of a Broken Engagement and the Sugar Trust Rouse Justice Gaynor to Action.

Walter J. Anderson, whose spellbinding efforts in behalf of Bryan during the recent campaign caused the breakdown of his health and the severance of his engagement to Miss Emma Tonges of 101 South Ninth Street, Brooklyn, a relative of William Dick, said to be connected with the Sugar Trust, was locked up yesterday in the Adams Street Station, Brooklyn, on complaint of Supreme Court Justice Gaynor.

Anderson, who is an ardent enemy of trusts and monopolies, got the idea into his head that the Sugar Trust had caused his fiancée to break the engagement. Yesterday afternoon he asked of Justice Gaynor an order for the arrest of all of the members of the Sugar Trust, the father of his fiancée, and Mr. Dick. Justice Gaynor sent him to Magistrate Brenner, who refused his request for warrants. The District Attorney was equally inconsiderate.

Returning to Justice Gaynor's court, Anderson created a disturbance and was arrested. Justice Gaynor appeared later in the police station to press the charge against Anderson and have him committed to some institution. Anderson requested that he be allowed to speak to the Justice. His request was granted, and in a very mild tone Anderson said:

"It won't be contempt of court for me to talk to you now, Judge, will it?"

"Certainly not," replied Justice Gaynor.

"Well, I just want to tell you," yelled the prisoner at the top of his voice, "that you'll suffer for this and I'll make you pay for it if it takes a thousand years."

Justice Gaynor, with hands to ears, hurried away, and Anderson, subdued by two policemen, was hustled to a cell.

DON'T AGREE WITH GOV. ODELL.

State Charities Aid Association Dissents from Implied Suggestion as to Charities Inspection.

The Board of Managers of the State Charities Aid Association, of which Prof. George F. Canfield is President, dissenting from the suggestion implied in the statement attributed to Gov. Odell that the society's oversight of State charitable institutions is sufficient and that further supervision by the State Board of Charities is unnecessary, adopted as an official statement of their views, at a meeting yesterday, the following:

The State Charities Aid Association was organized in 1872, five years after the State Board of Charities was established, its object being to assist in the improvement of public charitable institutions by enlisting the active interest of a large body of citizens in their local institutions. It has about one thousand active members residing in forty-six counties of the State. It has a legal right of entrance to public institutions; it has no right to visit private institutions. The association is supported wholly by volunteer subscriptions, receiving no public funds. Its policy is shaped without reference to political or sectarian conditions.

The State Board of Charities is an official body. Its twelve members are appointed by the Governor, and serve practically without compensation. Its expenditures are met from the State Treasury. It is required to inspect all public and private charitable institutions. Under certain circumstances it can issue orders compelling the correction of abuses; its committees can subpoena witnesses, administer oaths, and hold formal investigations. Its President, with the Controller, classifies the employes of State institutions into grades and fixes their salaries, subject to the approval of the Governor. It establishes rules and regulations concerning the admission and retention of inmates supported by public funds in private institutions.

It is evident from the above that it would be impossible for a voluntary association supported by voluntary contributions to undertake the inspection of the very large number of private charitable institutions receiving public funds or to exercise the extensive powers possessed by the State Board of Charities relating to public institutions. The plan proposed for the reorganization of the State Board of Charities is, in our opinion, open to serious objection, aside from the question of its constitutionality. The new plan would sacrifice those features of the organization of the present board which in this as well as in many other progressive States have been found to give strength and conservatism and independence to such a board.

ALLEGES SECRET DIVORCE.

Mrs. Burton Lived for 24 Years Before Husband's Death Without Knowledge of the Decree, She Says.

According to the story told by Mrs. Augusta M. Burton, widow of William A. Burton, a wealthy resident of Suffolk County, L. I., who died there last December, she had lived for twenty-four years before her husband's death in ignorance of the fact that he had obtained a decree of divorce against her.

In 1876 Burton, who was a lawyer and at one time a Justice of the Peace in Suffolk County, secured a divorce from his wife. This decree was granted by default. According to the statement made by Mrs. Burton he did this without her knowledge.

Yesterday Mrs. Burton, through her attorneys, Weil, Wolf & Kramer, asked that the decree of divorce be set aside on the grounds that it was obtained by fraudulent means and by imposing on the Court. She asserts that she has an affidavit by the process server, whose name appears on the affidavit of service, to the effect that he never served the summons and complaint on her, and that his signature to the affidavit of service is a forgery.

Mrs. Burton makes an affidavit that she was not aware of the existence of the decree until the death of her husband. She swears that from the time of granting the decree she and Mr. Burton continued living together until his death.

When Burton died, it is said, he left all his property to another woman, but no will of his can be found in the Surrogate's office.

Mrs. Burton wants to assert her right to her husband's estate, from which she is debarred by the decree of divorce. Argument on the motion to set aside the decree will be heard next Monday.

MRS. LEASE WANTS DIVORCE.

Her Husband Will Not Contest the Action Begun Yesterday.

WICHITA, Kan., Jan. 21.—Mary E. Lease to-day filed suit for divorce from Charles Lease in the District court of Sedgwick County. An affidavit as to the correctness of the allegations set forth in the petition was made by Mrs. Lease in New York. The petition charges the defendant with "being guilty of gross neglect of duty in that the defendant has failed for more than twelve years past to support the plaintiff and her family and to supply them with the ordinary and necessary conveniences of life, such as the defendant, as an able-bodied man, was competent and capable of supplying and furnishing."

Accompanying the petition is a waiver signed by Mr. Lease signifying his intention of not contesting it. They were married at Osage Mission, Kan., Jan. 30, 1873, and there are four children.

LOST HIS LIFE IN CREMATORY.

Blackwell's Island Inmate Slipped While Dumping Refuse.

Word reached the authorities of the Department of Charities last night of a tragedy on Blackwell's Island late in the afternoon in which one of the aged male inmates of the almshouse lost his life in a horrible manner. The victim was Nicholas Ehrsen, seventy-five years old, for five years one of the city's wards.

Every night two of the inmates of the male department are expected to carry a barrel of refuse to the crematory. Yesterday the task fell to Ehrsen and another very old man. They got as far as the platform from which the barrels are dumped, and were "upending" the barrel when Ehrsen slipped, and, with a shriek, fell headforemost into the furnace.

His companion gave the alarm, but it was a considerable time before employes rescued the body. It had been burned to a mere fragment.

INCREASE OF BRITISH NAVY.

London Times Makes a Strong Plea for Larger Fleets.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—In the course of a very strong editorial appeal this morning for strengthening the navy of Great Britain and placing it on an adequate war footing, The Times says:

"Our fleet should be of sufficient size, force, equipment, and readiness for war as shall leave no reasonable doubt as to the result of a naval conflict between Great Britain and any other two naval powers.

"For months past the complement of cruisers attached to the Mediterranean fleet, never adequate at the best of times, was reduced to an inadequacy positively perilous, while, quite lately, the Channel Squadron was for a time entirely deprived of cruisers."

The Times protests against any financial considerations being allowed to interfere with carrying out the increase, and declares that a large addition of torpedo boats and other auxiliaries is required.

SUITS AGAINST SALT TRUST.

Western Packers Ask Damages for Alleged Violation of a Contract.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 21.—The big packing companies are endeavoring to force the Salt Trust to live up to alleged contracts for the delivery of salt to them. Several days ago the Omaha Packing Company began suit against the United States Salt Company (the trust) for $30,000 damages, and to-day a similar suit was instituted by Nelson Morris & Co. of Chicago, damages being placed at $90,000. It is claimed that the salt company entered into a contract to furnish salt for a year at a certain price, and it is alleged that the terms of the contract have been violated. These actions were instituted in the United States Court.

A sensational incident occurred to-day in connection with the Omaha Company's suit. Elmer Turner, Secretary-Treasurer and General Manager of the United Salt Company was being examined before a notary, and he refused to answer certain questions concerning the operations of the company that were asked by the packing company's lawyer. Notary Gott committed him to jail for contempt, but he was subsequently released on a writ of habeas corpus in the sum of $300 bail. The writ was made returnable on Jan. 28.

Col. F. F. Hilder Dead in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Col. F. F. Hilder, Chief Clerk of the Bureau of Ethnology of the Smithsonian Institution, died here to-day, aged seventy years. He was well known as a magazine writer and lecturer.

THE CONSUMERS' LEAGUE.

Mrs. Nathan at the Annual Meeting Speaks of Improved Industrial Conditions.

The tenth annual meeting of the Consumers' League of the City of New York was held in the Assembly Hall, 156 Fifth Avenue, yesterday afternoon. The large hall was crowded with the women members of the league and their friends, only a few men being among the audience.

The President, Mrs. Frederick Nathan, read the report for the past year, showing the progress made by the league in its attempt to put an end to the sweat-shop system, and to bring about better industrial conditions.

"There are now," said Mrs. Nathan, "twenty-three Consumers' Leagues in nine States, and several have combined to form a National league.

"Ten years ago," continued the speaker, "the merchants scorned the crusade of the league; to-day the law provides that one seat shall be provided for every three saleswomen. Ten years ago eight firms only were on the white list of the league; to-day there are forty stores, representing thirty-four firms. Merchants were formerly opposed to any investigation of their establishments, but during the past year three firms have come forward and invited inspection. One firm has even said it preferred to pay its employes more rather than lose the patronage of members of the league.

"A certain manufacturer of this city," the speaker went on, "made his work girls stand not only at their looms, but also when eating their meals. The case was reported to the Factory Inspector, and seats were provided, but they were of so poor a make that they broke down. In all twenty-seven violations of the factory law have been reported. The manufacturers, however, have not been prosecuted.

"Many among those who are now attacking vice are responsible for the conditions they are attacking, it being the consumers' duty to ascertain how and under what conditions the garment she wears is made. The demand by the public for the league's label on the goods bought, which guarantees anti-sweat-shop production, is extensive in Western cities, but not in New York. Here the women appear to be indifferent to the matter."

Dr. Annie S. Daniel, visiting physician of the New York Infirmary, related what she had seen in New York sweat shops. There were, she said, 200 such places in New York, and work was carried on to the extreme limit of human endurance. Women in the last stages of consumption she had found finishing trousers in bed, and these women work on to the very day they die.

Mrs. Florence Kelley and John Graham Brooks, President of the National Consumers' League, also spoke, and David Bispham read some poems appropriate to the purpose of the league.

The following officers were re-elected: Mrs. Frederick Nathan, President; Mrs. Hugh Monroe Dewees, First Vice President; Miss Virginia Potter, Second Vice President; Mrs. J. G. Croswell, Treasurer; Mrs. Charles Fairchild, Recording Secretary; Miss Emma Brace, Corresponding Secretary.

DINNER TO BISHOP HARTZELL.

African Missionary Is Guest of Honor at a Reception by the Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity.

Last night the members of the New York branch of the old college fraternity known as the Phi Gamma Delta gave a big reception and dinner at the Manhattan Hotel to Bishop Joseph C. Hartzell, the African missionary, who will return to-morrow to the scenes of his labors in Africa. About two hundred members of the society and guests sat down to the dinner. The speakers included, in addition to the guest of the evening, the Rev. James Oliver Wilson, who acted as toastmaster; the Rev. William F. McDowell, Franklin Brooks, who has recently returned from Manila; Will Carleton, the poet; Dr. Charles G. Shaw, Dr. Leigh Hunt, Charles E. Lydecker, Judge George G. Reynolds, Dr. William Scott Wadsworth, the Rev. George F. Strobridge, J. Hampton Dougherty, and S. V. White.

Among others present were Bishop Andrews, James M. Buckley, T. A. Vernon, W. C. Steer, Amos E. Withey, C. W. Gordon, and H. C. Withey, the last four being missionaries from Angola, Africa.

Several of the speakers referred with feeling to the critical condition of Queen Victoria, and after "The Star-Spangled Banner" had been sung the company arose and sang "God Save the Queen."

Bishop Hartzell, replying to his cordial reception, said in part:

"People praise me, looking to the work I represent. I thank you from the bottom of my heart. The recollection of this reception will never fade away from my heart, but will strengthen me and my colaborers in our mission. It is a magnificent indorsement of the work on which I am engaged. What impresses me most is the missionary influence of this meeting, and I see in the young men before me a splendid promise for the future, for this is essentially a Christian gathering. We are now entering on a century when every good man will be a citizen of all nations. Africa is the last country in the world to be touched by civilization. To-day it is a continent of magnificent opportunity; to-morrow it will be a country of magnificent triumphs.

"Victor Hugo said that the twentieth century would see a world made out of Africa. This prophecy is being fulfilled to-day. Cities and civilizations will rise on the shores of the great inland lakes, and a new Anglo-Saxon centre of civilization will form in South Africa. The populations of Cape Town and Durban will be doubled. Johannesburg will have a population of 500,000. Before long there will be 10,000,000 whites in South Africa, and we shall see the formation of a federation of States under the British flag."

WEISBARD SUSPECTS RELEASED.

New Haven Authorities Set the Three Italians Free.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 21.—The three Italians, Cotille, Silvani, and Marino, who were arrested here Saturday on suspicion of connection with the murder of Mayer Weisbard, the jewelry salesman whose body was found in a trunk on Pier 11, East River, New York, last Wednesday, have been released from custody.

New York officers, after investigation, decided that these men knew nothing of the murder.

THINK CROWE IS IN ENGLAND.

Men on the Michigan Say He Went as a Cattle Tender.

BOSTON, Jan. 21.—When the steamer Michigan, which arrived to-day from Liverpool, last sailed from this port on Dec. 22, she carried a suspicious stranger, who although well dressed, shipped at the last moment as a cattle tender. He gave the name of Robert Lambert. The police were notified that this man, who looked like Pat Crowe of Omaha, was on the steamer, but too late to intercept him. A cablegram was sent to Liverpool, and after the Michigan reached Liverpool word came back that the officers had found no one who answered to Crowe's description.

The officers and crew of the steamer to-day were shown Crowe's picture, and many of them were certain that the man Lambert was Crowe. The bunkmate of Lambert is certain that the latter and Crowe were identical. Lambert acted queerly toward the end of the trip, giving away the good clothes he wore on coming aboard. He told the deck officer at Liverpool that he wished to get ashore quietly, as he was afraid friends would see him. He seemed to have plenty of money, and in conversation told much about the West.

PRIORI'S LAST APPEAL PROVES FRUITLESS

Governor Refuses to Commute the Murderer's Sentence.

HE MUST DIE IN THE CHAIR

His Wife at Albany Ready to Tell What Became of Revolver with Which He Killed Garagusi.

ALBANY, Jan. 21.—Gov. Odell to-night decided not to interfere in the case of Lorenzo Priori, the convicted murderer of Vincenzo Garagusi, and the convicted man must die.

Gov. Odell gave a hearing to-day on an application for a commutation of sentence to life imprisonment for Priori, now under sentence of death for the murder of Garagusi, in New York City, on Dec. 11, 1898. Priori was represented by ex-Judge B. T. Morgan and Samuel Scarbury. Assistant District Attorney Delaney appeared in opposition.

Outside of the chamber in the ante-room sat the pale-faced, black-garbed wife and daughter of the dead man, Garagusi, waiting, if opportunity offered, to plead with Gov. Odell for vengeance on Priori and to allow the law to take its course. There also sat the wife of Priori, who was equally ready to assist the State, if necessary.

Judge Morgan stated to Gov. Odell that the application was presented by himself and his law partner not as paid attorneys, but because they believed that Priori is an innocent man. After the Court of Appeals had passed upon the case, Judge Morgan went to Priori, at Sing Sing Prison, and told him that he had better prepare to meet his God. Priori protested that he was innocent, and that if he were put to death he would be wronged by the State. He made his confession to his spiritual adviser and in it declared that he was not guilty of the crime.

Garagusi was shot on the stoop of his home, at 530 Broome Street, after a game of cards, at which there was a quarrel. Judge Morgan stated to the Governor that since the conviction of Priori, Napoleone de Medici, an Italian who was passing the stoop where the fatal shots were fired, has stated and is ready to testify that when he heard the shots fired he turned and saw Priori standing on the stoop in such a position that it was impossible for him to have fired the shots. He asked the Governor to swear Medici and to hear from him his testimony.

Gov. Odell—Has the trial court passed upon an application for a new trial?

Judge Morgan—It has passed upon it. It has denied a new trial on a technical ground; holding that it was too late to introduce the new evidence as a part of the record of the trial.

Assistant District Attorney Delaney—The Court of Appeals has passed upon this alleged new evidence. It has sustained the lower court in denying the application for a new trial and has in its opinion stated that the new evidence is not sufficient to warant a new trial.

He then read from the opinion of the Court of Appeals in substantiation of that statement.

Gov. Odell stated that he believed that a man on trial for murder should be given every opportunity to prove his innocence.

"The Governor of the State has a grave responsibility in a matter of this character, but I do not think that he should change the determination of the Court of Appeals after it has passed upon a matter in a most careful manner."

Here Mr. Delaney interposed, saying that the case was not one of circumstantial evidence, and that at the trial three or four witnesses testified that the shots were fired by Priori. "We have evidence," Mr. Delaney continued, "which we will introduce, if new testimony is admitted, which will show that Priori threw away the pistol. Seven Judges of the Court of Appeals have passed upon this evidence, and have ruled that it is not of a character sufficient to have changed the result of the first trial."

Gov. Odell—I have every sympathy for a man in the position of Priori, but I cannot let my sympathies run away with my judgment. When this application was made to me I was laboring under the impression that the evidence to be presented to me was entirely new. I now find that the courts have passed upon it. There is no doubt that Priori has had a fair trial, and that the courts have passed on this evidence. I don't see how I can take any action on this evidence.

Judge Morgan then asked for permission to file a brief, and Gov. Odell granted his request. Mr. Delaney, in view of that request, stated that he desired to make an oral argument. He gave in detail the circumstances attending the murder. He stated that there were four witnesses who saw Priori fire the shot, and two who saw him run from the scene of the shooting.

Judge Morgan made answer, and introduced a dramatic feature at the hearing. "I am here because I believe Priori is innocent," he said. "I am here, not as a lawyer, but as a man, pleading for an innocent man. This man is alone in the world. He has no relatives or friends with him in the hour of his affliction. Without this chamber sits his wife, the woman who pleaded with me to do my best for him when he was indicted, ready to come in here and state that she believes her husband is guilty of the crime. And why? Because Priori in his confession said that the murderer was her brother."

Mr. Delaney here interrupted Judge Morgan, stating: "Mrs. Priori is here. She is not ready to swear that her husband killed the murdered man. She is ready to swear, however, that when she visited her husband at Sing Sing he asked her to go home and state that the murder was committed by her brother. She refused to do so, saying: 'Why should I do so? My brother is not guilty. Although I love you, I will not wrong my brother.' Priori then told her that she need not come to see him any more.

"If there ever was a cold-blooded murderer, it is this man Priori. When arrested he suggested to his wife's father that his son had better run away, as he might be arrested. From the first he tried to throw the guilt on his brother-in-law.

"We have abundance of new evidence if it is needed to prove beyond doubt that Priori is the murderer. We can produce a man who saw Priori throw away his revolver, who picked it up, and gave it to a colored boy, who sold it, at a pawnshop. Later the boy and Mrs. Priori redeemed it, and they threw it into the North River from a ferryboat. This man should be put to death. There would be absolutely no justification for any interference."

The hearing was closed without any witnesses being called.

KERR SOON TO BE TRIED.

Case Will Be Called After Civil Calendar Is Cleared.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 21.—County Prosecutor Emley said to-day that he would place on trial as soon as possible George Kerr, jointly indicted with McAlister, Campbell, and Death for the murder of Jennie Bosschleter. The Prosecutor said, however, that the civil calendar in Judge Nixon's court would first have to be cleared before Kerr's case can be taken up. This would probably be a week or ten days, but the Prosecutor said he hoped to reach the Kerr case on Monday next.

When asked when he would move for sentence in the case of the three men already convicted of murder in the second degree, the Prosecutor intimated that the three men may not be sentenced before the trial of Kerr.

Lawyer John W. Harding, counsel for Kerr, and ex-City Judge Kerr are busy arranging for the defense of Kerr. It is said that Campbell and Death will be called as witnesses by the defense to prove that Kerr had no part in the drugging of Jennie Bosschleter in Sall's saloon, and that he did not ill-treat her after the party left that saloon.

There is considerable speculation here as to what the trial of McAlister, Death, and Campbell cost the county. While the exact figures cannot be learned the amount is thought to be about $2,500.

Prof. Witthaus, the New York expert, will probably cost the county $1,500 for his analysis and his attendance at the trial.

The man who receives the least in connection with the case is the Prosecutor. He is not a salaried officer, and is paid so much for each conviction. For the hardest week's work he ever accomplished in his life, without counting the week of preparation, the State allows Mr. Emley $15, just what it pays for conviction in a common case of assault and battery.

The Wanamaker Store

$24,000 Worth of SILKS to be sold for $12,000

This is the most radical offering of fine and beautiful Silks that has recently occurred in the trade. The stock was cleared a few weeks ago of what we thought undesirable goods, and they are gone. Now come new plans, with a reorganization of the stock, and a general stock-reduction is demanded. So these exquisite silks, that were thought faultless two weeks ago, are reduced a half, some more, a few of the choicest a little less. There are exquisitely embroidered silks for evening wear at a quarter their original price, or less—rare opportunities for super-elegance at the cost of ordinary silks.

Then the remnant range has been lengthened, and a large collection of remnants, up to fifteen yards in a piece, have been marked at HALF PRICE.

Yet the best part of the sale is perhaps the more staple goods. The list is given, so that you can know just what is here, and its new price. Every woman that loves beautiful garments is interested.

At $6 a yard—Two White Gros Grain Sashes, with ends, warp-printed in beautiful flowers and fringed at both ends; 12½ in. wide and 3 yards long. Yesterday's price was $12.

Silk Remnants—Half Price—

A thousand remnants in the most wanted weaves and colors, with a good sprinkling of blacks among them. Our whole silk stock has been carefully examined, and with but one thought in mind—all ends must be sold before stock-taking. So every end of silk from 1 yard up to 15 yards, in our stock, goes on sale to-day at exactly half of yesterday's prices by the yard. Of course, we cannot cut them at these little prices.

SHOE Bargains

For men, women and boys. At the south-west corner of Fourth avenue and Ninth street, just opposite the main shoe store, are the bargain shoes for men. An acquaintance with this store will be found very profitable at all times. This is the sort of values obtainable there:

Men's shoes, of all kinds of leathers, scarcely two pairs alike, and all good $3 and $4 qualities, at $1.20 and $1.70 a pair. Perfect, except for the soiling that comes from handling. Not all sizes.

Boys' shoes at $1. Values up to $1.75.

Bargain shoes for women are in the basement, just under the main shoe store. Deserving particular mention to-day are these women's shoes at $1. They are mostly large and small sizes—no middle sizes and widths. If your size is in the collection, you save $2.

The MUSLIN UNDERWEAR Is More Attractive Than Ever

Maybe it's because of the attractive showing on the Main aisle, with better opportunity for you to see how really fine these garments are.

Probably it's because you have gotten over the fatigue of holiday effort, and are ready to enjoy shopping again. Maybe you didn't realize the full significance of this Sale of White until some friend told you how little it cost to select very beautiful undergarments in this January sale.

But the best of the sale will soon be over—lots are being exhausted every day. And no manufacturers can be found to-day to match these goods and prices. The opportunity is gone when these lots end.

A Radical Clean-up of WINTER COATS

Wearing time is not half over, but, by our policy, selling time is. We want these coats to find their proper usefulness in the next day or two, and make such sharp and positive price reductions as should take them away to-day as fast as people can try them on.

Not an old coat—not a bad style in the entire lot. These are our latest and best, smartest and most stylish coats—Newmarkets, three-quarter coats and jackets—every sort and style. This hint of prices:

At $25—Coats worth up to $50—Of kersey, in various attractive patterns. All that remain of the season's best styles. A number of three-quarter garments are also included in this offering.

At $50—Coats worth up to $110—This collection includes three-quarter coats and Newmarkets of exceptional value and style; mostly one of a kind; imported and domestic. All exclusive.

Two groups of short jackets of kersey, melton and cheviots, at $10, values to $20; at $12, values to $26. A number of three-quarter coats are included in the $12 offering that are excellent traveling garments.

Other lots of short jackets at $15 and $25, values $27.50 and $43.

Velour Jackets—The entire stock of these short jackets is to-day divided into three groups:

Values up to $35 at $18 Values up to $75 at $38
Values up to $100 at $60

Many of these in the $60 lot have collars and revers of mink, Persian or chinchilla trimming.

Second floor, Broadway.

TOWELS

Carriage and SLEIGH ROBES

Bishop robes are Indian-tanned—the red man excels in that work. The robes are not affected by a wetting, do not crack, and with ordinary care will last a lifetime. There's an interesting gathering of them here. Doubly interesting, inasmuch as it comprises wonderfully accurate imitations of the skins of various animals, and from the manner, too, of their pricing.

Bishop robes, in imitation of black goat, at $8.50 to $22.50.
Black cub bear, $12.50 to $25. Brown grizzly, at $12.50 to $17.50.
Chinese and Japanese marten, black, soft and silky, at $15 to $35.
Wolf, $35. Lynx, $35. Chinese deer, $45. Tiger cat, $35. Gray fox, $40.

Third Floor.

Boys' CLOTHING

More radically reduced prices on reduced lots. Some 3-piece suits, for boys of 9 to 16 years, are now marked $4—this lot holds values up to $7.

And here's a group of 2-piece suits, comprising values up to $10. Choice at $5. Sizes for boys of 9 to 16.

High-grade overcoats—some stylish Raglans among them. Of various fabrics, in grays and olive green; sizes for boys of 6 to 16 years. Values up to $15. Price, $9.

All-wool trousers—3 to 16 years—75c.

Second floor, Ninth street.

Vnder-price Store

Silver, shoes and drapery stuffs are the leading features here to-day. But you'll find other tid-bits all around. All wanted merchandise in perfect condition, though priced much under the regular value:

PERSONAL TAXES FOR 1901

Official Record of Assessments Levied on Wealthy New Yorkers.

Total Amount on the Books Estimated at $3,000,000,000 — Period for "Swearing Off" Ends on May 1.

An official record of the personal assessments levied on 1,000 or more of New York's wealthy men and women was made public yesterday by President Feitner of the Department of Taxes and Assessments. A formal demand was made on the city officials by several newspapers and the Tax Commissioners decided to give the widest publicity to their work in levying personal assessments.

President Feitner explained yesterday that the assessments are tentative, and from now until May 1 many of the persons assessed may call and swear off all or a part of the assessments.

It was estimated yesterday that the tax officials have on their personal books assessments to the amount of $3,000,000,000. This was about the same amount as was levied on last year. When the "swearing off" process was completed this sum was reduced to $475,000,000 on which taxes were paid into the City Treasury.

The tax officials are trying this year to collect a larger sum from personal assessments to relieve the burden of taxes on real estate.

The official list showing names and assessments for 1901 given out by President Feitner yesterday is as follows:

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL

Variety Farce at the Victoria the Only Novelty.

Mr. Goodwin in "When We Were Twenty-one" and Mr. Willard in "The Middleman"—Gossip of the Stage.

"The Night of the Fourth" is the pyrotechnically suggestive title of a new variety farce performed with much vivacity and appreciable skill to the delight of a big crowd at Hemmerstein's Victoria last night. When a piece of this description is dull it is speedily condemned, but when one is as lively as this it will generaly run through a season profitably. The new show has been brought to town to fill out an odd fortnight at the popular music hall, and it will draw crowds while it is on view.

If it had been put forward for a long run, however, it would demand nothing more than a passing notice. It is in three acts, and is quite plotless and seemingly formless. Experienced observers know that that formlessness is only seeming, and that there are rule and method in the construction of even such frivolous entertainments. The jokes must be in the right place or they will miss fire, and there is a sort of mysterious logic which governs the introduction of the "turns."

The principal performers are Mr. Bulger, a plain gentleman with a confidential manner and an original vein of humor; Mr. Walter Jones, who contributes two new caricatures of poor humanity, dances the fandango, and pushes a wheelbarrow; Miss Maude Courtney, who sings some of the old Stephen Foster ballads; Miss Josie de Witt, who displays a shrill voice and likewise creditable skill in the use of the fiddle; Mr. Joseph Coyne, who temporarily fills the place of Mr. Matthews, Mr. Bulger's habitual partner in melody and sidewalk conversations; a quartet of malo singers of the ancient type, and four skillful acrobatic dancers, namely, Daisy Gehrue, Phillip Ryley, and Ralph and Reba Bicknell. The dancing is all remarkably good. The singing is never offensive, as it often has been in this season's poor crop of variety farces.

To say more on this subject would be neither enlightening nor profitable. Folks who are fond of this sort of entertainment who like this piece very much and will tell their friends so. Those who do not like high kicking, "coon" songs and dances, pantomimic jokes, and strident music hall voices would best stay away. But "The Night of the Fourth" will be a "go."

MR. WILLIARD AS BLENKARN.

A Good Performance of "The Middleman" at the Garden Theatre.

Mr. Willard began the final week of his engagement at the Garden Theatre last evening with an admirable performance of Cyrus Blenkarn, the potter, in "The Middleman," by Henry Arthur Jones. This character, in which the distinguished English actor made his first appearance in America more than ten years ago, has since remained conspicuously in his repertory, and it is doubtful if his acting in any other rôle appeals so strongly to the popular heart or has done so much to establish his reputation.

Particularly does this work reveal the large variety of power at his command, his sweep of passion, and the potency of his acting in strongly pathetic situations. The scenes of Act II., in which the potter, having reached the moment of triumph in his art, suddenly learns of the disgrace and flight of his daughter; and the stirring situations of the third act at the furnaces, are invested by Willard with remarkable emotional power.

The performance of the old play was warmly applauded by a numerous and appreciative audience. Miss Maud Hoffman was excellent as the potter's best loved daughter, and the acting otherwise was generally good. Mr. Cane reappearing in his original rôle of loquacious Batty Todd.

"WHEN WE WERE TWENTY-ONE."

Another Cordial Reception for the Comedy at the Knickerbocker.

That "When We Were Twenty-One" was far from having outworn its welcome when its run was suddenly closed here last season was indicated by the cordiality of the greeting that marked its reappearance at the Knickerbocker Theatre last evening. Of the play as a medium for the exploitation of the skill of Nat Goodwin and his wife, Maxine Elliott, this paper has already spoken at length. Neither play nor actors therefore seem to call for further words of deserved commendation, at this time. They have had that.

But the reproduction of so good a comedy so cleverly acted is something like a welcome oasis in the theatrical desert, where oases are so few and the stretches of aridity so many, and some of them so very, very sandy. That lovers of the theatre are on the lookout for such revivifying spots was evidenced by the fact that in spite of the weather the theatre was filled last night to its capacity. For play and players there was as hearty a reception as at its original production here, even though the audience was far from the typical first night assemblage.

Like good wine, age seems to have benefited the players, even though New York had once accepted them as well-nigh perfect. As the particular guardian angel of that particularly obstreperous boy known as The Imp, Mr. Goodwin seems to have struck even a truer note, if that were possible. At all events, he was intensely fatherly and manly in the sense that is all too rarely seen in the plays of to-day. If possible, too, Miss Elliott has grown more lovely and lovable as the ward of Dick. It is perhaps possible for a woman to be more adept and more bewitching in her lovemaking than she is in the character of Phyllis, but the average man's dreams hardly go beyond such a charming picture as she made last night, nor would he care to have them. That fate and the dramatist should give her so manly a man was eminently proper in the opinion of all who followed the pretty story of the play, for he seemed "the pick of the basket." Some might doubt if there was really any one in the quartet of guardians for the Imp who was really deserving of such a prize.

As to the acting of the supporting company it was all that could be desired. They filled the pictures satisfactorily, were in the true spirit constantly, and all of them competent to tell the story of the playwright without striking false notes in any of the many phases of life, passion, love, or sorrow depicted. Harry Woodruff, as The Imp who made so much trouble for his governors, was as successful as at the previous production in enlisting the sympathy of the audience and earning their plaudits.

"When We Were Twenty-one" is down as the first play of the Goodwin-Elliott engagement at the theatre. Last night's reception of the play and players would seem to indicate that it is the only one they will need.

Mr. and Mrs. Breitner's Recital.

Mr. Ludwig Breitner, pianist, and his wife, violinist, gave a recital yesterday afternoon at Mendelssohn Hall. The programme was admirably arranged for a recital of the kind. It was dignified and artistic. There were only three numbers—Schumann's sonata in D major, the Saint-Saëns sonata, Opus 75, and Schutt's suite, Opus 44. This is all pleasant music to hear. Mr. Breitner has been heard here frequently and the qualities of his art are well known. He plays clearly and crisply and with a certain grace. Mrs. Breitner is new to our concert rooms. Her appearance, it must be admitted, was injudicious. The best that can be said of her is that her playing is generally in tune. The audience yesterday was one of fair size and great cordiality.

"La Boheme" at the Opera.

Puccini's melodious opera "La Bohème" was repeated at the Metropolitan Opera House last night. The audience was not one of the largest of the season, but it was evidently well pleased with the performance. If one finds the music of this work somewhat too sugary to express the emotions of the scene, he can nevertheless find much to delight the most fastidious musical taste in the beauties of the orchestration. The score teems with instrumental beauties. Every instrument has something interesting to say. Even the xylophone is used with ingenuity and appropriateness. When it comes to the production and the performance the heartiest praise can be bestowed. The opera has been admirably mounted at the Metropolitan, and the preparation of the stage effects and action has been careful and unusually intelligent.

The cast last night was the same as at the last performance, and it could not well be improved. Mme. Melba was again a vocally delightful Mimi and Mr. Salesa was a virile and interesting Rudolf. Miss Scheff was pert and vivacious as Mussetta and Messrs. Campanari, Gilibert, and Journet were excellent as the Bohemians. Mr. Mancinelli conducted.

THEATRES AND MUSIC HALLS.

CARNEGIE LYCEUM.—The second week of the "Clown and the Locket," the new play for children, began last evening.

FOURTEENTH STREET THEATRE.—Last night ushered in Chauncey Olcott's third week as the hero of "Garrett O'Magh."

DEWEY THEATRE.—Phil Sheridan's City Sports Burlesque Company presented "Broadway to Peek-in." The olio included a list of well-known artists.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—A rather important part was taken by the enthusiasm of the large audience which witnessed the performance of Charles Frohman's production of "Hearts Are Trumps" last evening. The presentation of this melodrama is the first since it was presented at the Garden Theatre.

AMERICAN THEATRE.—"A Celebrated Case," an exceptionally good melodrama, was revived last night by the stock company of this theatre. If one may judge by the reception given it last night, it is sure of appreciation from the clientèle of this house. The scenery is excellent and the cast competent.

MURRAY HILL THEATRE.—Mrs. C. A. Doremus's version of "Nell Gwyn" in the hands of the Donnelly Stock Company proved one of the many interesting plays recently presented by this enterprising organization. The attraction should prove entertaining to the patrons of this theatre for the rest of the week.

HARLEM OPERA HOUSE.—It was a large audience that greeted the presentation of "Sweet Anne Page," with Miss Lulu Glaser in the leading rôle, last night. The audience was very enthusiastic, and lost no chance to give vent to its satisfaction. The company with few exceptions was the same as the one seen here before.

KOSTER & BIAL'S.—Manager Hashim has provided one of the best of drawing cards for his patrons, and large audiences were present at both performances yesterday. There are several features on the long bill, with chief honors belonging to Ugo Biondi, the change artist; Hope Booth, who offered some pretty spectacular poses, and the grand opera trio, Mme. Tavary, Julius Perotti, and A. S. Veron, who rendered a scene from "Il Trovatore."

NEW YORK THEATRE.—That the burlesque company at this house, which continues to offer the review "The Giddy Throng," has a just claim to its right to rank with the best in the field of burlesque and vaudeville was evidenced last night, when a large and enthusiastic audience greeted the company. The olio which precedes the review abounds in strong acts. The new spectacular ballet by Marwig called "The Devil's Dance" was well received.

PROCTOR'S ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIFTH STREET THEATRE.—Lillian Burkhart made her first Harlem appearance in some time and played that delightful little sketch called "A Passing Fancy." The specialties were the Streator Zouaves, Harry Watson's Comedy Company in the farce, "The Two Flats"; Jess Vernon, ventriloquist; Talbot and Davidson, in a satire; Losh and Hupp, fantastic novelty; Frank Urban, musical act; new moving pictures in the kalatechnoscope, and some dozen more.

PROCTOR'S FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE.—The farce "Dickey," played by Clayton White, Marie Stuart, and Belle D'Arcy, was the leading feature at this house yesterday. Ralph Johnston's bicycle performance and Marcel's living art reproductions were of interest. The others were John W. Albaugh, Jr., and his stock company, in "Trenton, '76"; Three Mascagnos, unique acrobats; Press Eldridge, Dillon brothers, parody singers; Winona and Banks Winter, in a singing act; Will F. Denny, the tenor; Montague and West, instrumentalists, and the Gaspard brothers.

PROCTOR'S PALACE.—The Russell brotners headed the programme yesterday, and their "Irish Servant Girl" act raised just as many laughs as ever. The remaining part of the bill was an extremely good one, and listed Al Leech and the Three Rosebuds in the musical farce, "Examination Day at School," by Joseph Hart; Mr. and Mrs. Perkins D. Fisher, in Ezra Kendall's rural playlet, "The Half-Way House"; Lew Sully, blackface comedian; Jane Whitbeck, singing comedienne; Doherty's Poodles, educated canines; Johnnie Carroll, dialect singing comedian, and the Martine brothers on the rebounding table.

PROCTOR'S TWENTY-THIRD STREET THEATRE.—Rose Coghlan delighted the audiences yesterday with her admirable acting in a sketch entitled "The Ace of Trumps." Louis Massen was very good in support of the star. The other numerous specialties in the long bill included Joe Welch, in his quaint Hebrew character studies; Mlle. Delbosq, the Parisian wire performer; Fields and Ward, comedians; Spenser Kelly, the baritone; Lew Hawkins, minstrel monologuist; Mr. and Mrs. Augustin Neuville, in the first production of "How It Ended"; Lizzie B. Raymond, singing comedienne, and Maddox and Wayne, acrobatic comedy.

KEITH'S UNION SQUARE THEATRE.—Marshall P. Wilder, appearing in a new budget of jokes and monologue work accompanied by musical effects which added considerable to his act, took chief honors of the entertainment provided at the house. Fanny Rice also proved one of the important numbers in the programme. She offered an exceedingly clever playlet, a burlesque, "Nell Gwyn," by Robert Griffin Morris. The remaining part contained a farce by Charles Wayne and Anna Caldwell called "To Boston on Business." Charley Case talked on various subjects, and Mlle. Lotty was seen in a series of poses.

WAS KNOCKED DOWN AND DIED.

Thomas Davis Arrested in New Jersey on Homicide Charge.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Jan. 21.—Thomas Davis of Keasbey, near Perth Amboy, has been arrested for the murder of John Weiland of Keasbey, who died on Saturday from concussion of the brain, brought on, it is claimed, by a fall following a blow from Davis. Weiland, who was about thirty-five years of age, was playing pool at the Catherine Inn, Keasbey, on New Year's night, when he accidentally struck Davis with his cue.

Davis, it is alleged, retaliated by knocking Weiland down. The man struck on his head, and was so badly injured that he had to be sent to St. Michael's Hospital, at Newark, for treatment. He died there Saturday. Davis is about twenty-one years of age. He was taken before Justice Pickersgill who held him on the murder charge.

FIRE IN WALKER STREET.

Breaks Out in a Laundry and Causes $10,000 Damage.

Two alarms were given for a fire in the seven-story brick building at 117 Walker Street last night. The fire broke out in the rear of the fourth floor, occupied by the American Steam Laundry Company. Boiler fires are kept going over night, the police say, and they think the blaze started in the rear of the laundry.

A second alarm was turned in by Chief Croker, who arrived shortly after the first call. After an hour's fight the flames were extinguished. Chief Croker estimated the total damage to the American Laundry Company and the Robert Jones Company along with the damage to the building at $10,000.

The first and second stories are occupied by Owen Walsh, dealer in electrical supplies, and the third floor by A. G. Marks, dealer in ivory specialties.

Glass Plants to Close April 1.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD CITY, Ind., Jan. 21.—The American Window Glass Company and the Independent Manufacturers' Associations, representing eighty factories of 2,542 pots' capacity, have agreed to close their plants April 1 instead of June 1, as has been customary for a number of years. This will make the present blast seven months, two months short of what was anticipated by the workmen. The object of the shutdown is to curtail the production and maintain prices. About 30,000 workers, one-half of whom are in the Indiana gas belt, will be affected.

Burned in an Illinois Hotel.

KEWANEE, Ill., Jan. 21.—Fire to-day destroyed the Commercial House and caused the death of three men—C. C. Cotton of Terre Haute, Ind.; Elmer Peterson of Galesburg, Ill., and James Fischer of Walnut, Ill. Martin Jacobs of Chicago jumped from the third story. He was hurt internally, but will recover.

INJURED DETECTIVE'S RAVINGS.

Pearson, Lying in Critical Condition, Talks of Money—Reported to Have Fought with Fellow-Detective.

Detective Pearson of the Seventeenth Precinct Station is lying at the J. Hood Wright Hospital with a fractured skull, two black eyes, and bleeding from the mouth, ears, and nose. He has been unconscious, except at rare intervals, since Friday, and is tied down by his hands and feet to his bed. During his ravings he says:

"If you don't whack up I will tell the Captain and you will not get a cent." "How much money have you got?" "You have got more than that," and he repeats these sayings frequently.

He is not expected to live. The police have hushed the matter up. He was injured on Friday and was taken to his home, a flathouse at 236 West One Hundred and Twenty-first Street, in an unconscious condition and a private physician was called. On Sunday afternoon his condition became so grave that he was sent by his physician to the J. Hood Wright Hospital in an ambulance. Mrs. Pearson refused to talk about the matter.

It is reported that another detective had a fight with the injured man last Friday and knocked him out. This could not be verified last night.

THE POOR OF SIAM.

What Consul King Says About the Conditions in That Country.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Under a report from Bangkok, dated Nov. 18, 1900, Consul General Hamilton King sends an interesting account of the extraordinary living habits of the Siamese. Mr. King says that one who has never been outside of the United States can hardly form in his imagination a picture of what living means to the plain people of Siam.

The laborer, earning wages from 15 to 30 cents a day, finds himself confronted with expenses ranging, for example, in the furniture line, as follows: Chairs, from 90 cents to $3; bedsteads, from $9 to $15, and dining tables, $6 to $10. Accordingly, the laborer sits upon the floor in his home, sleeps upon a grass mat, cooks on a box of earth, and eats his rice, fish, and vegetables out of a common dish with his family. Forks, knives, and spoons are unknown to him. Eggs, which are cheap, he has at times; chickens on rare occasions, and beef is almost unknown in the common laborer's meat.

The man's house is a bamboo structure with a tap roof, and generally consists of one small room about ten feet square, which is sometimes divided by a low partition. Within these rough walls and on a floor of rough boards or split bamboo he and his wife and his family eat and cook and sleep. The clothing of himself and family is the most meagre; a cloth around the loins—the woman generally wears a cloth around the breast also—no shoes, seldom a covering for the head, holiday and working day alike. The more fortunate on festive occasions may indulge in a piece of bright-colored cotton cloth thrown about their shoulders.

While the Siamese bathe more frequently than some other people, and to all outward appearance are the most cleanly of persons, the contracted and meagre condition of the poor man's home renders it most filthy and unsanitary. Nature is most kind in this tropical climate, and yet, with all her gentleness, the death rate among the poor is enormous.

The mechanics differ from the laboring classes in that they live together more closely packed as tenants in large bamboo or wooden houses that modern ideas have brought about. They also have nothing in their homes which might be called furniture, but their food is more substantial. Yet the mechanic's table cannot be compared with that of the humblest laborers in America.

In connection with the outlook for the Siamese poorer classes, the Consul General says that it is interesting to note that while wages have advanced during the last twenty years some 75 or 80 per cent., the eight staple articles upon which the natives depend for food—rice, fresh and dried fish, ripe and green cocoanuts, salt, bananas, and dried chiles—have each advanced anywhere from 157 to 715 per cent., or an average of 309 per cent., during the same time.

REFRIGERATORS IN BRAZIL.

They Find a Ready Market Throughout the Country—Use of Ice Increasing There.

American refrigerators find a ready market in the State of Sao Paulo and throughout Brazil, according to Consul John J. Girimondi of Santos. The consumption of ice in Santos and in the State of Sao Paulo is increasing every day, according to the report of the Consul, this being due to the increasing demand for ice in the restaurants, hotels, and other public places where drinks are served.

Foreigners, especially Americans, Englishmen, and Germans, who are unaccustomed to a tropical climate, are loudest in the call for the commodity. There is a good opening in that country, Mr. Girimondi says, for an ice company doing business on the American plan, delivering ice from house to house. A visit to the fish and meat markets shows that the use of ice is almost unknown there, the reason being that ice is not only too dear, but too difficult to procure. The Consul goes on to say that he has no doubt that if an ice company existed it could build up an enormous trade, also, selling to vessels arriving and departing from Santos.

The sale of refrigerators is constantly on the increase in proportion to the increase in the use of ice. Up to the present time, however, only the best hotels have refrigerators, though they are beginning to be used in saloons. Refrigerators so far have not been introduced to any extent in the private houses of Santos. Only about one in twenty meat dealers uses refrigerators at the present time, and if properly introduced, there is no reason why these should not meet with a ready sale.

BASEBALL DECLARATIONS.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 21.—W. H. Watkins, President of the new American Association, and A. H. Koch, owner of the Detroit franchise, held a conference here to-day with John T. Brush, Chairman of the National League Circuit Committee. At the conclusion of the conference President Watkins made public a statement of the declaration of principles of the new association and the requests made of the National League, which the Circuit Committee of the major organization has granted, as the signatures of all parties show. The document, in part, follows:

We unequivocally declare our faith in and allegiance to the National agreement of professional baseball associations, and our purpose if given recognition and granted territorial rights under said agreement.

We recognize the necessity of the right of reservation, which stands for the same principle in baseball that a warranty deed or a deed of trust does in the commercial world; that is to say, the right to such reasonable security to property in this as are necessary to justify and protect the large amounts of capital invested and which are imperative in every city for the equipment of parks, in order that the game may be placed before the public in its best and most approved form.

Reaffirming in part and in whole the foregoing, we petition the National League and American Association of Professional Baseball Clubs, the National Board of Arbitration, and the Circuit Committee of the National League, severally and jointly, as follows:

To allow us the right to use the name American Association.

That we be given territorial rights in the Cities of Milwaukee, Detroit, Louisville, Indianapolis, Boston, Washington, Baltimore, and Philadelphia.

That each club in this association be allowed to reserve five players each year.

That a committee from each organization be given one day each year for a joint discussion of baseball interests.

That this association be accorded a representative upon the National Board of Arbitration and upon the Players' Rules Committee.

After many more petitions and declarations the document was signed by the owners of the several association clubs.

Ex-Judge Olcott Not a Candidate.

Ex-Judge Olcott last night, in referring to a story connecting his name with the anti-Tammany nomination for the Mayoralty, said: "I am in no sense a candidate. I would not accept a nomination if it were handed me on a gold platter backed by a certificate of election. I know of no place in which a man can find so much trouble as that of Mayor of New [illegible]"

To Work for Charter Amendments.

The Citizens' Union is taking active steps to secure the enactment by the Legislature of the amendments to the charter proposed by the Charter Revision Commission. President R. Fulton Cutting yesterday sent out letters to civic and political organizations opposed to Tammany Hall asking them to suggest persons to serve on a committee of 250 that is to urge the passage of the Charter Revision Commission's recommendations. No invitations were sent to Republican or Democratic organization men.

PART OF SLEEPING CAR SUSPENDED OVER RIVER

Catastrophe Narrowly Averted Near New Jersey Shore.

ACCIDENT ON A FERRYBOAT

Air Coupling Apparatus Bursts and the St. George Slips Back with a Tremendous Crash.

While twenty passengers slept peacefully in a rear car of the Federal Express yesterday morning, their car, the St. George, slipped backward on its track aboard the transport ferryboat Maryland and hung suspended over the waters of the North River. The Maryland was on her way from the Harlem River terminal of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad to the Jersey City end of the Pennsylvania tracks, having aboard five cars of the express train from Boston.

The Maryland, after leaving Harlem at 2:15 o'clock, had reached a point 200 or 300 yards from the New Jersey shore when Quartermaster George Van Gilder heard a crash. He and some of the boat's hands rushed toward the stern of the boat, whence the noise came, and found that the rear car had broken all the chains and cables that held it on the track and had slipped backward until its rear truck, holding the four rear wheels, was hanging over the edge of the boat. There it hung. When the wheels slid over, the guard rail, a long iron bar which, stretching from truck to truck along the bottom of the car, struck the deck. So the car could slip no further.

Capt. Flood, who commanded the ferryboat, was hastily summoned, and, after the engines had been stopped long enough to allow the hands to fasten the detached car firmly in its hanging position, full steam was ordered again, and the boat sped as fast as she could into her slip at the Adams Express Company's dock, four blocks above the ferry slips of the ordinary Pennsylvania Railroad river boats. From there tracks lead through the yards and connect with the elevated railroad structure further down in the city.

Accounts gathered from a deckhand on the Maryland and from people at the terminal of the Harlem Road show that the accident, which the railroad men declare to have been the most remarkable they ever witnessed, and which came so near to being a fearful fatality, was the result of the sudden and unaccountable bursting of the air coupling apparatus joining the St. George and the Santiago, both of which cars were half filled with passengers. These two cars occupied the tracks on the port side of the boat, while the starboard side was filled by another sleeping car, an ordinary passenger coach, and a baggage car. When the air brake gave way, the machinery which fastened the front wheels of the St. George were loosened, and, owing partly to the forward motion of the boat, the resulting backward impetus given to the separated car sent it speeding toward the water.

The tracks on the transport run in an oval course, that part of them that is in the middle of the boat being higher than the end sections. So the detached car had an additional force to push it back. When the report that told of the bursting of the air brake was heard, it was followed by a cracking of chains. Four enormous cords of steel, used to tie the front truck to the sides of the transport, snapped as if they had been of twine, instead of three-inch iron. A big cable, running under the connected cars, broke with a sharp report. Two iron "clogs," strong rivets binding the wheels of the rear truck to the rails of the track, went to pieces. The "buffer," a huge wooden beam, placed behind the rear wheels to keep them from slipping, gave way and was pushed into the river with an ominous splash, as if announcing the greater splash of the big car behind it.

But the car, after the rear truck had been carried over the water's edge, came to a standstill. As the truck went over, there was a jar that shook the boat from end to end. But the guard rail struck the deck and the car was forced to a stop because the greater part of its weight remained in the boat.

Not a single passenger inside, according to the story of the deckhand, was awakened, although the jar was terrific. When the boat reached the slip it was after 4 o'clock, and the train was due to leave for Washington and the South at 4:30. A cord was hastily sent to the railroad's wrecking department, and it was not long before the wrecking boat, known as Transport No. 3, arrived. But before she began to raise the fallen end of the car into the boat a conductor went inside, and told the passengers that they would have to get out, as it was found necessary to leave the St. George in Jersey City. Suspecting nothing, the travelers, about half of them women, dressed in a hurry, and, when they were ready to move, another car was backed down to the boat and they walked into it. Two or three of them happened at this juncture to go to the back door of the St. George. When they saw that they were hanging over the river, there was a wild rush and some screaming. But the lingerers were few, so their hasty exit was effected without incident.

Soon after the passengers were exchanged, the delay having already stretched over nearly two hours, the St. George was righted, and it was decided not to leave her, as was first intended. She was attached to the regular train, which started on its journey one hour and fifty-five minutes late, at 6:25 A. M. When it pulled out of the station most of the passengers of the unlucky car had not yet heard of the accident, and the few wise ones had recovered from their fright sufficiently to go to sleep again.

Officials of both the railroads were reticent. In Harlem they said that they had not heard of the accident. In Jersey City the questioner was referred to people who had already left the station for their homes out in New Jersey. The deckhand and others who talked did so on the condition that their names should not be used. It was impossible to learn who were the passengers on the car. The train left Boston at 7 P. M. Sunday night, arriving in Harlem at 2:05 A. M. yesterday morning. It was due in Philadelphia at 7 o'clock.

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS ADJOURNS

New Jersey Minority Has Not Yet Named Senatorial Candidate.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 21.—No action was taken at the Democratic legislative caucus for the selection of a Senatorial candidate to-night. The caucus adjourned until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The Democratic members outside of Hudson County who are opposed to ex-Congressman Alvah A. Clark of Somerset, who has the support of the Hudson County members, have been talking of voting for Gen. Richard A. Donnelly of Mercer, but it is said to-night that they would throw their strength to Congressman Allan McDermott of Hudson County, with the hope of forcing the Hudson members to abandon the candidacy of Mr. Clark.

The voting for United States Senator will take place in the two houses to-morrow at noon, and on Wednesday a joint session will be held. The Republicans, of course, will vote for Gen. Sewell, who will be elected to succeed himself.

Among the bills introduced in the Senate to-night were these:

By Mr. Reed—Prohibiting the swearing off by taxpayers of any indebtedness due to State or National banks.

By Mr. Francis—Making it a misdemeanor to take part in, aid or abet any fight.

By Mr. Francis—Making it a crime to marry any woman against her will or any girl under sixteen years with or without her consent.

Among the bills introduced in the House were these:

By Mr. Lord—Granting soldiers of the Spanish-American war the same tax exemptions as are now allowed soldiers of the rebellion.

By Mr. Fallon—Prohibiting railroads or other corporations from blacklisting discharged employes.

Would Make Hazing a Crime.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 21.—Representative Waite to-night introduced a bill in the House imposing a penalty of one year's imprisonment or $1,000 fine for engaging in any hazing in any college or school whereby a person is injured.

The New Jersey Franchise Tax.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 21.—Mr. Fallon introduced a bill in the House to-night imposing a 3 per cent. franchise tax upon corporations which now pay a 2 per cent. tax.

Another Ballot in Delaware.

DOVER, Del., Jan. 21.—The sixth ballot in the deadlock for two United States Senators was taken at noon to-day in the joint session of the Legislature, and showed no material change in the situation. For the long term Kenney, Dem., has 22; Addicks, Union Republican, 15; Du Pont, regular Republican, 8; scattering, Republicans, 5; absent, 1 Democrat, 1 Republican. For the short term, Saulsbury, Dem., has 22; Addicks, 15; Richards, Regular Republican, 11; scattering, Republicans, 2; absent, 2.

THE DEAD-LOCK IN NEBRASKA.

Fusionists Plan to Steal a March on the Republicans.

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 21.—The fusion minority of the Legislature will take advantage of the apparent Republican deadlock to elect two Senators of their own political faith if the opportunity shall present itself. This determination was emphasized to-night, when a fusion caucus was held to outline a plan for future action, and, if necessary, do away with the plan of pairing. This, together with the many absentees on the majority side at to-day's balloting, gave the Republicans a sufficient scare to call for counter-action, and a meeting was held, at which a committee was appointed whose duty it will be to see that no ballot is allowed to be taken unless the Republicans have a clear majority on the floor.

There were few changes in to-day's vote for Senators, and the deadlock is apparently as tight as ever.

Minnesota Democrats Caucus.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 21.—The Democratic members of the State Legislature caucused to-night upon the two United States Senators to be elected and decided to support ex-United States Judge R. R. Nelson for the long term and Senator Charles A. Towne for the short term.

Conrad Gains in Montana.

HELENA, Mont., Jan. 21.—There was no decisive change in the joint ballot for Senator to-day. Conrad received 16 votes, a gain of 8. His gain came from Duer, who received 11 votes Saturday. There were no other changes of votes.

THE SUBSIDY BILL'S CHANCES.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The Subsidy bill was not taken up in the Senate to-day, and the assumption of the subsidy press bureau is that its chances for early passage are thereby hastened. The ground for this assumption is the expectation that the Legislative Appropriation bill will be passed before 2 o'clock to-morrow, and that then the Shipping bill will have a clear way until it is passed or the Indian Appropriation bill is ready to take its place as the order of business.

Not until the Senate has shown its interest in the Legislative bill will it be safe to assert that it will be passed to-morrow at 2 o'clock or any other hour, but it seems that if it is not passed to-morrow, the Subsidy bill is to have a chance after 2 o'clock.

The programme that keeps the Subsidy bill before the Senate and in the public eye will be adhered to until it is found to be impossible to dispose of it, and then it will be abandoned as a pretense that it is useless to keep it up any longer. The advocates of the bill, who are determined to allude to all speechmaking against the bill as "filibustering," do not seem to be willing to have the measure analyzed. This even when it is known that several Republicans, some of whom have proposed amendments very distasteful to the Senators who made the original bill, desire to be heard and to have instructive replies made to their inquiries about the purpose of some of the provisions in the bill.

There is little doubt that if the bill could be brought to a vote, even without discussion, it could get a majority of the votes of the Senate, providing the amendment proposed by Senator McMillan and desired by Senators Spooner, Aldrich, and others, were accepted. But these Senators desire, as much as the Populists who are expected to offer the most determined resistance, that the bill shall be so discussed as to show to the Western people, who do not fully support the subsidy plan, that the theory is right and the proposed application of it just and equitable.

It was hoped by the most directly interested persons that it would not be necessary to show by comparisons and tables of benefits that the advantages of the subsidy scheme would inure to a few corporations, and the opponents of the bill say that they think two weeks will be well used if they are devoted to analysis of the bald provisions of the bill.

Much interest is felt in ascertaining what will be the fate of the McMillan amendment cutting out the tank ships of the Standard Oil Company, and the other amendment reducing the subsidy to be paid to the high speed vessels. It is not expected that a vote on either of these propositions will be had soon. The speeches at first are expected to be general, and not until the Bill is taken up by sections will there be close analysis of the particulars of the measure.

ACTS ON HARLAN NOMINATION.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The Senate in executive session to-day confirmed the nomination of James S. Harlan to be Attorney General of Porto Rico. The final vote was reached after a discussion of more than two hours' duration, and when announced stood 43 to 21 in favor of confirmation. All the Republicans cast their votes in the affirmative, and two or three Democrats voted with them.

The session was characterized by a spirited colloquy between Senators Chandler (Rep., N. H.,) and Hawley. (Rep., Conn.,) in which bitter personal language was used. The controversy between them grew out of a letter written by Senator Chandler in 1877, and which was read by Senator Pettigrew, (Silver, S. D.,) concerning the controversy over the Hayes-Tilden election, in which reference was made to the part taken by Senator Hawley and Justice Harlan (neither then occupying his present place) in the settlement of the Louisiana controversy of that time.

In that letter Mr. Chandler stated that a commission of which those two gentlemen were members had been sent to Louisiana by President Hayes to destroy the Packard State Government. This having been accomplished, Mr. Chandler said the President then undertook to "recognize" the members of the commission, giving Gen. Harlan the appointment of an Associate Justice and offering Gen. Hawley the place of Director of the Paris Exposition, which the latter had declined, Mr. Chandler said, because of the inadequacy of the salary.

When this point in the article was reached, Mr. Hawley interrupted in somewhat excited manner to denounce the statement as false, which he did in very emphatic and plain language. Mr. Chandler replied in like manner, saying that the article had been prepared by him twenty-three years ago; that it had never before been contradicted, and that he still stood by it. He added that the whole subject was ancient history and announced his intention to vote for Mr. Harlan's confirmation.

Senators Spooner (Rep., Wis.,) Mason, (Rep., Ill.,) and Lindsay, (Dem., Ky.,) made brief speeches. Mr. Mason spoke of Mr. Harlan's qualifications as a lawyer and said that he did not think anything less of Justice Harlan because of his attachment for his family. Mr. Spooner said there appeared to be no opposition except that of Senator Pettigrew. Referring to Senator Spooner's remarks, Mr. Pettigrew quoted extracts from editorials in a number of newspapers in reprobation of Mr. Harlan's nomination. He said he had no purpose to delay a vote, and when he concluded the ballot was taken.

Senator Lodge (Rep., Mass.,) gave notice that to-morrow he will move an executive session for the consideration of the Spanish treaty.

HOW KRUEGER SETTLED CLAIMS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—During the session of the Senate to-day Mr. Turner (Fus., Washington,) offered a resolution requesting the President to transmit to the Senate, if not incompatible with public interest, information of what steps have been taken by the State Department to protect the rights of R. E. Brown, a citizen of the United States, in the matter of his claim against the South African Republic, together with copies of all correspondence and papers relating thereto.

Mr. Turner made a statement regarding the case which indicated that a story of almost romantic interest lay behind the resolution he had offered. R. E. Brown was an American engineer, who went to South Africa eight years ago. He located a large number of gold mining claims in Witfontein, adopting up-to-date essentially American methods in his work. He was deprived of the claims by order of the South African authorities, and instituted suit against them for $1,850,000. The case was decided by the South African courts in favor of Mr. Brown, his contention being upheld upon every point, notwithstanding the order of President Krüger withdrawing the claims held by Mr. Brown from location.

The judgment of the court so incensed President Krüger and the Volks Raad that the Judges were removed summarily from office. Subsequently the new court dismissed the case of Mr. Brown, and he was invited to institute a new suit. Realizing that the court was packed against him he decided to appeal to his own Government for justice, and with a view to securing his rights as defined by the highest court of the Transvaal Republic.

Mr. Turner said the claims of Mr. Brown now were worth $5,000,000 or $6,000,000. In view of the Governmental change that has taken place in the Transvaal, Mr. Turner said, the idea of his resolution was to press upon Great Britain the claim of Mr. Brown and to ascertain what steps had been taken by this Government in regard to it since Great Britain had assumed the responsibilities of sovereignty over that territory. The resolution was adopted.

THE CONGRESSIONAL LIBRARY.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—No business of special importance was transacted by the Senate to-day in open session. An executive session of more than two hours' duration was held and sixty-six pages of the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation bill were completed before adjournment.

When in the reading of the bill the paragraph was reached appropriating $10,000 to keep open the Library of Congress from 2 o'clock until 10 P. M. on each Sunday, Mr. Gallinger (Rep., N. H.,) said he desired to enter his protest against the opening of the library on Sunday. Congress, it seemed to him, had dealt very generously with the library and the people of the District of Columbia, and the latter ought to be satisfied that the library was open thirteen hours each week day.

Mr. Allison (Rep., Iowa,) replied that the proposed amendment had been recommended by two committees of the Senate and by the Librarian of Congress. Personally, he could see no better way for persons sojourning in Washington or for residents here to spend a few hours on Sunday than in the Library of Congress. The amendment was agreed to without division.

HOUSE PASSES SEVERAL BILLS.

Among Them Is One to Provide a Home for Aged Negroes.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The House to-day, after devoting some time to District of Columbia business, passed a number of bills under suspension of the rules. They were to provide a home for aged and infirm colored people out of the fund now in the Treasury to the credit of deceased colored soldiers, amounting to about $230,000; to establish a branch soldiers' home at Johnson City, Washington County, Tenn., and to increase the salary of the Commissioner of Education of Porto Rico from $3,000 to $4,000.

A bill to give citizens of foreign countries the right to sue in the Court of Claims for indemnity for alleged injuries, which had been recommended by the State Department, was disastrously beaten.

ANOTHER STEP IN NEELY CASE.

State Department Issues Warrant for His Surrender.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The State Department to-day issued a warrant for the surrender to the Cuban authorities of C. W. F. Neely, charged with embezzlement. This warrant was submitted to the officials of the War Department, who in turn transmitted it to the Department of Justice. It will be next placed in the hands of United States Marshal Henkel of the Southern District of New York, who will see that Neely is safely delivered to the judicial authorities at Havana.

In accordance with an understanding reached between Judge Lacombe and Neely's counsel, the prisoner will not be removed to a Government transport before next Tuesday.

TARDY GOVERNMENT CLERKS.

Treasury Department Finds Out How Many Come In Late.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The Treasury Department is understood to have under consideration a circular to the chiefs of division and other officials directing the enforcement of stringent regulations as to tardy clerks. In what form this circular will go out, or whether it will go out at all, are matters not yet determined.

The time of arrival of all clerks was taken by the watchmen of the Treasury at the different doors this morning. All clerks who arrived at 9 o'clock or after were detained, and their names and room taken. They will have to give an explanation of their tardiness. The record, however, is better than when the same thing was done about a week ago. This morning only 39 clerks out of nearly 3,000 were late. When the time was taken last week there were 116 late arrivals.

At intervals since the abolition of time clerks, the time of the arriving clerks has been taken by the watchmen, but the system was not kept up with any purpose in view, and was begun again last week. Secretary Gage is said to hold that a clerk should be at his desk at 9 o'clock, and not be coming in the door at that hour.

PARDONS BY THE PRESIDENT.

Receives Seventeen Applications for Clemency; Grants Three.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—President McKinley to-day received seventeen applications for pardons, and granted three applications, remitted one fine, and commuted three sentences:

George H. Shiffler, clerk and teller of the First National Bank of Lebanon, Penn., sentenced May 18, 1899, to five years in the Eastern Penitentiary for misapplication of the funds, is granted a commutation of sentence to two years. The President believes Shiffler's sentence was excessive. The amount of his defalcation was but $624, while that of the cashier of the bank at about the same time was more than $100,000. The cashier, Hoffer, was given only six years.

Willis B. Hoch, who was sentenced to six years and six months for embezzling $5,000 from the South Bethlehem National Bank at South Bethlehem, Penn., Nov. 22, 1897, is granted a commutation to four years with good behavior. It was shown that Hoch was implicated with the cashier in concealing the latter's stealings from the bank officials. The cashier fled, and Hoch, learning this fact, seized a package of money from the vault and escaped. He shortly afterward returned the money and gave himself up to the authorities. The President believes Hoch has been sufficiently punished.

PHILIPPINE SCHOOLS' ACT.

Commission Passes the Law—Teaching of Religious Doctrines in School Buildings Prohibited.

MANILA, Jan. 21.—The act establishing the Department of Public Instruction was passed by the Philippine Commission unanimously to-day, after a debate between Commissioner Moses and Judge Taft (President of the commission) over the section permitting religious instruction in schoolhouses.

The Commissioners originally were unanimously in favor of the section, but Commissioner Moses became convinced it was not wise, and to-day he offered an amendment prohibiting the teaching of religious doctrines in school buildings. He declared the commission would disregard its instructions concerning the separation of Church and State if the "questionable provision" were enacted. The Commissioner characterized as groundless the fears that Catholic children would not attend the public schools unless religious instruction was permitted. He said the experience with the Philippine schools had already demonstrated this.

Referring to arguments of the Central Catholics in favor of Catholic instructors exclusively, Commissioner Moses insisted that a compromise was inadvisable when one of the parties was predisposed against a compromise.

Judge Taft offered a substitute permitting teaching thrice weekly by priests and ministers to pupils whose parents desired such instruction, and prescribing the dismissal of teachers who attempt to influence pupils religiously, and the suspension of the privilege of priests and ministers whose teachings create disloyalty or disorder.

Concerning the alleged disobedience of the Administration's instructions, Judge Taft said the question would be whether such use of school buildings would involve a tax on the people. He cited the fact that the school buildings were used for political and religious purposes, notwithstanding the opposing attitude of the Federal Party leaders. The Judge said he did not believe a majority of the party or of the people was opposed to it. He believed the opposition was caused chiefly by fear of ecclesiastical control. The Judge did not believe the heirarchy of the Church would approve of the radical propositions of the Central Catholics. If experience proved the wisdom of repealing the section it would at least be after the Government had shown that it is neither pro-Protestant nor pro-Catholic.

Commissioner Ide voted with Commissioner Moses against Judge Taft on the substitute, explaining that he doubted whether the substitute would accomplish the purpose sought.

After the adoption of the substitute the bill was passed unanimously.

The United States Philippine Commission consists of Judge William H. Taft of Ohio; Gen Luke E. Wright of Tennessee, Prof. Dean C. Worcester of Michigan, Henry C. Ide of Vermont, and Bernard Moses of California.

Sympathy for Filipinos and Boers.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 21.—The House spent an hour to-day discussing a resolution extending sympathy to the Filipinos in their "heroic struggle for freedom." The resolution was amended so as to include the Boers by a vote of 53 to 39, and then was adopted, cheers following the final vote.

THE CUBAN CONVENTION.

Nothing in the Propoaed Constitution About Future Relations with This Country.

HAVANA, Jan. 21.—The Central Committee of the Cuban Constitutional Convention reported at the public session of the convention to-day the proposed constitution. The document contains some modifications of the original draft. After it had been read the convention adjourned until Thursday.

It is understood that the members of the Central Committee are not unanimous with reference to several features of the scheme, and that there is likely to be considerable discussion before final acceptance.

The proposed constitution does not contain any provisions regarding the future relations between the United States and Cuba.

EFFECT OF CLOSING CANTEENS.

Whether Hotels on Government Reservations May Sell Liquor Is a Mooted Question.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The abolition of the canteen on Government reservations may prove embarrassing in a way that has just occurred to some officers at the War Department. There are tenants of the Government in the hotel business both at West Point and Fort Monroe, one at the former place and three at the latter. At Fort Monroe there are two large hotels, the Chamberlin and the Hygeia. Both have bars, as do all the other hotels at both points. The buildings are on the Government reservation and are said to come within the limits of the strict provisions of the army bill against the sale of spirituous and malt liquors on Government premises.

According to one authority these establishments, although managed by private individuals, are subject to exactly the same rules and regulations as apply to the army.

The canteens at the Soldiers' Home near Hampton and at Fort Monroe have been very prosperous, and, according to the officers in charge, have been beneficial in their operations, preventing the soldiers from frequenting the haunts of vice outside the reservations. The profits from the canteen at Fort Monroe, averaging about $800 a month, have been divided among the various batteries pro rata, and have enabled the enlisted men to obtain many luxuries which they would not have otherwise obtained.

It is admitted that the abolition of the canteens will not prevent the soldiers from drinking. The only difference will be that the men will get their liquor in Phoebus, and it is said that the saloon keepers of that small town are making elaborate arrangements for an increase of trade after the law goes into effect.

The question as to whether the hotels on the reservations in question will have to close their bars and suspend the sale of liquors entirely after the act takes effect has not yet been formally presented to the War Department, and the officials show a disinclination to discuss the matter in any of its phases, under existing conditions. It is possible that the question will be settled by the conferrees of the two Houses who have the bill under consideration. Adverse action would undoubtedly have a most disastrous effect on the business of the hotels.

It is said by some Representatives that under the rulings of the Inter-State Commerce Commission it might be possible to serve guests at the hotels with liquors purchased beyond the limits of the reservation and brought in in original packages, although this might be held to be an evasion of the law.

Conference on the Army Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The House to-day disagreed to the Senate amendments to the Army Reorganization bill, and agreed to a conference. Mr. Hull, (Rep., Iowa,) Mr. Brownlow, (Rep., Tenn.,) and Mr. Hay, (Dem., Va.,) were appointed conferrees.

THE BAILEY DISABLED.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The torpedo boat Bailey has come to grief again. The accident which disabled her in this case was peculiar. While lying at Newport, about to undertake a trial trip, the intense cold froze the water in her boilers, bursting a number of the tubes. The boat has been sent back to New York for repairs, and the trial board has been ordered home. It is probable that the boat cannot be made ready for another trial before Spring.

REVOLVER SHOTS MEET.

The United States Revolver Association, at the annual meeting of the organization, held at 285 Fifth Avenue last night, considered and finally rejected the proposition that it should unite with the National Rifle Association. The question was discussed in every detail and phase, several members urging on the meeting the advantages to be gained by the union, but the majority favored continuing as a separate association.

The members present were Lieut. R. H. Sayre of the Seventh Regiment, National Guard State of New York; A. L. A. Himmelwright, Dr. C. T. Adams, C. H. Chapman of Brooklyn, Capt. Daniel C. Develin of the Sixty-ninth Regiment, National Guard State of New York; Guy C. Robinson, C. F. Small of Hartford, Conn., Dr. John Morrison, and Dr. W. G. Hudson. Members represented by proxies were F. W. Green of Hartford, Conn.; W. A. Smith, Z. C. Talbott, A. L. Smith, and J. R. Calkins, all of Springfield, Mass.; W. Almy of South Portsmouth, R. I.; J. W. Shirley of Baltimore, Md.; S. J. Fort of Ellicott City, Md., and J. B. Crabtree of Springfield, Mass. After the annual reports of officers, all showing an encouraging condition of the club's affairs, had been read, the election of officers for the coming year was held and resulted in the selection of the following: President—Lieut. R. H. Sayre; Vice President—Dr. W. G. Hudson; Secretary and Treasurer—E. E. Patridge of Boston; Members of the Executive Committee—A. L. A. Himmelwright and J. B. Crabtree, with the President, Vice President, and Secretary.

A number of changes in the constitution of the association were agreed upon in conformity with a report by a Committee on Revision of the Constitution, the most important of which was in connection with a resolution which stated the purpose of the association to remove any impression that may have gone out that the United States Revolver Association is simply a New York club. To that end it was decided to appoint an additional committee to act with the Executive Committee, which shall be composed of from ten to fifteen members, these to be chosen from the representative revolver shooters of the Middle West and South, the idea being to take the government of revolver shooting under the association out of the hands of any committee that might be considered as representative of the East only.

It was decided by resolution that the association shall be incorporated, and the members of the Executive Committee were authorized to take steps toward securing a charter for the club. The committee was instructed to report to the association some time during the Sportsman's Show, which will be held in Madison Square Garden in March.

A communication from the agent of the Colt Arms Company stated that rifle and revolver competitions will be held during the Sportsman's Show, in which trophies will be offered, one for the indoor championship of the United States with the revolver and the other for a similar championship with the pistol. The United States Revolver Association was requested and agreed to conduct both matches. The next meeting will be at the Sportsman's Show.

HELENA AWAITS VERDICT

Marshall Case Closed, but Jury Wrestles Long on Climate Question.

MORE AFFIDAVITS ARE READ

Mayor and Other Officials Take a Hand in the Fight—Bones and Bodies from the Mississippi.

The good people of Helena, Ark., will not know until some time to-morrow whether their prompt rallying to the support of the town in the attack made on its healthfulness was of any avail or not before a New York jury. For three days a jury in the Supreme Court has been listening to testimony in an action brought by Mrs. Susie A. Marshall, a dressmaker of this city, against Simon Seelig of the firm of Seelig, Bruen & Co. of Helena.

Mrs. Marshall wishes $5,000 damages from Mr. Seelig. She went to Helena to take charge of the dressmaking department in the store, but only remained three months, alleging that the place was not what it had been represented to be. If Mrs. Marshall had confined her allegations to the strictly business part of the proposition she might not have had arrayed against her the entire town of Helena, from Mayor down; but when she asserted that the place was unhealthy, and that you could find malarial and other microbes waiting on every street corner ready to seize you, the citizens of the town rose up in arms. Men and women alike made affidavits picturing Helena as the most delightful Winter and Summer resort in the world. The jury was evidently puzzled over these affidavits and the other testimony submitted.

After being out for over three hours, the jury failed to decide whether Helena is healthy or not, so Justice Blanchard, before whom the case was tried, ordered a sealed verdict, and, as the Court will not sit to-day, the question that is all-important to the people of Helena will not be made public until to-morrow.

Of the immense bundles of affidavits submitted by Lawyers Jesse Epstein and M. S. Hyman, representing the defendant, Seelig, or rather Helena, only a few were read yesterday. The deposition of Frank D. Clancy, who appears to be the Pooh-Bah of Helena, as he holds the offices of Chief of Police, Street Commissioner, and Health Officer, was the first read.

Chief Clancy describes Helena as a delightful town of about 9,000 inhabitants, situated on the Mississippi River, and says that the death rate is only from 11 to 15 per 1,000, and that it is in the best of sanitary condition. As to why he is able to judge of the sanitary condition, he says: "My business requires that I should be over every part of the city. I am constantly riding backward and forward over the city and constantly mixing with the people." Mr. Clancy further says that there was not a death in Helena from June to November, 1897, the year Mrs. Marshall was there, and that the city was exceptionally clean, owing to the yellow fever scare further down the river, and that he personally posted guards all about the city.

James A. Tappen, who was elected Mayor in 1898, but resigned, says: "The sanitary condition of Helena is as good as that of any city of its size."

N. J. Frizon, the present Mayor, corroborates Mr. Tappen. G. T. Updegraff, General Freight and Passenger Agent of the Arkansas Midland Railroad and a member of the City Council, says: "Helena is as healthy as any city depending on surface drainage." Lee Pendergraas, an Alderman, says the same thing. Dr. Charles R. Shinault and Dr. Montague Fink represent the medical profession of Helena in the depositions.

Dr. Fink, in answer to some cross-interrogatories, admitted that the river had an unpleasant habit of washing up bones and bodies from the old cemetery of Helena, but now a new cemetery had been established, and as fast as the bones were washed up they were removed to the new place of interment.

There were many number of affidavits from laymen, which were not read.

In fact, the bundles submitted to the Court showed the intense feeling of the people of the little town over the attack made on it.

A. L. Squires and E. P. Lyon represented Mrs. Marshall in the case, and they rested content with the testimony given by Mrs. Marshall and her husband as to the malarial tendencies of Helena.

MARGARET LOUISA HOME.

The Margaret Louisa Home, for Temporarily Homeless Women celebrated its tin, or tenth, anniversary yesterday. The whole house, which had been decorated for the occasion, was thrown open to guests, who came and went all the afternoon. There were 2,000 invitations sent out, and it seemed sometimes from the crowded rooms that the entire number was present.

Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard, the founder of the home, received the guests with the members of the Margaret Louisa Home Committee and Miss J. P. Cattell, the House Superintendent.

One of the pleasant features of the occasion was the presentation to Miss Cattell by Mrs. Shepard of a silver loving cup in recognition of her services in the home. It bore the following inscription:

To Miss J. P. Cattell, on the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the opening of the Margaret Louisa Home, with sincere appreciation of her ten years of faithful service as Superintendent, from Margaret Louise Shepard, January 20, 1901.

A facsimile of the Margaret Louisa Home in tin, an exact representation of the outside of the building, even to the large lanterns at the doors, was a gift to Mrs. Shepard from the committee—Mrs. R. A. Dorman, Mrs. Malcolm Graham, Mrs. E. F. Hatfield, Mrs. Robert Jaffray, Jr., Mrs. W. C. Lyford, Mrs. W. H. Humphrey, Mrs. R. McNamee, Mrs. William Jay Schieffelin, Mrs. Russell Stebbins, and Miss M. A. Stimson. A tin loving cup and a little tin dish were other gifts to Miss Cattell, with a pretty silver-handled umbrella from the chambermaids and laundresses in the building, and an electric night lamp from the maids in the restaurant.

"The home has fulfilled all our expectations," Mrs. Shepard said, speaking of its ten years of work. "I did not expect that we should be obliged to turn so many people away, but there is a great need of such places in the city. I wish there were many more. Very few changes have been made in the building during the ten years, only those small ones that are never discovered until a house is occupied. The home has seemed to meet the needs of the people we intended it should. We have had many teachers and nurses here, among others. It may be at times that women have come here who could afford to go elsewhere, but they should leave the rooms for those who need them."

City's Need of State Insane Pavilion.

The Charities Department, owing to the crowded condition of its institutions, is anxious to get possession of the building on Blackwell's Island now occupied as the women's pavilion of the State Hospital for the Insane. There are five wooden pavilions, two brick structures, and one of stone. The State was ordered to vacate these five years ago, and was given until Feb. 28, 1901, to make other provisions for the patients. The State Commissioner of Lunacy has informed Commissioner Keller that he will move as many patients as possible to Ward's Island, but asks for an extension of time until the new structure at Central Islip, L. I., is ready.

Fire Wipes Out Montana Town.

Special to The New York Times.

HELENA, Mon., Jan. 21.—Local insurance agents have received advices from interested parties that the town of Wickes, between Helena and Butte, was totally destroyed by fire this afternoon. Communication with the place by telegraph and telephone has been cut off, but it has been learned that nothing was spared. The town was situated in a gulch, and the 125 or 130 frame buildings were completely swept away. The town was not largely populated, a majority of the inhabitants having moved away with the closing of the silver mines. No fatalities are reported.

Ex-Alderman Parks Again Held.

Ex-Alderman Charles Parks of Fourteenth Street and Eighth Avenue, was again held yesterday in the Centre Street Police Court to the Grand Jury on a charge of felonious assault preferred by George Werner of 1,000 Forest Avenue. Parks was indicted once before on the same charge by the October Grand Jury. Justice Fursman, in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, dismissed the indictment upon motion of District Attorney Gardiner.

THE UNITED SERVICE.

Army.

The following-named officers will report to Col. Peter D. Vroom, Inspector General, President of the examining board appointed to meet at Governors Island, at such time as he may designate, for examination as to their fitness for promotion: Capt. Ammon A. Augur, Twenty-fourth Infantry; First Lieut. John McA. Palmer, Fifteenth Infantry; First Lieut. John C. McArthur, Tenth Infantry; Second Lieut. Oliver S. Eskridge, Eighteenth Infantry; Second Lieut. Frank R. Lang, Ninth Infantry; Second Lieut. Edgar A. Myer, Eleventh Infantry; Second Lieut. Harry A. Woodruff, Seventeenth Infantry; Second Lieut. Frank B. Rawkins, Fifteenth Infantry; Second Lieut. Albert C. Osborn, Twentieth Infantry; Second Lieut. Harry C. Williams, Fifteenth Infantry.

The following-named officers will report to Col. Jacob B. Rawles, Third Artillery, President of the examining board appointed to meet at the Presidio of San Francisco, at such time as he may designate, for examination as to their fitness for promotion: Capt. TALK IT TO DEATH.

There are barely five weeks more of this session of Congress, and this means not more than twenty-five days for general legislation, including all the appropriation bills. In these circumstances, if the honest opponents of the outrageous Subsidy bill cannot use up all the available time in pertinent discussion of its innumerable faults and vicious provisions we greatly underrate their powers.

We regret to see that the Democratic Senators have, as reported, agreed not to make what are called dilatory speeches against the bill. We can see no reason why they should not carry the discussion to the furthest logical point, with the expectation and intention of defeating a vote on the bill. It is true that there probably is a majority in its favor in the Senate and that none of the votes there are likely to be changed by debate. But debate is public, is fully reported, and is intended quite as much for the people as for the Senate. The subsidy grab is a complex and ingenious scheme for using public money for private ends. It must take time to expose it fully and make the average citizen understand its intricate trickery. The opposition Senators are in a position to do this, and it is their right and duty to do it at any length that may be convenient to them. The Democrats in the Senate ought not to hamper themselves in this duty.

If this were a public measure as to which parties were divided it would be well, after reasonable debate, to submit to the majority. But it is in no sense a public measure at all. It is a private job of the most impudent sort, from which the public will get nothing and is expected to get nothing. To all practical intents it is a steal and should be defeated by any and all means allowed by law and the rules of the Senate.

ENGLAND AND AMERICA IN CHINA.

The London Saturday Review undoubtedly reflects the feeling of a considerable part of the English people in the following remarks in its issue of Jan. 12:

We wish we could believe that the views of THE NEW YORK TIMES represent those of the Government and the people; if hostility against England were not the keynote of American action in China, they would. The common sense of THE TIMES sees that America has at least equal interest with England in opposing the plans of Russia in Manchuria, and her defiance of the rights of all the world. We said last week, referring to the favor America has shown to Russia all through the Chinese imbroglio, that it is not obvious what America will gain by the Russifying of Manchuria. THE TIMES addresses the American public in similar language to that of the China League and tells them that they ought to awake to the peril which threatens their trade in North China; and goes a step further than the League by asserting that the United States, England, Japan, and Germany ought to co-operate in Peking. It is the ignorant and perverse action of the States that has prevented this combination, at least in the case of England and Japan; and if it had existed, the Russian coup in Manchuria would not have been made. If America would only sink her passions and her prejudices, she might still do something for her own interests and those of the other Powers.

We do not know on what evidence The Review bases its statement that "it is the ignorant and perverse action of the States that has prevented a combination" between England, Japan, and Germany for co-operation in Peking. In another article in the same issue The Review speaks of the open door and the territorial integrity of China as the objects of such a combination; declares that the British Nation has thoroughly grasped these ideas, and censures the British Government for not providing means to secure them. To these ideas the American Government has long been conspicuously and faithfully bound, and has been ready to co-operate with any and all other Governments to secure them by any practical and rational means. The first and most mischievous step that tended to make the preservation of the territorial integrity of China difficult was the bombardment and destruction of the forts at Taku. In this all the other Powers took part and the United States refused to take part. The second set of measures that tended to defeat the two purposes cherished by the United States consisted of the looting and murders in Peking by the troops of the Powers and the subsequent cruel and unjustifiable punitive expeditions throughout the Province of Pe-chi-Li. In these Great Britain took a limited part, Germany the chief part, and Japan and the United States no part whatever. The third step in the unfortunate process was the making of the demands on China "irrevocable," when it was well known that the Powers could only enforce such demands by the practical conquest and almost certain disintegration of China. In this step our Government was entangled by the blunder of its Minister. We think that it could and should have disavowed his action and stood by its previous declaration. But that was deemed impracticable at Washington, largely because all other Powers, including Great Britain, were opposed to it. On this record we fail to see the indication of any "passions and prejudices" that have prevented co-operation with Great Britain or any other Power to secure the open door and the territorial integrity of China.

As to checking the aggressions of Russia in Manchuria, that is certainly desirable in the interest of the open door and for the maintenance of the territorial integrity of China, and we believe, as we have said, that our Government should do all that it properly can do in co-operation with Great Britain, Germany, and Japan to accomplish it. But it is to be remarked in the first place that there has not been the slightest indication on the part of either of these three Powers that they would engage in the business. In the second place it must be remembered that of the four Powers named the United States is the only one that has with regard to Russia no relations or interests not common to all. Each of the others has its own difficulties as to Russia, not in any way connected with China and not shared by any other. If Russia were checked by such a combination she would instantly turn for compensation or possibly for revenge to the points at which these Powers are exposed—to Persia and India for effect on England, to her European buundaries to reach Germany, and to Korea to touch Japan. At what stage in the resulting complications could the United States withdraw from the combination?

The mere question suggests the enormous difficulty and the extreme delicacy of the whole problem. In any case, we think that it is clear that our Government has in no sense been "ignorant and perverse" in the policy it has pursued or proposed in China, and that effective co-operation would certainly not have been less practicable had its counsels been listened to.

GERMAN PROTECTION AGAINST AMERICA.

It will lead to errors of judgment and perhaps to grave mistakes of policy if the Washington authorities should take Germany quite seriously in its ambitious plans to cripple this country and restrict our industrial growth and commercial expansion. Primarily, the Germans do not understand that behind what they are pleased to regard as an intolerable aggressiveness are resources and advantages with which equal competition is impossible. Germany is naturally a poor country. Much of her soil is sterile, and that which is not has been impoverished by persistent and, to a great extent, unscientific cultivation. Her material resources are strictly limited and so well controlled by syndicates that the stimulus of free competition in their development does not exist. Her territory has been the battle ground of Europe for centuries, and the appalling waste of war has consumed the energies of generations in replacements. The burdens of a military establishment out of all proportion to the national wealth or to population makes her taxation necessarily heavy. In view of these handicaps the progress of Germany during the past twenty-five years has been wonderful, and her industrial triumphs much more remarkable than those of more favored nations. It naturally causes her people great chagrin to discover that the national prosperity rests upon a narrow and unstable foundation, and that the reaction from a too rapid development has given rise to extremely disquieting conditions, threatening panic and disaster, which can scarcely be averted unless an end of the Chinese complication can be reached quickly and safely.

The typical German is not patient in matters which touch his national pride or menace his material welfare, but he is astonishingly so in permitting the landowning nobility to dominate the economic policy of the German Empire to the disadvantage of every other class. He will get over that in a few years more, no doubt. For example, the law proposed by the German Agrarians materially increasing the import duties on grains, especially wheat, is favored as a measure of domestic protection and because it is believed it will injure the American farmer. The typical German has been made to believe it would be a great thing to make his country independent of all other countries in its food supplies. No doubt it would; but it cannot be done until there is a readjustment of the relation between the number of people to be fed and the area of land available to profitable cultivation. The expectation that higher duties on breadstuffs will turn the attention of the German farmer to wheat and induce him to cultivate the now barren and waste places for crops of that staple is not likely to be realized. The increase of production cannot possibly keep pace with the annual increase of population, nor make up the present shortage of breadstuffs necessitating importations to the value of over $58,000,000 per annum. The net result can only be to increase the price of food to the German consumer; and while the land-owning class is likely to be well satisfied with this, the food-consuming classes are not.

How it will affect German industry can be foretold without difficulty. Increased cost of living will mean higher wages for labor. With higher wages the manufacturers will find their costs increased and their hold on what trade they now have in the American markets proportionately weakened. They send a great many manufactured articles to this country which are by no means indispensable, but are salable because cheap. If not cheap they would not be salable at all, for as the rule they have not quality to commend them. This would a good deal more than offset any possible advantage the nation could gain from the increased prosperity of the farmers. There is also the possibility that the United States will endeavor to emphasize the economic lesson to be thus learned by discriminating duties against German manufactures. This is not the policy of our Government, but it might become so with very little more provocation than Germany has already given in her absurd and disingenuous restrictions upon the importation of American meats, fruits, and vegetables, and her hypercritical scrutiny of all food products from this side of the Atlantic. This is very well understood in business circles. To the insistent demands of the Agrarians are opposed the interests of the industrial and commercial classes, who are perfectly well aware that what the farmers gain in higher prices the rest of the nation will pay for in the loss of exports, since to prosper as an exporting nation Germany must have cheap food and cheap raw materials. This conflict will work out its own natural and proper solution in time—the sooner if foreign pressure is not brought to bear to influence the issue.

We trust that the President and Congress will be extremely patient with Germany under present conditions. She is navigating dangerous waters, with worse trouble ahead. The German people are our very good friends, after all, and possibly the time is not far distant when, as Consul General MASON puts it: "Rivals thus endowed and equipped can surely afford to sink all petty jealousies and resentments, and meet each other in a spirit of manly emulation and mutual respect."

A CONFUSION OF DATES.

GEORGE WASHINGTON was born on Feb. 11, Old Style, in the year 1732. In the present year and century the difference between Old Style and New Style is thirteen days. The anniversary of WASHINGTON'S birth, therefore, falls on the 24th of February, not on the 22d, which the laws of every State but one in the Union have made a holiday for its commemoration. A similar possibility of confusion arises in respect to every date and event in English or American history occurring previous to the year 1752. During the nineteenth century the difference between New Style and Old Style was only twelve days. During the twentieth century and until the year 2100 we must add thirteen days to Old Style dates to bring them up to New Style.

The history of the formation of the calendar makes this plain. JULIUS CAESAR, with the best astronomical help he could get, attempted to construct a calendar in which the months would forever keep company with the same seasons. He adopted 365¼ days as the length of the year. It was to take up the fraction that an extra day, the 29th, was added to the month of February in every year divisible by four—our leap year. CAESAR'S year was 11¼ minutes too long, which amounted to one entire day in 128 years. By the time of the Council of Nice, in the year 325, the vernal equinox, which by the adjustment of the Julian calendar had at first fallen on March 25, had backed around to the 21st. The matter got worse as the centuries sped on, until in 1582 Pope GREGORY XIII. amended the calendar and introduced what is known as the New Style.

In that year the vernal equinox fell on March 11. GREGORY fixed the date of the equinox at the day on which it fell in the year of the Council of Nice, which was March 21. To adjust the calendar to this fixed natural date he ordered that ten days should be dropped, the day following the 4th of October, 1582, being called the 15th, instead of the 5th. Then, to prevent a further drifting away from this adjustment, he ordered that the leap year intercalation should be omitted three times in every 400 years, the centurial years not divisible by 400 without a remainder to be common years, not bissextile, or leap years. GREGORY'S year is only 26 seconds longer than the true solar year, a difference that would amount to a day in about 4,000 years.

Between the Old Style, or Julian calendar, and the New Style, or Gregorian calendar, there was a difference of ten days in the sixteenth century, the Pope having dropped just that number of days from the month of October. The year 1600 was a leap year in both calendars, being divisible by 4 and by 400. So the difference continued at ten days through the seventeenth century. But 1700 was a leap year in the Julian calendar and a common year in the Gregorian. February had 29 days according to the one and only 28 according to the other. The difference between Old and New Style was thereby increased in the eighteenth century to eleven days. Halting over Feb. 29, the Julian calendar was left one day further behind. This happened again in 1800, which was common by New Style and a leap year in Old Style. During the nineteenth century the difference was twelve days. The year 1900 was not a leap year by our reckoning, but it was a leap year in Old Style. Again a day was added to the difference. All through this century we must add thirteen days, not twelve, to Old Style dates to bring them up to New Style. The next centurial year, 2000, will be a leap year in both calendars, so that the thirteen-day addition will hold good until 2100, when the difference will become fourteen days.

"In seventeen hundred and fifty-three
The style it was changed to Popery," says the old ballad. Through dislike of innovations and of Popes England clung to the Old Style until on the motion of Lord CHESTERFIELD the New Style was adopted by an act passed in 1751. The year, which had begun on March 25, was made to begin on Jan. 1, and the day following Sept. 2, 1752, was called the 14th. The difference was then eleven days. This act of Parliament applied to all of Great Britain and her colonies. It changed our American chronology. The New Style has been adopted in all Christian countries except Russia.

It has been a common but not a uniform practice to make the correction once for all in the century in which the date occurs and disregard the ever-widening error. It is evident that in this way Feb. 22 was fixed as WASHINGTON'S Birthday. In the eighteenth century, the century of his birth, the difference between Old and New Styles was eleven days. He was born Feb. 11. Adding eleven days, we have the Feb. 22, 1732. This has been kept as the sacred date. But it is obvious that in succeeding centuries, with a constant increment of difference, Feb. 22, 1732, will have its true anniversary, measured by the lapse of solar years, not on Feb. 22, but on Feb. 23, which was the true date for the last century, then on Feb. 24, which is the true date for the present century, and in 2101 on Feb. 25. It would seem that the change from twelve to thirteen first occurs in this opening year of the twentieth century, and this is true of all anniversaries of the year 1900 falling before the 28th of February, for the calendars kept on at their old interval of twelve days until the Old halted over Feb. 29, while the New proceeded to March 1. But it is clear that Feb. 24, 1901, is the one hundred and sixty-ninth anniversary of the birth of GEORGE WASHINGTON.

We observe that Mr. JOHN FISKE, in his "Discovery of America," follows the convenient but erroneous method by which WASHINGTON'S Birthday has become of fixed date. The landing of COLUMBUS, he says, "was at 2 in the morning, Oct. 12," and in a footnote: "Applying the Gregorian calendar, or New Style, it becomes the 21st. The four hundredth anniversary will properly fall on Oct. 21, 1892." The Gregorian calendar was not devised until ninety years after the first voyage of COLUMBUS, but applying its reckoning to the dates of the fifteenth century, we see that the difference between Old and New Style was nine days. In the sixteenth it was ten days, in the seventeenth again ten days, in the eighteenth eleven days, in the nineteenth twelve days, so that the true anniversary was not Oct. 21, but Oct. 24. The society of the Typothetae celebrated BENJAMIN FRANKLIN'S birthday this year by a banquet held on the evening of Jan. 17. FRANKLIN was born on Jan. 6, Old Style. Throughout the last century it was the custom to add but eleven days to obtain the anniversary date of FRANKLIN'S birth. Twelve days should have been added, and it is now necessary to add thirteen. The true anniversary of FRANKLIN'S birth is now Jan. 19.

These are not matters that make or unmake nations, but they are of importance in chronology, history, and biography, where precision cannot be neglected. It is of current interest, too, to know that to the dates of the Russian calendar we must now add thirteen days, not twelve, to get the true date according to our own reckoning. Whether we ought to change the date of the Washington's Birthday observance is hardly a practical question. But if we should make it a movable feast to keep pace with the slow precession of the true anniversary, in about 17,300 years WASHINGTON'S Birthday would fall on the Fourth of July, which would probably be a very great day for the boys of that epoch.

A PUBLIC SERVICE.

Mr. HENRY W. HARDON, the lawyer who caused the arrest of a man for violation of the ordinance of the Board of Health forbidding spitting in public conveyances, has done a distinct service to the decent people of the city.

It is not pleasant for any gentleman to incur the annoyance that men capable of this offense are sure to inflict on those who interfere with them, but the officials of the various car lines are so lax in requiring their employés to enforce the rules of the Health Board—on some of the cars of the Metropolitan roads, indeed, the notice of the Board of Health has been replaced by private advertisements—that private initiative seems the only resort. The first to undertake this duty finds it, of course, the most disagreeable, but Mr. HARDON may have the comfort of knowing that his example will encourage others. It ought also to have the effect of making the officials of the elevated and surface roads ashamed that they have not given and enforced orders long ago that would promptly abate the nuisance.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—A New York business man who knew Havana well while it was under Spanish rule, and who went there a few weeks ago to see for himself the effects of American control, writes back to a friend in this city in a way to show that, while the condition of affairs in the island capital leaves something to be desired, it is still a marked improvement on the past, and the future is far from hopeless. Few people are talking politics, he says, which is certainly a good sign, and a majority of the population are hard at work—hard for Cubans, that is—trying to make a living. The success which the small farmers are attaining in this direction is described as "phenomenal," but only half a crop of sugar, or about 550,000 tons, is expected this year. The yellow fever has practically disappeared, but, according to this authority, not a fifth of the havoc it worked last year was made public. Bunko men and "sharks" of various sorts abound in Havana—and find very poor picking. Mechanics and laborers have no difficulty in securing employment, but wages are low and the cost of living is high. The average skilled workman gets $2.50 per day, while the laborer has to be content with about 90 cents. The real estate dealers—mostly Spaniards and Cubans—have made, and still are making, a good deal of money. Something like $5,500,000 has been invested in street railways, sugar estates, and the like by Americans, and more than this by Englishmen and Germans. Attempts seem to be making at last to establish a relation between the quality of the entertainment provided and the scale of prices charged by the Havana hotels. Several of the old houses have been considerably improved, and there is talk of a big new hotel to be built this year and to be really modern in equipment and management. Tourists and other travelers are now transferred from their steamer to the shore by a steam tender instead of in rowboats, and the examination of baggage at the Custom House has been robbed of all its old terrors. The writer of the letter declares that the streets of Havana are cleaner than those of New York, and that life there at this season of the year is much more than endurable.

—Having a coast line of great length, and at many points extremely dangerous, this country has developed a life-saving service certainly as good as that to be found in any other part of the world, but lives and property are still lost in almost every great storm, and, with the room for improvement thus obvious, any reasonable suggestion for increasing the efficiency of the service is worthy of careful consideration. What seemed to be a suggestion of just that kind was made in a letter which we published last week from a correspondent who, living on the Long Island shore, had more than once seen efforts at rescue fail because of the impossibility of getting a line to the beached vessel. His idea was that, instead of intrusting to men on shore the task of sending a rope against the wind to an object as small as a ship, the rope should be sent the other way, with the wind and toward a target of indefinite extent, the attainment of any part of which would answer all purposes. Therefore he advised that every vessel be equipped with a mortar and rockets like those used by the life-savers. At first thought this plan appears to be highly commendable, but when one begins to wonder why the professional rescuers did not long ago adopt it, certain perhaps fatal weaknesses in the plan present themselves. When a vessel goes ashore in a severe storm, and especially in a Winter storm, its deck is almost always constantly swept by heavy seas, and its crew are fortunate if they can get into the rigging and hold themselves there. The conditions are cruelly unfavorable for anything except the simplest forms of exertion, and when the circumstances are such that the life-savers can do little, the chances are slight indeed that the imperiled sailors will be able to do more. Herein, doubtless, lies the explanation of the fact that our correspondent's proposal has never been carried out.

—Whenever a passenger on a trolley car is forced by its sudden starting, or by an abrupt change from slow to rapid motion, to abandon all pretenses of dignified composure and to indulge in such exhibitions of ground and lofty tumbling as the greater or less proximity of his neighbors will permit, he should seek for consolation in the thought that his antics mean increased profit for the transportation corporation. So at least we gather from as much as we can understand of a highly technical communication that appears in The Electrical Review. It seems that, in the early days of trolley-carring, the current was controlled by means of a rheostat. Then, of necessity, were starts gentle and accelerations of speed ditto, but—"It was soon discovered that this gentle, soul-soothing starting and acceleration of the cars, for some reason, was a devouring cancer on the expense account. Signals were set for the electrical inventor, who was then poised aloft absorbed in the realm of theory, and he swooped down upon the field and tackled the motor and its equipment. The struggle was short and the dear old rheostat was soon plucked out, the motor was turned topsy-turvy and finally emerged as the great money-saver, the 'series parallel system,' while the old rheostat was ignominiously flung into the scrap-pile and for it was substituted the new controller, the great physical trainer of modern times." It is not for us to explain the nature of a "series parallel system," but if, as this expert declares, and as we are willing to admit if it can be done without the assumption of any scientific responsibility, the "series parallel system" saves money at the expense of comfort for the passenger, then the system in question could only be fittingly characterized by Representative DRIGGS. His seventeen-linked adjectives would be none too many for it, and possibly, just possibly, they would have as good effects upon the street-car officials as the Congressman thinks they had upon the West Point cadets.

—Wherever capital punishment exists there is talk about its ineffectiveness as a deterrent from crime and the consequent propriety of abolishing it. But in most, if not all, States and countries where no death penalty is now inflicted there is quite as much talk about the necessity of reviving it. The chances are that the man who is contemplating a murder commits it or does not commit it for reasons with which the peculiarities of the law under which he lives have little or nothing to do, and that only after the deed is done does he remember, with joy or sorrow, as the case may be, that he is or is not confronted by an ignominious death as the outcome of trial and conviction. The general tendency of the times, however, is beyond question against the infliction of the death penalty. It has often been stated that there would be less opposition to this tendency if a sentence to imprisonment for life did not so often fail to be carried out—if, that is, the prisoner condemned to perpetual confinement did not have the hope, amounting to a probability, of ultimate pardon. Now, nobody would for a moment advise the passage of a law under which a condemned man could not secure his freedom despite absolute proof of innocence, but would not the present antagonism to the abolition of the death penalty be decreased or altogether removed if a life sentence could be annulled only when such absolute proof was furnished? It seems as though it were enough that the person accused of crime should profit once by the presumption of innocence. Conviction ought to establish the presumption of guilt, and it is hard to see why, after the possibilities of appeal have once been exhausted, the entire burden of proof should not be transferred from the State to the prisoner.

APPROVES OF MR. CLEVELAND.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you permit me as a faithful daily reader of your paper for some twenty years to make my comment on your leading editorial of Jan. 10 on Mr. Cleveland's speech? Even if your tu quoque as against him, and Mr. Harrison were well pointed, it would only prove that these gentlemen had been inconsistent, not that their present opinions are irrational, but I do not see that Mr. Cleveland's responsibility for the Cuban war commits him in the least degree to that now dragging its slow length in the Philippines. There are thousands who supported the Cuban war with enthusiasm who detest the present war. Why not? There is no better title to complete disapproval of the present war than a record of ardent sympathy with the war for Cuban independence. Because I did not myself sympathize with that war so heartily as some others, I have always felt myself debarred from the ability to condemn the present war so effectively as those others. The present war seems to me exactly the kind of war which the President denounced in advance as "criminal aggression." In the loftiest expression we have had of contemporary feeling, Mr. William Vaughn Moody's "Ode in Time of Hesitation," the admiration for our rescue of the Cubans is paralleled by an equal reprobation of our doings in the Philippines.

Do you not entirely underrate the amount of opposition to us in those islands when you speak of it as a matter of "2,000 or 3,000 men" in arms? If half the boasts of slaughter have been true, we have killed ten, twenty times as many as you reckon. And how is it that when as many and more thousands have known the whereabouts of Aguinaldo, not one has ever told his secret to our men, though there was money in it if one chose to be a traitor to the cause? And do you not pay a very ill compliment to our soldiers when you conceive that "2,000 or 3,000" of the little brown men are able to hold 60,000 of our brave boys at bay, and even put them on the defensive, if we are not happily misinformed?

You say we must not lack the courage for "venturing upon the untried paths." But these paths on which we are venturing are not untried. They are the same old paths which other nations have been treading for hundreds of years. We know them by the bloody tracks which mark the feet of Spain and other desolating conquerors. You are enthusiastic for "the broader course." But the broader course is not always the best course. Did not Jesus say, "Broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be that go in thereat"? There are better things than territorial expansion, better things than commercial advantages. I was deeply pained to find you saying a few days ago that the only question in China is one of commercial policy. Surely there are questions of right, of justice, of humanity, involved. Surely any commercial advantage would be dearly bought at the cost of such damnable things as have been done by the Russians and French on the "punative expeditions." I would rather have the United States shrink to the dimensions of Judea or Greece than see them false to their inherited ideals of justice and humanity.

You have often written of the ultimate independence of the Filipinos as a thing to be assured. That is the position of President Schurman in his latest utterance. Why will you not join with him and Senator Hoar and Representative McCall and others in keeping this ideal before the public mind and urging it upon the Administration? So doing you would straightway see the beginning of the end. "Assume, Sir, these unperformed duties." So Sumner said to Webster. So many say to you, who prize the honor of your paper much, the honor of their country more.

JOHN WHITE CHADWICK.
Brooklyn, Jan. 20, 1901.

"THE BOX OFFICE NUISANCE."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have carefully read the article signed "Theatregoer" published in your columns of Jan. 17, and would like to add my protest also concerning the box office nuisance now so rampant in this city.

I am a constant attendant of the theatre, and, finding the purchasing of tickets at agencies wholly unsatisfactory, always go to the theatre box office, and feel that I am competent to judge such, and have served my time on long lines and otherwise.

At Wallack's, Daly's, and the Empire I gratefully acknowledge that one is always treated with unfailing courtesy, while at the others, large and small, one is not even treated like a human being. Such a thing as thanking you for paying the exorbitant rate of $2 for an orchestra chair is unheard of. It is nothing unusual to see a long line of both men and women individually grossly insulted, and I cannot believe a manager has the right to place such persons to serve a public, generously and patiently trying to patronize his attraction.

A clerk in a store of any kind showing such discourtesy toward customers would not be tolerated long. Then why does not the public rise up and demand decent box office men?

I grant that women are sometimes extremely tiresome about getting their tickets, haggling over prices, location, &c., but the ticket sellers instead of quietly and properly explaining, which is their business and for which they receive their salaries, by their odious, uncalled-for rudeness so confuse these people that they often leave hardly knowing what they have bought. In fact, buying theatre tickets with the thought of the play in prospect, instead of being a pleasure becomes a horror, and after the struggle leaves you in a frame of mind such that you care not whether you attend the performance or not.

A LOVER OF THE THEATRE.

The Box Office Czar.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With your permission, I wish to add my protest to that of "A Theatregoer," printed in this morning's issue. It seems to me that something should be done to protect the public from the insolence of the box office hirelings. When a man goes to a theatre prepared to pay the exorbitant price which most theatres demand for a mediocre play he should not be required to beg the young clerk in the box office for seats—to be, in fact, placed in a position whereby the management is doing the proposed purchaser a favor by selling him tickets.

Every one must admit that, after the wrangling at the box office, the play loses much of the enjoyable effect which it otherwise would have. The evil exists; but how can we remedy it? Our friend gives no hint, no suggestion. To boycott the theatres wherein these practices exist is impracticable, if not impossible. The only way which suggests itself to me is to give as good, if not better, than is given to us, with the only probable result that we would develop a class of male Xantippes.

STREET SIGNS AND NUMBERS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit me to indorse the remarks of your correspondent, Mr. William Payne, in your Sunday issue of Jan. 13, and to add an amendment relative to street numbers. The existing state of things in regard to street signs and numbers in this city is simply an infamous outrage, not only upon non-residents visiting us for business and other purposes, but upon our own citizens.

I question very much whether there is another city of importance in any other civilized part of the globe where this matter is so shamefully neglected. I have no doubt whatever that the difficulty of finding the way about this city from the want of street signs is driving trade away from us to a far greater extent than is generally realized. It is an absolute nuisance to be obliged to be continually asking questions in the street as to one's whereabouts when a proper system of street signs and numbers would render it unnecessary.

The average Tammany official would naturally experience no inconvenience, because he is in constant touch with all the "places of refreshment" scattered throughout the city, and in fact exists by their influence. By the aid of these "landmarks" he can navigate and pilot himself almost anywhere without the aid of street signs, but for the rest of us, and for strangers, who lack this knowledge and means of locating themselves and prefer not to avail themselves of it, our city authorities ought to do something.

In my opinion it should be mandatory that every corner building, without exception, should be made to indicate both the streets by which it is bounded by name and by number, and that at least one transparent sign, lit by gas or electricity, should indicate at night in letters and figures large enough to be read from the opposite side of the way, and be placed on one of the four corners, as is now the case in some few of our streets.

Neither stores nor residences are properly numbered in many parts of this city, and it is a very difficult matter at night and not infrequently in the daytime to make out the number sought for, and owners should be compelled to place them "conspicuously," where they can be seen by day and "felt" by night, if there is nothing to light them up, so that they can be seen. This is a very important matter and demands prompt attention.

MARK TWAIN CRITICISED.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Whatever charges foreigners may make against the Anglo-Saxon, they must at least admit that he is willing enough to acknowledge his own faults. The most virulent of Continental newspapers and speakers could not fulminate more bitterly against England and America than do some of the journals and public men of the two great English-speaking countries.

In a measure this state of affairs is creditable to the race as demonstrating that a freedom of speech exists among us which would not be tolerated elsewhere.

When single thought is civil crime
And individual freedom mute,

the Anglo-Saxon race will have fallen upon evil days. The American people believe that the wisest way to treat inaccurate, unjust, and intemperate utterances is to ignore them and that prosecutions for lèse majesté and treason often have the effect merely of making martyrs out of harmless fanatics. But when denunciation of one's own country is joined with what many would consider to be an offense against hospitality and good taste, those most directly affected may be pardoned if they display a certain degree of resentment.

A somewhat unfortunate instance of our infinite capacity for self-abuse was afforded at the recent dinner given by the City Club. By his recent action in the case of exortion on the part of a cab driver, Mr. Clemens has shown an example of civic courage and duty in which New Yorkers may well take to heart and which completely refutes the plea of the pusillanimous and slothful that it is hopeless, single-handed, to attempt to effect any improvement in prevailing abuses. With a cordial recognition of the services which, on the occasion referred to, and on many others, Mr. Clemens has rendered to the cause of good government the committee appointed to select the speakers for the dinner invited Mr. Clemens and considered itself fortunate in securing acceptance.

The greater part of Mr. Clemens's speech was stimulating and to the point. That it was in a humorous vein did not detract from its effect. But in digressing from the consideration of municipal affairs and in entering upon the broader field of National politics and in referring to our soldiers in the Philippines as fighting with a "disgraced musket under a polluted flag," many of those who agree with Mr. Clemens in his views on our colonial policy will admit that he committed an error in judgment.

Mr. Clemens was an honored guest of the City Club. No limitations as to the subject matter of his speech were imposed upon him by the committee, the gentlemen composing that body believing that such a matter might safely be left to Mr. Clemens's good taste and discretion. In a measure, though qualified, Mr. Clemens was the spokesman of the club. He must have known that the opinions which he expressed would be regarded, to some extent, as the views of the club. It may fairly be claimed that a due consideration for his hosts might have induced him to observe a special degree of caution.

As a member of the City Club I wish to protest most emphatically against Mr. Clemens's characterization of our soldiers and our flag, and, whatever views my fellow-members may hold on expansion, I think that they will feel that it is doubtful whether Mr. Clemens exhibited that discretion and tact which Americans on such occasions expect from their public speakers, and which they usually obtain.

DISCOURAGEMENTS TO THRIFT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Are there discouragements in the way of those who wish to place their money in savings banks in the interest of thrift?

A workingman cannot bank his wages, as the banks are not open after 4 P. M., nor before 10 A. M. On Saturdays they close at noon for the same apparent purpose.

A poor person receiving a check can only deposit it with the loss of thirty days' interest.

A small sum cannot be paid in by stamps through the mail; therefore, it does not pay to deposit it, as car fares and time eat up its value.

In some of the largest institutions at the busiest seasons the entire paying in and out passes through the hands of but one teller. At times when many depositors or drawers are on hand many a poor person loses a full hour in the process of depositing a little sum. To draw out a small sum may cost a busy workman more than the amount, in his loss of time.

At times when interest is due, a deposit cannot be made without waiting for interest to be marked in the passbook, a process sometimes delayed by a line of a hundred or more on the same errand.

These and other methods of these flourishing institutions appear to be directed toward discouragement of the saving habit by all but persons of leisure.

Savings Bank Tax Condemned.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It seems to me that the proposition to tax savings bank funds is economically and politically unwise. Socialists and Anarchists get a ready hearing from the people because of the great "inequality in the distribution of wealth," which, they argue, justifies the overthrow of the existing social system. Gov. Odell now proposes to make the inequality still greater, to make the poor poorer by taxing the doubly-earned savings of the widow and the orphan, savings which they rely upon in time of storm and stress to keep them from being recipients of charity. If we are going to discourage saving on the part of the poor, we should strengthen the hands of the charitable organizations for the greater work they will have to do. If the bill to tax savings banks becomes a law through the votes of Republican legislators, the savings banks' depositors will have a chance to mete out punishment at the polls next November. This fact might be worth some consideration by the present State Government.

WILHELM'S ORDER INSPIRES A POET.

From The Philadelphia Press.

[The Kaiser orders sauerkraut here—2,400 tons of the delicatessen will be sent from Philadelphia to the German Army in China—The Press, Jan. 16.]

From the land of the Kaiser, where sauerkraut grows,
And the hog of this country is barred;
There lager in rivers perpetually flows,
And sausage is sold by the yard,
They've sent to us here,
From the land of the beer,
An order that's knocked us clean out—
We're to ship right away
Without any delay,
Many tons of our succulent kraut, kraut, kraut—
Many tons of our succulent kraut!

In the long list of triumphs that we have achieved
This order of kraut is the best,
And oh, but our pigs have their feelings relieved
By the knowledge of kraut—and its zest.
For William's confessin'
Our delicatessen
Is better than his, without doubt:
And all over China
There'll be nothing finer
Than odors of Uncle Sam's kraut, kraut, kraut—
Than odors of Uncle Sam's kraut!

What the arms of the Germans have failed to command,
In a peaceable way in the East,
Why, the kraut to be sent from our Uncle Sam's land,
May come as a course in a feast!
And the heathen Chinee
With the Count Waldersee,
Will gayly go skipping about,
While peace, as a dove,
Will soar up above,
And sniff of our succulent kraut, kraut, kraut—
And sniff of our succulent kraut!

FOUNDING OF NEW YORK CELEBRATED

Society of Colonial Wars Dines with Quaint Ceremonies.

SILENT TOAST TO QUEEN VICTORIA

President De Peyster Defends the City's Good Name—Admiral Barker Replies to Mark Twain's "Disgraced Muskets" Speech.

Frederic J. de Peyster, President of the Society of Colonial Wars in the State of New York, made an appeal last night for the recognition of the good qualities of the City of New York, which, he feared, were being lost sight of in the clamor over its vices. The occasion which called forth these remarks was the celebration by the ninth annual banquet of that society of the two hundred and eighty-seventh anniversary of the founding of the City of New York, which is supposed to have taken place some time in midwinter, 1614. Rear Admiral Barker, who was a guest, in replying to a toast to the navy, answered Mark Twain's recent remark about "disgraced muskets" in the Philippines by declaring that the only disgraced muskets there were in the hands of cowards. He was enthusiastically applauded. Another incident of the banquet was a silent toast to Queen Victoria.

The dinner was held in the large banquet hall at Delmonico's, which was decorated with American flags. The menus were in a cover of imitation birchbark, with the head of an Indian warrior painted on it and the inscription "A Colonial's Enemy." According to a quaint and effective custom the diners marched into the hall preceded by a fife and drum corps in colonial uniform. After the feasting and before the speeches began the flags of the United States, Great Britain, and Holland, the State flag, the general flag of the society, and the Louisbourg flag were borne into the hall by the stewards of the society, to the strains of patriotic airs from the fife and drum corps. Behind the flags was carried an immense silver punchbowl, emblematic of good feeling and fellowship.

The dinner was well attended, and the diners were very enthusiastic. Among the guests of honor were Major Gen. Brooks, Rear Admiral Barker, James H. Canfield, Librarian of Columbia College; Hamilton W. Mabie, Charles R. Miller, George G. Ward, representing St. George's Society; William E. Dodge, New England Society; F. de Peyster Foster, St. Nicholas Society; James A. O'Gorman, Friendly Sons of St. Patrick; Morris Patterson Ferris, Sons of the Revolution; Tunis G. Bergen, Holland Society; John T. Terry, Mayflower Society; William Cary Sanger, Colonial Order; R. C. Ogden, Pennsylvania Society; David Banks, Order of Foreign Wars, and the Rev. Donald Sage Mackay. Among the others were representatives of almost every name linked with the early history of this country.

The toasts to the President of the United States and to the Governor of the State of New York were responded to by the whole company joining in singing "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." After this Frederic J. de Peyster spoke to the toast of "The Society of Colonial Wars." He said in part:

In celebrating the two hundred and eighty-seventh anniversary of the foundation of our city to-day we only guess at the date as nearly as we can. The fact that the date of this event is not known called my attention to the other fact that too little is known of the magnificent development of this great city, to which all nations have contributed. The reformer sees in our city only what is wrong. He becomes violently excited, the papers take it up and talk and every one talks with the papers, as if New York were a very Gehenna, a desert full of wild beasts, without a drop of water. But there is more than one oasis in this desert if our friends from the sister societies may be believed; for at each of their dinners I have heard expressed the opinion that their members could single-handed wipe out all this—and they could. Then there is Columbia Heights, with its grand university, another oasis in the desert, and there's Charles R. Miller, editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES, and his following, and all they represent, and they're another oasis.

"When, therefore, you consider all these good forces the pessimism which is so common now must seem as cheap as it is common and as lacking force. But there are some loose joints. This city is the home of many, many good and clever people, but there are also many rogues, and we must keep them down. They point at our bad police force, but you must remember that it is impossible that the four-headed hydra of our Police Board should be anything else than a monster, and I am happy that our Governor has recognized that fact and that the days of the four-headed hydra are gone forever. If hereafter the police is not well handled we will know whom to hang. Also am I cheered by the fact that Bishop Potter and Mark Twain have not only come to us, but are staying with us, and will assist us in putting down what is evil.

"One remedy, the only real remedy, is education. You must make the rich and the poor realize what it means to be a New Yorker. Point out to the boy the possibilities of New York citizenship. Tell them of the good in New York which has always come forward when action was needed. Only by raising high-minded natives among the mass of the people is it that the future of the city, the State, and the Nation may be safe." [Prolonged applause.]

Mr. De Peyster at the conclusion of his speech paid a tribute to Queen Victoria, and he asked the society to drink a silent toast in honor of a great and good woman.

"I am sure," said the speaker, "that this society and its guests bear a heartfelt sorrow for Great Britain in its hour of sadness. As the finest woman and the highest influence among the sovereigns of nations, every American not only admires but loves Victoria."

Rear Admiral Barker, in answering to the toast, "The Navy of the United States," roused the enthusiasm of the guests to the highest pitch.

"I am told," said he, "that we have cut loose from the conservatism of our fathers and are drifting we know not whither. Such accusations have always been made when we have launched out in any great, new National experience. Wars are not unmitigated evils. There are righteous and just wars, and I firmly believe that every war of the United States has been a just war."

Admiral Barker then made a reference to a recent utterance by Mark Twain.

"I deny," he said, "that officers of our navy are fighting in the Philippines behind dishonored weapons; I deny that soldiers in the trenches are fighting behind disgraced muskets. The only disgraced muskets in this war are in the hands of cowards." [Applause and cheers.]

The other speakers and the toasts to which they responded were: "The Army of the United States," Major General Brooks; "Our Cosmopolitan City," Hamilton W. Mabie; "The Founders of New Amsterdam," James H. Canfield; "The Pilgrims and Puritan Fathers of New England," the Rev. Donald Sage Mackay, and "Our Guests," Robert C. Ogden.

JULIUS NEWTON AT BELLEVUE.

Julius Newton, once a prosperous broker, whose vagaries of late years have brought him no little notoriety, was yesterday committed to Bellevue Hospital by Magistrate Mayo, in the Centre Street Court, to be examined as to his sanity.

Newton yesterday drove in a cab to the West Thirtieth Street Station and told Capt. Thomas that he had been robbed of $6,500,000, and that he wanted a strong bodyguard to protect him from injury. For many days past Newton, who lives at the Oakdale, 36 West Thirty-fifth Street, has been telephoning Capt. Titus of the Detective Bureau concerning his troubles and the loss of his millions. He was induced to go to court by Detectives Brown and Shannon, who told him that they came from James R. Keene.

In 1898 Newton was arrested at the instance of A. A. Housman & Co., who charged him with the larceny of $300. He had some time before that lost his large fortune in the rise in Kaffir stocks in the London market. He also won much press comment by bombarding the Herald Square chorus girls with huge bouquets. Later in the year 1898 he was adjudged insane and sent to Bloomingdale Asylum, but subsequently was released.

With a woman known as his wife he was presented in 1884 at the Queen's Drawing Room by United States Minister James Russell Lowell. Later certain facts touching the past life of Mrs. Newton came to Minister Lowell's knowledge and caused the couple's name to be expunged from the list of persons presented.

NOTES ON MATTERS OF THE FINE ARTS.

If Fifth Avenue from Twenty-third Street to Forty-second has become the quarter where the dealers in objects of the fine arts have congregated, a similar movement into Fourth Avenue has taken place on the part of dealers in antiquities and bric-a-brac. Almost all the old furniture and old jewelry men, vendors of pottery and oil paintings, brasses and old bronzes, have drawn together on or near Fourth Avenue between Twenty-third Street and the tunnel. It may be said that in many lines these shops equal, and in some surpass, those of European capitals in the bargains they offer. They have to meet the curious disadvantage that whereas Americans when abroad are commonly taking a vacation with money in their pockets, in New York they are still inthrall to the economies and look hard at a dollar, as they never would at 4s. or 4 marks or 5f. during their trip to Europe. These are not the only disadvantages our bric-a-brac sellers labor under. There is the law against exporting National art works.

***

Spain is the latest country to follow Greece and Italy with a law against the export of antiquities without a special permit. Owners of antiques that have any reference to the history of Spain and Spanish art are to enter the titles of their treasures in a register. Manuscripts, books, medals and costumes, musical instruments and weapons, inscribed stones, carvings, statuettes, statues and monuments, buildings and parts of buildings, pottery, porcelain, and brasses are included in the index. The life of the bric-à-brac is to be more and more anxious, while the tourist will now have the sensation that goes with smuggling whenever he recrosses the Iberian frontiers.

***

The American church for Berlin, designed by Heins & La Farge, is not yet erected. After many long bouts with the building authorities, permission to build has been granted, but the fund still lacks completion. The American colony in Berlin is too small and consists too largely of students of both sexes to subscribe the sum still needed, about $20,000. So the Rev. Dr. Dickie, who has made the erection of the church his life work, has returned to the United States on a quest for aid. The church and rectory are to stand on the Nollendorfer Square. The church turns a gable end with large rose window to the street. To the right of this window, from the corner of the church, rises a tall square tower with belfry crowned by pinnacles at the four corners. This tower is a very handsome feature in the composition.

The fashionable painter M. Chartran has a dozen portraits at the Knoedler Galleries, together with a large painting of Cardinal Richelieu and Father Joseph, "son Eminence Grise." In the latter he has expressed very clearly the haughty character of Richelieu and the mock humility of the potent priest. Among the portraits the best is that of Mrs. E. M. Culver, daughter of Senator Clark, owing to the flowing lines of the drapery and the arms and the pleasing tone of the robe. M. Coquelin as Flandreau and Mme. Sarah Bernhardt as the little Prince in "L'Aiglon" are very tame productions.

***

Three magnificent shore views by Winslow Homer are at Knoedler's Gallery, after being lent for a time to the Union League. "West Point" and "Eastern Point" are stern and truthful studies of the rocky coast of Maine, with the green water hurling itself between brown ledges and lifting itself in columns of spray against dull, fog-bound skies. "The Northeaster" has a similar uplift of dazzling white foam on the left, with a cataract of green water running through the middle scene. In the clear sky to seaward a late sunset draws a broad line of ruby-red along the horizon, while the middle distance of water is streaked with currents and alive with lumpy seas. Mr. Homer has all his old directness and boldness. The French Government has bought for the Luxembourg Gallery one of his paintings shown at Paris last Summer.

***

Zandomeneghi, the French artist, whose thirty paintings, pastels, and water-colors are still the tenants of the Durand-Ruel Galleries, is in some ways to be allied with Raffaelli, but offers remarkable contrasts. He is by birth a Venetian, whence the form of his name, which is dialectic for San Domenico, but he has been for years a comrade in art of Claude Monet, Pisano, Sisley, and the rest of the open-air band. Instead of rapid work like Raffaelli's, in his pictures we get the most painstaking. Instead of insisting on heavy outlines, he has little or no contours. All is the result of careful approach of colors one to the other. He proceeds on the theory that we do not see sharp and definite outlines, but colors. A very successful picture is that of a couple of young women, one with a fleece of auburn hair, who is entertaining a visitor, a young woman in black dress and hat, who wears furs almost the same in tone as her host's locks. It is as if Zandomeneghi, through his intellect, believed in and wrought in the school of Claude Monet, thinking only of the juxtaposition of colors, but through his inborn nature as a Venetian he cannot endure to leave a picture crude. The result is a curious fusing of the new school and the old. Many of these pastels have been labored over as if they were miniatures. They are good "carriers" from a distance, but they also support well a very close examination.

***

Ten or twelve portraits by M. Raimundo de Madrazo are hanging in the galleries of Julius Oehme, the most notable of which is a likeness of Mr. Loubat of New York, now the Duke of Loubat, the gentleman who has enriched the Natural History Museum with casts from Yucatan, written "Medallic Histories," and otherwise made a name for himself outside his Papal title. The best piece of painting, however, is a small portrait of a small girl, daughter of Mr. David Thompson, in which Mr. de Madrazo's brush has taken on a vigor and charmful truth that one misses in the other portraits. There are likenesses of Mrs. Benjamin Brewster, Mrs. E. C. Converse, Mrs. E. E. Swift, and the Messrs. Blumenstiel, Thompson, and F. B. Jennings.

Munich artists are troubled at the resignation of Franz von Lenbach from the Presidency of the Art Association (Muenchener Kuenstlergenossenschaft.) There has been a good deal of criticism of Lenbach, owing to the extravagant way he has managed the funds of the association; when he insisted that the international exhibition at Munich should have the vestibule decorated after a design by Seidl which would swallow up the entire $25,000 allowed for the decorations of the whole interior, he was outvoted and resigned in a huff. Another design by Seidl costing a few hundred dollars was accepted. The Munich artists cannot complain of neglect. Their new Art Palace cost a million dollars. What troubles them now is to find the permanent funds to keep this magnificent home of the arts in proper running order.

President Paul Krüger has ordered a gift for the young Queen of Holland at her approaching marriage which shows the curious patriarchal ideas of the man. It is a thimble of gold carved with a relief by Vernon representing a group of girls at work. The Dutch are charmed with this idea, which is perfectly characteristic of their own countrymen two centuries ago, who were brought up on the Bible and the verses on marriage and household duties written by the Grand Pensionary and national poet Jacob Cats. The thimble is to be reproduced in all sorts of materials and sold at all prices from the highest to the lowest.

Ask Receiver for Benefit Association.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 21.—Papers were filed in the Chancery office to-day requiring cause to be shown at Jersey City on Jan. 28 why a receiver should not be appointed for the Morris and Essex Railroad Employes' Mutual Benefit Association. The application is made by John B. Bostedo and about twenty others, members of the association. It is charged that the association is insolvent; also that the officers at a recent meeting, at which only their friends were admitted as delegates, decided to disband the association. Pending the disposal of the rule the officers are enjoined from conducting any business or disposing of the association's property.

August Belmont Has a Relapse.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., Jan. 21.—August Belmont, who was ill with typhoid, but was convalescent, has had a slight relapse. He caught cold while driving. He has been compelled to postpone his proposed trip to Palm Beach, Fla., on which he was to have started on Wednesday. There is nothing alarming in his condition.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

With the exception of the large dance at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Sloane, there were only a few receptions, luncheons, and bridge whist clubs meeting in town yesterday. Monday is never a very brilliant day, and even the opera was not as well attended as usual. The funeral of Mrs. George Henry Warren in the morning was held at Trinity Chapel and there were many present, notwithstanding the early hour.

***

Mrs. Frederic Neilson and Miss Neilson held their regular Monday "at home" at 100 Fifth Avenue yesterday afternoon. There were a number of callers. In the evening took place the dinner given by Mrs. J. J. Emery, 5 East Sixty-eighth Street, in honor of Miss Esther Morris Hunt, whose marriage to Mr. George M. Woolsey will take place on Feb. 6.

***

Mrs. Edwin A. Stevens will give a dinner on Jan. 27 at the Castle. There will be thirty-two guests, and the Castle will be elaborately decorated. Mrs. Richard Stevens will entertain thirty guests at The Cliffs the first week in February.

***

Mrs. Cadwalader Jones will give a tea on Saturday afternoon at 21 East Eleventh Street for Mrs. F. Marion Crawford, who is to be in New York for a few days. Mrs. Crawford will also be entertained at a musicale by Mrs. J. West Roosevelt on Friday.

***

Capt. and Mrs. Warren C. Beach have cards out for a large dinner in honor of Gen. and Mrs. Brooke, at 585 Fifth Avenue, on Feb. 5. This house has been constructed on the site of the two Field houses, or rather rebuilt. It is one of the largest houses in that part of town, and splendidly adapted for entertaining.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney are to sail for Europe on Jan. 30. They will soon be followed by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and her daughter, Miss Gladys Vanderbilt. William C. Whitney has gone to Aiken for a few days with his daughter, Miss Dorothy Whitney, and Mrs. George Bend. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kemp are at Aiken for the Winter, but Mr. Kemp came up to New York for a few days. Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Gould are at Jekyl Island. Mr. Gould has been cruising on his yacht.

***

Mrs. Arthur Paget will arrive to-day from England. Her stay here will be very short, and it is stated that she will not accept any hospitalities which would require her going to large entertainments on account of the present conditions in London society. Mrs. Paget is simply here on a business visit. Her daughter is yachting with Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Drexel and the yacht may go to Cuba, where Mrs. Paget will go and join the party.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Kountze are stopping for a few days at Morristown, N. J. They will not be away for the Winter, however.

***

Mrs. George Crocker is to give a large breakfast, one of fifty covers, on Tuesday, Feb. 12, at her residence, and this will be followed by a vaudeville entertainment. Mrs. Charles A. Childs has sent out invitations for a small theatre party on the evening of Jan. 29, and this is to be followed by a supper at her city house.

***

The Society of Decorative Art will repeat its kirmess of last Winter on the same date this year—March 14—in the Astoria ballroom. The kirmess, as before, will be managed by Miss Leila Stewart, and in place of the Kipling afternoon that preceded the kirmess of last season, there will be a kirmess for children. This will be preceded by the pantomime of "Cinderella," and after this the children will dance.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Poor of 1 Lexington Avenue have cards out for a reception next Saturday in honor of Mrs. Francis D. Millet and Miss Millet, wife and daughter of the artist, Francis D. Millet. Mrs. Charles Post of Washington Square has cards out for a dinner on Thursday evening, from which she and her guests will go to the second Assembly Ball. Dr. Lewis Rutherfurd Morris and Mrs. Morris have sent out invitations to a dinner to be given in their apartment, in West Fifty-eighth Street, on Tuesday, Feb. 12.

To-day brings another private dance, that of Amadee Depau Moran, for his daughters, the Misses Marie and Rosalie Moran, the former a débutante of last year and the latter of this. This dance will be somewhat larger than the one given by him on Jan. 9.

***

The fourth Fortnightly will also be danced this evening at the Astoria, and, as always, there will be a large attendance, as this is one of the oldest classes, comprising the older girls and men. To-night's cotillion is to be led by Frederick S. Woodruff, and some of the favors will be rather novel. Mrs. L. L. Delafield and several of the other patronesses will receive. The Wednesday Cotillion at Delmonico's tomorrow night will be led by Thomas Coleston Kinney of Virginia, who will dance with Miss Anabel G. Van Nostrand.

***

To-night's dinners are numerous. Mrs. Pembroke Jones will give a large one for débutantes and in honor of Miss Eleanor Jay. Mrs. Astor, Mrs. Ogden Mills, J. J. Van Alen, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hooker Hamersley, and Mrs. J. F. D. Lanier are among the dinner givers. Mrs. Nicholas Fish will give a large luncheon this afternoon for her daughter, Mrs. Robert Burnside, who recently returned from Paris. Mrs. Charles Russell Leaycraft and Miss Leaycraft have cards out for Tuesdays in January. They are stopping at the Buckingham Hotel.

Last night brought the first of the four private dances scheduled for this week—that of Mr. and Mrs. William Douglas Sloane, (Emily T. Vanderbilt,) at their city residence, 2 West Fifty-second Street. The house, which is one of the largest and best adapted in New York for large entertainments, was simply decorated with palms and flowering plants. The street entrance opens directly upon a beautiful fountain, and in the plashing water are growing aquatic plants and odd specimens of the pitcher flower. The immense hall, reached by short flights of steps on either side the fountain, had pots of pink azaleas about the mantel and palms here and there, and in the white and gold ballroom opening off the hall pink shrubs in full flower concealed the musicians as they played. Mrs. Sloane, who was gowned in white relieved with black, and Miss Sloane, who was in white, flower-trimmed, received the guests in the salon. There was general dancing before supper. This was served by Sherry at small tables, decorated with cut flowers, in the immense dining room, hung with green, and adjoining the ballroom. Lander's Orchestra and the Hungarian Band played throughout the evening. After supper there came the cotillion, which was led by Worthington Whitehouse, whose partner was Miss Lila Vanderbilt Sloane. He was assisted by Munson Morris, who danced alone. There were about 100 couples in the cotillion, and the favors were simple but in excellent taste. They consisted of rose tennis fans for the girls and tennis balls for the men, tinsel rosettes for the men, and tinsel scarfs for the women; pearl-mounted opera glasses in handsome bags for the girls and luck pigs in metal for their partners; Mrs. Collins also furnished bronze animals and figs for both, and chatelaines for the girls and pocket mirrors, silver mounted, for the men. There were between 250 and 300 guests, and among them were Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Burton Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. W. Bayard Cutting, Gen. and Mrs. Lloyd Bryce, Mr. and Mrs. Heber R. Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. Oakley Rhinelander, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Mortimer, Mr. and Mrs. F. K. Pendleton, Mr. and Mrs. H. McK. Twombly, Mr. and Mrs. Lorillard Ronalds, the Baron and Baroness de Seillière, the Marquise de Talleyrand-Perigord, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Sorchan, Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, Dr. W. Seward Webb and Mrs. Webb, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Wharton, Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills, Mr. and Mrs. Cass Canfield, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Astor, Mrs. Astor, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Burden, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. F. Grand d'Hauteville, Mr. and Mrs. Goodhue Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Iselin, Jr., Mrs. Maturin Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Egerton Winthrop, Jr., the Misses Josephine Johnson Hewitt, Kathleen Neilson, Caroline Wilmerding, Gladys Brooks, Evelyn Burden, Edith Cushing, Rosamond Street, the Misses Cryder, the Misses Olin, the Misses Kernochan, Sarah Van Alen, Miss Duer, the Misses Gerry, Miss Hall, the Misses Bryce, Justine Cutting, Nora Iselin, Marian Haven, Therese Iselin, and the Misses Gallatin, Kountze, Fish, Sloane, Wells, Schenck, Harriman, Barney, Creighton Webb, and Messrs. Bishop, Brooks, Baldwin, Barger, Elsgden, Lehr, Kane, Olin, Gregory, Griswold, Robbins, Harrison, Robinson, Sloane, Cutting, Whitehouse, and Street.

Mrs. J. J. Emery (Miss Lelia Alexander) gave a luncheon yesterday at her residence, 5 East Sixty-eighth Street, in honor of Miss Esther M. Hunt. Mrs. Emery's guests, besides Miss Hunt, included the Misses Madeline Knowlton, Nathalie Schenck, Florence V. Twombly, Pauline Whittier, Kathleen Neilson, Natalie Wells; Caroline Wilmerding, Lily Oelrichs, and the Misses Hall, Van Rensselaer, Dix, Davies, and Fox. Mrs. Pembroke Jones also gave a luncheon yesterday. Covers were laid for twenty-four women, and the four tables were decorated with yellow daffodils, white lilacs, red tulips, and pink roses respectively, and in the finger bowls were Roman hyacinths, lilies of the valley, and narcissus; loose flowers were also scattered about the tables.

The wedding of Miss Mary Alice Van Nest, the daughter of Mrs. Alexander T. Van Nest, to John Stewart Barney, is to take place in Trinity Chapel at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Dr. William H. Vibbert, vicar of the chapel, is to officiate, and the Rev. Dr. Huntington is to read the betrothal service and Bishop Potter will pronounce the benediction. Miss Van Nest's only attendant will be her cousin, Miss Ellen Storer of Boston. James De Wolfe Cutting will be best man, and the ushers will be W. Rhinelander Stewart, Henry Otis Chapman, William M. V. Hoffman, Robert T. Varnum, Romain Smith, James Henry Smith, Phoenix Ingraham, Norman Walker, and William Lawrence Green of Albany. There is to be a reception for immediate relatives and friends at the house after the ceremony.

"PROM." WEEK AT YALE.

Festivities Begin with Over 900 Guests in New Haven.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 21.—Junior Promenade week started in to-day with the usual festivities that make the week the climax of the year's social life at the university. There are over 900 guests of the undergraduates in town, and apartments at the principal hotels are at a premium.

This evening was held the first important event of the week, the annual Glee and Banjo Club concert, at the Hyperion Theatre. The theatre was crowded with the undergraduates and their guests and the professors and instructors of the university, and the freshmen as usual occupied the gallery in a body. Immediately after the concert the class germans were held. This afternoon there were several teas throughout the city in honor of the "Prom." girls. The largest of these were the Junior Tea, given by Mrs. Eli Whitney at her home, and the Sophomore Tea by Mrs. Henry P. Sargent. At the University Club Tea the following were chaperons: Mrs. C. S. Day, New York City; Mrs. Bayard Dominick, New York City; Mrs. E. G. Stoddard, and Mrs. H. H. Chittenden of this city.

The Junior German was held after the concert to-night in Alumni Hall, and was led by W. E. Day of Indianapolis, and B. C. Rumsay, third, of Buffalo. The patronesses were Mrs. J. R. Swan, Utica; Mrs. B. C. Rumsey, Buffalo; Mrs. Eli Whitney and Mrs. Arthur T. Hadley, New Haven; Mrs. Newton Stokes and Mrs. Marshall J. Dodge, New York City; Mrs. J. W. Burdick, Albany, and Mrs. D. Z. Norton, Cleveland. The Sophomore German was held in Harmony Hall, and was led by C. J. Hamlin of Buffalo, and J. W. Reynolds of St. Louis. No Senior German will be given this year.

Dinner at Senator Hanna's.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Senator and Mrs. Hanna gave their first dinner party of the year last evening, when their guests were the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Gage, the Attorney General and Mrs. Griggs, the Postmaster General and Mrs. Smith, Senator and Mrs. Wetmore, Senator and Mrs. Foraker, Senator and Mrs. Fairbanks, Senator Depew, Mr. and Mrs. Merriam, and Miss Phelps.

J. D. Rockefeller's Gift to His Daughter.

The four-story dwelling 5 West Fifty-third Street was conveyed yesterday by Pauline Myers to John D. Rockefeller for a consideration of $115,000. It has been generally reported that Mr. Rockefeller bought this house as a wedding gift for his daughter Alta, who was married last week to E. Parmelee Prentice of Chicago. The property adjoins at the rear Mr. Rockefeller's residence at 4 West Fifty-fourth Street.

MR. IVISON'S ECCENTRICITIES.

Objected to Show Windows in Stores—Thought One New Bonnet in Ten Years Enough for Any Woman.

The late William Ivison, the publisher, whose will is being contested by a number of heirs-at-law, had some eccentricities which even caused the jurors to smile when testified to in the Supreme Court yesterday.

In addition to his habit of spreading his bonds out before him and kissing them Mr. Ivison held some peculiar opinions. One of these was his belief that there should be no show windows in stores. He frequently declared that these windows attracted the attention of women, and as a result made them spend money. He wanted a law passed prohibiting displays of goods in windows, and further wanted to board up all windows, even before he could get such a law passed.

Miss Ivison M. Ross, one of the witnesses, said that Mr. and Mrs. Ivison boarded for a time with her mother, and that the couple quarreled frequently, and that when these quarrels were on it was customary for her mother to send a bottle of champagne up to the Ivisons' room in order to quiet them. Mr. and Mrs. Ivison separated twice while living at Mrs. Ross's house.

Several other witnesses testified to various acts done by Mr. Ivison. This testimony was for the purpose of trying to establish the fact that Mr. Ivison was not of sound mind when he executed his will leaving all but $10,000 of his large estate to his nephew David Ivison. One point presented was that the testator made his wife wear the same bonnet for nine years, declaring that a new bonnet once in ten years was enough for any woman.

The hearing will be continued to-morrow before Justice O'Gorman and a jury.

Bishop Wigger's Will Probated.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 21.—The will of Bishop Wigger was admitted to probate to-day. The entire estate, both real and personal, is left to Archbishop Corrigan of New York. Bishop McDonnell of Brooklyn, and Bishop McQuaid of Rochester, as joint tenants. They are also named as executors. The will was dated Feb. 1, 1894, and was witnessed by Vicar General J. J. O'Connor, the Rev. T. A. Wallace, and the Rev. J. J. Synott. The latter has since died.

BROOKLYN TROLLEY ACCIDENTS.

Injuries to a Boy and a Motorman May Result Fatally.

Two trolley accidents occurred in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn yesterday, which will probably result fatally.

Ten-year-old Edward Thompson of 1,214 Decatur Street was playing with a number of companions in a sand heap at Cooper Street and Central Avenue, when he slipped and rolled down the pile directly in front of a Central Avenue trolley car. The front wheel of the car passed over his right leg above the knee, crushing it in such a manner that it had to be amputated at St. Catharine's Hospital, where the boy was taken. The little fellow also received internal injuries.

The second victim was John Cook, forty years old, a motorman. He was in charge of a sand car when he was seized with an epileptic fit in Graham Avenue, near Grand Street, and fell over the dashboard. He struck the fender and was being dragged along by the car, when the conductor noticed that he was missing and stopped the car by throwing off the trolley pole. The motorman was then found unconscious. A call was sent to St. Catharine's Hospital, and when Dr. Hoyt arrived he found that Cook was suffering from a fracture of the skull.

One Dollar for a Consumptive.

THE NEW YORK TIMES has received $1 from "A. W. W." for the fund in aid of a consumptive young man now in the mountains.

EDMUND C. STANTON DEAD.

One Time Managing Director of the Metropolitan Opera House Company Passes Away in England.

Edmund Courtlandt Stanton, for many years Managing Director of the Metropolitan Opera House, died Sunday at Bournemouth, England, in the forty-seventh year of his age.

Mr. Stanton was well-known in musical and operatic circles ten years ago, and during his directorate many European singers, who have since become famous, sang for the first time before American audiences. Among these especially were Lilli Lehmann, Alvary, and Fischer. Lehmann won her greatest triumphs as Brunnhilde and Isolde during this period.

Mr. Stanton was made Secretary and Managing Director of the Metropolitan Opera House in 1884. The new building had been open to the public four years. Leopold Damrosch, who introduced the Wagnerian Cycle to America, had died and been succeeded by his son Walter. He, in turn, had given way to Abbey, Schoeffel & Grau, and Italian opera had proved a financial failure. Undaunted by past disasters, Mr. Stanton gathered together the old favorites, secured numerous new ones from abroad, and endeavored to give New Yorkers seasons of opera in French, German, and Italian surpassed by none in the world.

He succeeded for many seasons and remained at the head of the Mtropolitan forces until 1891. During this period Anton Seidl conducted the orchestra. April 7, 1891, admirers of Mr. Stanton and his conductor banqueted the pair at the Liederkranz clubhouse, and shortly after Mr. Stanton announced his retirement from the Metropolitan Company, and the assumption of the position of Treasurer of the Madison Square Garden Company.

April 9 the members of the opera company tendered a benefit to him at the Metropolitan. The event was the occasion of much enthusiasm and display of affection for the former Director.

Differences of opinion arising in the Madison Square Company regarding the management of the Garden Theatre, Mr. Stanton resigned, and some time later went abroad in the interests of an insurance company. He had been in this business before going into musical affairs. In October, 1897, he was declared a bankrupt in London. Of late years his time was spent on the Continent and in England.

PROF. ELISHA GRAY DEAD.

NEWTON, Mass., Jan. 21.—Prof. Elisha Gray of Highland Park, Chicago, was taken ill in the street and died at Newtonville last night. He had been visiting Arthur J. Mundy and his brother in Newtonville, and had made arrangements to go to Maine to-day. During the afternoon yesterday Prof. Gray complained of feeling ill and consulted Dr. Talbot, who told him he had a slight acidity of the stomach. Neuralgia of the heart is assigned as the cause of death.

Elisha Gray, D. Sc., in the opinion of many who have calmly weighed all the evidence on the subject, is likely to receive full justice at the hands of future historians by being immortalized as the inventor of the speaking telephone. Prof. A. Graham Bell on such a decision would be classed as the rival of Prof. Gray who reaped a vast financial reward from one of the most marvelous and important inventions of the nineteenth century, while his fellow-scientist's requital was enduring fame. In the complex litigation that resulted in the declaration that Prof. Bell invented the telephone, an exhaustive review of the merits of the case was submitted to the courts and the public, but general opinion in a large degree holds that the victory was technical, corporate, and on the business and promoting side of the scientific dispute.

Prof. Gray was born at Barnesville, Ohio, Aug. 2, 1835. He began life as a blacksmith, and served an apprenticeship to a carpenter and boatbuilder. His scientific grounding was had at Oberlin College. There he studied physical science, constructed apparatus used in classroom experiments, and acquired the knowledge of the time in regard to electricity and its application. He was at college five years, and six years later, after studying electrical mechanism, filed his first patent—one of the fifty inventions he thus protected. It was for an automatic self-adjusting telegraphic relay.

It was in the early seventies that he devoted close attention to the phenomena of sounds transmitted over telegraph wires—electro-harmonic telegraphy. In pursuing his investigations he made a discovery to which the invention of the telephone was largely due. Relating it himself, he said:

"My nephew was playing with a small induction coil, taking shocks, for the amusement of the younger children. He had connected one end of the secondary coil to the zinc lining of the bathtub, which was dry. Holding the other end of the coil in his left hand, he touched the lining of the tub with the right. In making contact, his hand would glide along the side for a short distance. At these times I noticed that a sound was proceeding from under his hand at the point of contact, having the same pitch and quality as the vibrating electrome."

A caveat was filed by Prof. Gray at Washington Feb. 14, 1876, whose terms were the expectation of perfecting the art of transmitting vocal sounds telegraphically. March 8, 1876, Prof. Bell secured a patent for speaking telephones. Prof. Gray has always insisted that when he filed his caveat he knew nothing of Prof. Bell's work. Prof. Gray told, in substance, what was contended in the courts in relation to his claims to priority. He said that it was with an instrument like that described in the caveat that Prof. Bell obtained his first articulate speech through a wire; that it was after the caveat was filed and after Prof. Bell had visited Washington. Prof. Gray also asserted that the Patent Office examiner explained the caveat to Prof. Bell and three days after Prof. Bell had reconstructed a transmitter like that shown in the caveat.

In the evidence in the litigation a charge of bribery against the examiner is made. Only recently Prof. Gray asserted that he described the principle and method of telephonic operation and showed Prof. Bell how to proceed.

The award of the courts was to Prof. Bell. Prof. Gray parted with his rights under the name of the Harmonic Telegraph Company in the transaction by which the Western Union Company was retired from the field. He became so poor that boarders were taken into his household, but later on retrieved his fortunes.

Prof. Gray also invented the telantograph, to transmit writing or sketches by telegraph. Since the Summer of 1899 he has been interested in perfecting an invention to send submarine signals by electricity.

DR. GEORGE T. RUNDLE DEAD.

PASSAIC, N. J., Jan. 21.—Dr. George T. Rundle was injured by a train on the Lackawanna Railroad at Delawanna last night. He was taken to the Passaic Hospital, where he died this morning. Dr. Rundle drove to Delawanna to respond to the call of a patient. He started to return and drove rapidly along the road which leads from Washington Avenue to the river road. The approach to the Lackawanna crossing on the south side is up a hill, and trains going west are hidden from view a little distance off.

The physician did not see a train which was going toward Paterson at a rapid rate until it was upon him. He tried to jump, but the engine struck the carriage and demolished it. He was hurled into the air and landed in the gully beside the track, in an unconscious condition. The horse escaped unhurt.

Dr. Rundle was about thirty years of age. He resided with his sister, Miss Rundle, at 85 Passaic Street. He was a prominent member of the Kenilworth Society and of several other societies. His wife died some time ago.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Warren Leland, Jr.

Warren Leland, Jr., proprietor of the Hotel Grenoble, died in the hotel yesterday morning. Mr. Leland, who was forty-six years old, had long suffered from Bright's disease. He had been confined to his room for the last two months.

He belonged to a family of hotel proprietors. His cousin, Warren Leland, Sr., was proprietor of the Windsor Hotel. It will be remembered that the wife of Mr. Leland, Sr., died from the effects of the shock of the fire which destroyed the hotel, and her husband followed her within a few weeks. Both Mr. and Mrs. Leland died at the Grenoble, where they went after the fire. Warren Leland, Jr., was for many years proprietor of the Ocean House, at Newport.

John J. McQuillan.

John J. McQuillan, a well-known newspaper reporter, died yesterday, in St. Catharine's Hospital, Brooklyn, of bronchitis.

Mr. McQuillan was born in Brooklyn forty-three years ago. He was graduated from St. James College, and later entered the composing room of The New York Star, then owned by John Kelly. While in the composing room he contributed a number of articles to the paper which attracted the notice of John Kelly, who assigned him to the reportorial department. Later Mr. McQuillan went to New Jersey and took charge of the Essex County edition of The New York World. During the hydrophobia scare in Newark, N. J., when a mad dog bit several children, Mr. McQuillan secured the services of Dr. Billings to accompany the children to the Pasteur Institute, in France. He was complimented by the publisher of the paper and brought to New York. His last newspaper work was on The Brooklyn Times. His wife died some

EXPERTS WITH THE CUE

Poggenburg Defeated by Edward Gardner at the Hanover Club.

STARK'S REMARKABLE SHOTS

Surprises Furnished in the Two Games Played in the National Association Billiard Tournament.

Edward Gardner, the Passaic Club billiard expert, threw a decided surprise into the billiard camp at the Hanover Club, Brooklyn, last night, when the championship tournament of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players was resumed. Gardner met the former winner of many hard-fought matches, Ferdinand Poggenburg, who won the Hanover Club tournament last year, and is also the billiard champion of the Leiderkranz Club of this city. The Jerseyman stood up before the old-time victor like a veteran, and defeated him with unexpected ease by 300 points to 207. The game was fourteen-inch balk line, as are all in the present tournament.

The Gardner-Poggenburg game was the seventh in the series, and as it is the intention to finish the contest this week, the game was started early, and was followed by a second match, J. Byron Stark of Wilkesbarre, Penn., and Frank Gardner, the Crescent Athletic Club champion, being the competitors.

The large clubroom was crowded with over 300 enthusiasts when Referee Edward McLaughlin called the match. Every seat was occupied, and it is safe to say that not one man in a hundred expected to see anything else than a triumph for Poggenburg. He is a strong favorite to win, and many of the critics had predicted that he would go through the tournament with an unbroken line of victories. Byron Stark was supposed to be his strongest rival, but the result showed that reversals of form were quite as possible to be illustrated in billiards as in any other form of sportive recreation.

Poggenburg started the game, beginning far better than his opponent, for at the close of the tenth inning he had 67 points to his credit while Gardner had only 13. Poggenburg's tenth inning was a run of 30, well divided between nursed balls and difficult cushion carroms. There was nothing thus far to indicate that general expectations would be shattered. In the twelfth inning the Jersey player did some really good playing for the first time, and did not stop until he ran up 21 points by a series of brilliant open plays.

A little later he made a run of 17, following it with successive runs of 15, 47, and 19, which startling play turned the leadership over to Mr. Gardner. At the sixteenth inning Poggenburg led by 20 points, but Gardner's 47 in the next inning put him well to the front and he was never passed.

Gardner's 47 was only 3 behind the best single run of the tournament. Beginning with the nineteenth inning, a marked change came over Poggenburg's game. For twelve innings it was disappointingly dreary, finally relieved by an interesting run of 24. Gardner, in the meanwhile, had been playing a dashing game, and the spectators were frequently stirred to applause by his masterful execution of difficult cushion carroms. Better open shots, running from one point of the table to the other and finding the mark with a superb nicety of judgment, are seldom seen in any amateur championship of Class A calibre. A grand run of 33 in the thirty-ninth inning brought Gardner's score up to 275, while Poggenburg was helplessly in the rear with 180.

Three failures toward the finish seemed to preclude the possibility of Poggenburg's reaching 300, but a rally in the forty-sixth and final inning brought his score up to 207. After making ten points in the forty-fifth inning, Gardner missed an easy carrom toward getting four more and running out, but he got them in the next inning and was greeted with a royal round of applause as the 300 limit was reached. The scores were:

Edward Gardner—0 2 0 0 0 1 1 3 3 3 3 2 1 0 3 17 15 47 19 1 0 2 0 7 0 13 11 14 15 0 0 0 3 0 2 0 2 0 4 11 33 1 4 1 1 2 1 0 6. Total, 300. Average, 6 24-46. High runs, 47 33 21 20 19 17 15 15 14 13 11 11 10.

Ferdinand Poggenburg—1 1 2 1 0 0 5 11 7 0 3 0 1 6 0 1 1 0 0 1 3 0 2 0 1 6 6 0 3 0 1 0 2 0 2 4 2 5 0 0 0 5 4 0 2 1 0 0 0 15. 2. Total, 207. Average, 4 23-46. High runs—30 24 10 15 13 12 11.

After an interval of fifteen minutes the second game was started between J. Byron Stark and Frank Gardner. It began slowly, but was brought up to the interesting point by a run of 33 by Gardner in the fourth inning. The latter only held his lead for a few innings, and in the sixteenth inning, Stark, in a run of 35, made successfully two difficult massé shots. One of them was, beyond question, the most brilliant shot seen in the tournament. It was in one of the corners, and Stark had to draw his massé shot. It counted, and the crowd broke forth into tumultuous applause, so that it was fully a minute before Stark could resume playing.

Referee McLaughlin, after the game, said: "That was the finest massé shot I ever saw in any tournament."

Stark continued to lead, but Gardner gave him a hot battle, and in the thirty-ninth inning the latter created a sensation by making a run of 50, equaling the best record this year, made last week by Stark. Stark won in the sixty-second inning by 300 points to 274.

The scores were:

J. Byron Stark—1 2 0 7 1 1 5 2 1 2 1 0 4 6 4 4 0 3 5 5 0 0 1 5 0 1 1 1 2 3 3 2 0 0 3 2 2 8 1 2 2 4 0 2 2 0 2 7 8 4 2 0 6 0 0 1 0 0 3 8 4 2 2 5 1 4. Total, 300. Average, 4 52-62.

Frank Gardner—0 0 0 2 5 0 0 3 1 0 0 4 2 0 0 2 7 1 0 0 0 4 4 0 0 6 0 1 1 3 0 2 8 2 5 1 4 5 0 3 0 6 0 6 0 12 0 1 4 7 0 1 1 1 3 0 1 2 4 9 1 4 3 0 0. Total, 274. Average, 4 28-61.

Two games will be played to-day. Ferdinand Poggenburg and Arthur Townsend will meet in the first game, and the second match will be between Frank A. Keeney and Frank Gardner.

Knickerbocker A. C. Billiards.

Joseph Steiner won the Class Y billiard handicap at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club last night. He had an unbroken line of victories, and defeated in the last game C. M. Soisone by 100 points to 117 actual, but the latter had to get 125 to win. In the Class X, fourteen-inch balk-line, match, M. A. Diaz, handicap 125, defeated A. Bennett, handicap 150, by 125 points to 124. The Class X series will probably be finished to-night, and the final games will be between the victors of the three classes, X, Y, and Z.

Woman Billiard Player's Feats.

A remarkable exhibition of billiard shots was made in Maurice Daly's rooms, Thirty-first Street and Broadway, yesterday afternoon, by Miss May Kaarius, a new star in the billiard world. A large crowd, in which were many noted amateurs and local experts, witnessed the display of fancy shots, and the general opinion when Miss Kaarius finished her play was that no billiard player in the world can equal the young woman in her own line. Maurice Daly was her opponent, he attempting, with three trials at each shot, to duplicate the woman player's feats, but Miss Kaarius had him vanquished from the start. The woman expert is ambidextrous, and no possible position of the balls puts her at a disadvantage. Her feats in massé shots commanded continuous applause. The ease and grace of her cue stroke was a show in itself. The balls were placed for each feat, and the shots made included many seemingly impossible counts, the most spectacular of which were her "push draw," a massé known as "May's own," and some brilliant follows. As a wind-up she kept eight balls going in procession, hardly a feet apart, by marvelous delicacy, judgment, and accuracy of stroke, then, with sixteen balls, played in the same manner, from many cushions, gathered the sixteen in a compact bunch in one corner of the table. She will repeat her exhibition each afternoon this week.

A. A. U. Basket Ball Championship.

The basket ball championship of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union will probably be decided in Flushing at the armory of the Seventeenth Separate Company. The officials of the union have made a proposition to the militiamen to the effect that they assume the management of the event this year and that the contests be held on the drill floor in the Flushing armory. The officials of the command have taken the matter under advisement and have given a semi-official answer, to the effect that they will handle the matter in full.

An innovation that will be welcomed by the players is proposed by Manager Thomas J. Dooley of the Seventeenth Separate Company, who offers to award, in addition to the five medals for the team that wins the championship, two extra medals for the two substitutes who have to train and get into condition for the games.

SHOOTING ON ARMORY RANGES.

Teams of Company G Made High Scores for Seventh Regiment Trophies.

In the competition for the Kemp and Clark trophies of the Seventh Regiment, which was continued on the armory ranges yesterday evening, the teams of Company G made the highest scores that have yet been made in the contest. For the Edward Kemp trophy for teams of twenty-five men the marksmen of the Seventh Company scored 515 out of a possible total of 625 at 200 yards, and 554 out of the same maximum score at 500 yards, a total of 1,069 out of a possible 1,250. This is just two points better than Company F.'s score of 1,067, which was the best total for this trophy made in the first half of the competition last week.

For the Col. Emmons Clark trophy for teams of fifty men, Company G scored 2,013 out of a possible 2,500, beating Company K's score of 2,007 by six points. The detailed scores follow:

CENTURY ROAD CLUB RECORDS.

Chairman Ducker of the Records Committee Issues His Annual Report.

Chairman Henry E. Ducker of the Road Records Committee of the Century Road Club of America has issued his annual report of records for the past year. The "century honor roll" of riders who have ridden 100 or more centuries during their membership in the organization contains fifty-eight names. Four of these have ridden over 300 centuries, as follows: 374—J. H. George, Philadelphia, Penn.; 315—M. N. Keim, Philadelphia, Penn.; 302—J. M. Noble, Philadelphia, Penn.; 300—Victor H. Morgenroth, Baltimore, Md.

The following ten members have ridden over 200 centuries: 294—A. L. Matlack, Camden, N. J.; 279—Mrs. George Bunker, Chicago, Ill.; 233—J. H. Hunter, Toledo, Ohio; 230—E. N. Roth, Chicago, Ill.; 217—S. M. Warns, Baltimore, Md.; 211—Thomas M. Richards, Camden, N. J.; 208—Charles A. Lehritter, New York City; 204—Gus Egloff, New York City; 204—P. C. Wright, Colorado Springs, Col.; 202—R. E. O'Connor, Chicago, Ill.

In the number of centuries ridden during 1900 A. L. Matlack leads with a total of 201, almost one a day, excluding Sundays. Others who have ridden over 100 centuries are: 167—Thomas M. Richards, Camden, N. J.; 150—Victor H. Morgenroth, Baltimore, Md.; 106—Edward Lotz, Baltimore, Md.; 102—Mrs. E. R. Bayne, New York City.

The records in the mileage competition show seven members with totals of over 10,000 miles, the first two also beating the best previous records by over 5,000 miles. The totals of these seven members follow: 38,887, W. L. Stannard, Springfield, Mass.; 38,205, A. L. Matlack, Camden, N. J.; 28,064, Thomas M. Richards, Camden, N. J.; 22,664, S. E. Belcher, Jr., New York City; 17,313, V. H. Morgenroth, Baltimore; 12,027, James McIlrath, St. Paul, Minn.; 10,214, Isaac Gillet, Watervliet, N. Y.

Twenty-two others rode between 5,000 and 10,000 miles.

In the New York State century competition the leaders are: 102, Mrs. Emma R. Bayne, New York; 83, Isaac Gillet, Watervliet; 51, Miss Margaret Gast, New York; 50, Gilbert C. Badeau, Brooklyn; 48, Samuel E. Belcher, Jr., New York.

A most remarkable individual record is made by A. L. Matlack, Camden, N. J., who holds five flowless records: Sixty-day national century record, 80 centuries; year's mileage National, 38,205 miles; New Jersey State year's mileage, 38,205 miles; year's century record National, 261 centuries; New Jersey State year's century record, 261 centuries; 60-day National mileage record, 16,491 miles; 60-day New Jersey State mileage record, 10,491 miles.

ASSOCIATED CYCLISTS' OFFICERS.

Annual Meeting of the Combined Long Island Clubs.

At the annual meeting of the Associated Cycling Clubs of Long Island, which was held at the Elephant Clubhouse, Fulton Street, Brooklyn, last night, the following officers were unanimously elected for the coming year:

President—R. J. Wulff, Prospect Wheelmen; First Vice President—Robert F. Mullins, Orient Wheelmen. Second Vice President—Benjamin Anchell, Bushwick Wheelmen; Treasurer—George R. Smith, Greater New York Wheelmen; Secretary—Arthur Lux, Mutual Wheelmen; Trustees—Theodore Kindl, Twenty-sixth Ward Wheelmen; Michael Schulz, Dean Hyde Club; Edward Obert, Evergreen Wheelmen; James L. Brush, Logan Wheelmen; L. F. Goldman, Williamsburg Wheelmen; Frank Flynn, Howard Wheelmen.

The reports of the various standing committees of the association were received with enthusiasm, as all showed that the past year had been one of activity and prosperity. The financial report was particularly satisfactory, showing a good balance in the treasury. It was decided to have printed a report of the work of the association during the year, and to circulate it among the local cycling clubs. The new committees for the present year will be announced at the regular meeting next month.

The association passed a resolution favoring the paving with asphalt of Bushwick Avenue from Arion Place to the Eastern Parkway, a distance of about two miles, and voted to co-operate with an association of residents of the Bushwick district in the attempt to secure the improvement.

Disposal of Bicycle Race Receipts.

The fight of William A. Brady against James C. Kennedy and Patrick T. Powers over the bicycle races at Madison Square Garden has at last found its way into the courts. Mr. Brady through his counsel yesterday made an application to Justice Truax in the Supreme Court for an injunction restraining Kennedy and Powers from disposing of any of the money in their hands which they received from the six-day races until the question of a dissolution of the partnership existing between the three men could be determined. A temporary receiver was also asked for. Mr. Brady claimed that the profits arising from the races amounted to $12,000, and that he wanted his share. The Justice will hear argument on the motion to-morrow.

Reunion of Old Athletes.

There was a great gathering of old-time athletes last night at the Argyle Hotel, on Pierrepont Street, Brooklyn, when the annual dinner of the veterans of the Williamsburg Athletic Club was held.

Among those present were Samuel C. Austin, Frank P. Murray, former world's amateur champion walker, whose record still holds good for one mile; William H. Robertson, Frank Sperry, Frederick W. Wurster, former Mayor of Brooklyn; William Cullen Bryant, Frederick W. Burns, Augustus Peverelly, Stewart Barr, William H. Struse, James E. Sullivan, Frederick C. Babcock, William H. Parry, Capt. Darius Ferry, Frank M. Price, Joseph G. Liddle, Clarence T. Wiegand, Samuel Doty See, William H. Purdy, G. H. Mason, John Burns, Philip Wingert, Major Bell, Col. De Long, and many other men now famous in other walks of life, but who in their youth were famous as wearers of the blue and gold of the old Williamsburg Athletic Club.

SCHEDULE OF BOWLING GAMES.

Five Local Tournaments to End During the Present Week.

Most of the games in the local bowling tournaments which were postponed on account of the absence of a number of the prominent local teams at the Chicago tournament two weeks ago will be decided during the coming week, and at least five of the local leagues—the Columbia, Harlem, North Side, American National, and Greater New York—series will come to an end for the season. The Columbia League will be succeeded by the Columbia three-men tourney, the North Side National tournament will replace the North Side League, and the Greater New York sub-tournament will succeed the Greater New York series.

The schedule for the week in the principal local tournaments follows:

Doings of College Athletes.

Rowing is attracting a large amount of attention at present among the naval cadets at Annapolis Naval Academy, and a crack four-oared crew have left the academy, but there is plenty of good material to form a strong crew. Active training will begin during the first week of February. Races have already been arranged with Georgetown, on May 4; Columbia, May 11; Cornell, May 18; University of Pennsylvania, first and second crews, May 25. All of these races will be rowed at Annapolis.

Sixty-seven men are practicing for the track team of the University of Pennsylvania. The present work is being conducted indoors, and consists in fast running, starting, and practice on the weight machines. Graduate Kruenzline is training the hurdlers and jumpers; Grant and Orton have the middle and long distance men in hand; McCracken, who is still suffering from grip, will have charge of the weight men, while Trainer George Turner has general supervision over the entire field. Hare, McClain, and Bushnell are the only men now in the university who have won intercollegiate points.

Princeton will enter a team in the indoor games of the Boston Athletic Association on Feb. 16. The team will compete in the relay race, which, from the number of college teams entered, will be one of the big features of the meet. Harvard, Pennsylvania, Cornell, Dartmouth, Amherst, Williams, Tufts, and the Institute of Technology will be among the other teams in the race. Several of the leading Princeton athletes will enter the other open events.

Coach Jennings of the Cornell baseball team does not think the prospects for the coming year are as bright as was the case last year. He says that the weakest point is in the pitching staff, Lyons being the only pitcher of the former team who will be on the nine this year. The outfield is also weak, but a number of promising new candidates are expected to develop into strong players.

The University of Wisconsin is working hard to make a big Western rowing feature of its proposed intercollegiate boat race on the Chicago drainage canal. The Fourth of July is the date mentioned for the race, but although Western accounts predict the presence of many Eastern colleges, those statements do not seem to be borne out by facts. The crew authorities at Pennsylvania say they will not go out, and it would be impossible, at any rate, as their big race at Poughkeepsie comes on July 3. Similar sentiments come from Cornell.

A. A. Stagg of the University of Chicago has taken active charge of the candidates for the track team, a regular amount of work is being done each day in the gymnasium. He is making a specialty of high jumpers, in which the talent is rather weak. The best men have records of five feet six and seven inches, and Stagg wants to improve on this materially within the next three months.

An effort is being made by Hobart College students to bring about a more healthy spirit in athletics than has been the case for the last two or three years. A plan has been started to build a new athletic field, and the students have unanimously decided to organize and support a baseball team, although the material at present looks rather weak.

Georgetown University is planning for a big indoor meet on March 2. Arthur Duffy, Georgetown's crack short distance runner, has been appointed team captain, and the long rest he has recently had is said to have completely healed the injury he received in the Paris games. He has commenced crack practice, and will be a competitor in the Knickerbocker Athletic Club's games to be held in this city at Madison Square Garden on Feb. 4. He is also entered for the indoor meet of the Boston Athletic Association on Feb. 16. An indoor track giving a seventy-five-yard straightaway has just been completed in the basement of Georgetown's gymnasium.

Paul W. Ripley, one of the strongest freshmen candidates in the University of Wisconsin for the track team, broke his arm last week while pole-vaulting in the gymnasium. He will not be able to do any more athletic work this season.

Race Track Results.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 21.—One mile and a sixteenth—Arthur Lyman, 103 pounds (Cochran,) 1; Petit Maitre, 106, 2; Prince Real, 107, 3. Time—1:50. Six and a half furlongs—Athara, 104, (Wonderly,) 1; Kohnwreath, 102, 2; Divonne, 106, 3. Time—1:23¼. One mile and a half—Admetus, 107, (Dale,) 1; Bert Davis, 101, 2; Woodprice, 108, 3. Time—2:37. Handicap, six furlongs—Bummer, 109, (Black,) 1; Sakatuck, 107, 2; Aades, 95, 3. Time—1:14. Seven furlongs—Free Hand, 107, (Winkfield,) 1; Porter B., 94, 2; Dousterswivel, 107½, 3. Time—1:29¼. Seven furlongs—Jim Breeze, 100½, (Walsh,) 1; Mamie Lou, 90, 2; Fair Deceiver, 101, 3. Time—1:30.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 21.—Credo, against whom some books laid 50 to 1, proved a surprise at Tanfaran to-day. He went to the front at the start, and won easily from Vinctor, the 1 to 2 favorite. The track was muddy, but the public picked the winners, four favorites and a second choice getting the money. Results: Six furlongs—Ordnung, 112, (J. Miller,) 1; Gold Lace, 102, 2; Tasdale, 107, 3. Time—1:15⅘. Mile and an eighth—Credo, 112, (Lee,) 1; Vincitor, 115, 2; Charles Le Bel, 112, 3. Time—1:59. Hurdles, one and three-quarters mile—Lomo, 155, (Hueston,) 1; Lothian, 136, 2; Granger, 155, 3. Time—3:27¼. Six and a half furlongs—Mocorito, 107½, (Henry,) 1; Ada N., 99, 2; Bernota, 100, 3. Time—1:23. Six and a half furlongs—Handicapper, 110, (T. Burns,) 1; The Singer, 104, 2; El Toplo, 92, 3. Time—1:24½. One mile—Astor, 106, (T. Burns,) 1; Scotch Plaid, 106, 2; Hohenlohe, 109, 8. Time—1:43¾.

NO CENTREBOARD DEFENDER.

Difference of Opinion Among Sponsors for Hanley Yacht.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 21.—The Hanley centreboard yacht as a competitor in the trial races of cup defenders will not be built, according to the statement to-night of one of the men who offered to give financial aid to the project. The reason given is that the men who intended to be the sponsors for the boat were divided over the matter of material, many wanting a metal hull, while others held to a wooden craft on the lines drawn by Mr. Henley, the Quincy Point yacht builder.

From the first time the project was broached there seemed to be much vagueness as to the carrying out of the plan, and its abandonment will not cause much surprise in yacht circles.

$500 Cup for Corinthians.

Special to The New York Times.

BAY SHORE, L. I., Jan. 21.—J. Campbell Smith of the Penataquit Corinthian Yacht Club of this place has offered a five-hundred-dollar cup for a series of races throughout the coming season for the thirty-foot class of sloops, owners to sail. The only stipulations are that the boats must belong to a member of the club, and be sailed by a member of the club, and that the boat winning the greatest number of races throughout the season will win the prize for its owner's personal property.

Yachtsmen's Club Nominations.

The Nominating Committee of the Yachtsmen's Club has made the following nominations for officers for the coming year, to be voted upon at the annual meeting on Feb. 12:

President—David Banks; Vice President—Fred M. Hoyt; Secretary—Edward M. MacLellan; Treasurer—Philip G. Sanford; Trustees—Class of 1903, (to fill unexpired term,) Clendenin Eckert; class of 1904, Hazen L. Hoyt and Charles T. Pierce.

An amendment to the by-laws will be voted upon at this meeting, under which members of the Board of Trustees will be enabled to propose or second new members.

Work on the Syndicate Yacht.

BRISTOL, R. I., Jan. 21.—This week, it is said that the frame of the cup defender will be placed in its vertical position on the keel. About one dozen frames are ready, but it is proposed to have a few more connected with the deck beams before the timbering of the boat begins. The stern of the defender is in process of being fastened in place to-day. Sunday an Adams Express car came here specially with steel bulbed angle material which was moved to the Herreshoffs' shops this morning. Rigging material for the new yacht, consisting of both steel wire and large hemp rope, has just been received at the boat shops. Billman of Boston is to fit the defender's rigging.

Lawson Boat to be Rushed.

BOSTON, Jan. 21.—Designer Crowninshield of the Lawson yacht was at the Lawley yard all day, arranging the minor details of the work, preparatory to going ahead with a rush in the near future. The patterns for the stem and stern posts were set up to-day and the work of fitting the floor plates was begun.

Harvard Crew Candidates.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 21.—Candidates for the Harvard freshman crew to the number of 127 presented themselves for enrollment to-night. This number is much smaller than that of last year, but the percentage of men who have had rowing experience is somewhat larger. The men were divided into squads and will begin practice to-morrow under the direction of Coach Vail of the Newell Boat Club.

Williams and Columbia Athletics.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Jan. 21.—Manager Goldthwait of the Williams College track team has completed arrangements for a dual indoor meet between Williams and Columbia University on Feb. 22 at the armory of the Twenty-second Regiment, New York City. The programme will include a 40-yard dash, 40-yard hurdle, 100-yard run, mile run, shot put, pole vault, 300-yard dash, and a relay race.

Vardon Will Return Next Month.

Harry Vardon will probably return to the United States next month, and, although the news of his return and future plans are being kept rather quiet, it is the general impression that he will make a tour in February and March of Florida, playing particularly under the auspices of the Florida East Coast Golf Association, which controls the hotel links at Nassau, Miami, Palm Beach, Ormonde, and St. Augustine. Vardon has been quoted as saying in England that he would not be able to return to play in the open championship of Great Britain this year, which will be held in the Spring. This means that he has a number of engagements or a permanent position so secure here that he does not care about winning back the honors which Taylor took from him last season. Vardon had several flattering offers from clubs in this country to become the resident professional, but so far he has given no indication of accepting them. He is now at his home, in Ganton, England.

RARE BIRDS TO BE SEEN.

Homer Davenport Will Have the Largest Number of Pheasants on Exhibition.

Pigeons and poultry will be shown in a large number of common and fancy varieties in the Madison Square Garden this week, beginning to-morrow morning. Never before in the history of the Poultry Show has there been such a demand for space, and this season, for the first time, the concert hall has been drawn upon for space, and more room in the galleries will be used than ever before.

In some of the fancy bird classes the exhibit will be superior to former years. Homer Davenport, the artist and cartoonist, has always made one of the finest shows of pheasants, his collection last year embracing twenty rare varieties and being so far superior to all others as to make competition impossible, and a special prize was given to Mr. Davenport. This year he will show twenty-eight varieties, the largest number ever brought together in this country. Among them will be Japanese, Siamese, wild Java, Manchuria, jungle and golden pheasants, and two or three rare birds from Africa.

The cats will be more numerous than last year, and they with the rabbits, will be placed in the concert hall. Miss L. C. Moeran of this city has several rich-looking Manx short-haired cats. Gen. C. H. T. Collis has one cat in the show, a rare blue long-haired cat, while H. T. Draper is the possessor of one blue-blooded cat which is entered under the name of Master William McKinley, and it is valued at $100.

Penn. Decides in Favor of Yale.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Jan. 21.—The manager of the University of Pennsylvania gymnastic team returned home from Princeton to-day, whither he had gone to arrange a meet with the Orange and Black. There was a possibility of having both Yale and Princeton in joint meets with the University of Pennsylvania, but as both these colleges wanted the latter part of February, it was impossible to suitably arrange for both. Yale has first choice on the night of Feb. 22, and will in all probability take that date, as she herself proposed it, together with the 23d as an alternate. Princeton was given the option of a date in the first part of the month, the 8th or the 9th, but could not come on either of these days.

The Orange and Black was anxious to have a meet with Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, and Manager Aiken and Capt. Katzenbach expressed themselves as desirous of fixing a date for the latter part of February. As this was practically impossible for Pennsylvania the matter was dropped.

Harvard's Lacrosse Games.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 21.—Harvard's lacrosse team will take a Southern trip this Spring, playing Columbia, Lehigh, Pennsylvania, Johns Hopkins, and other colleges with whom schedule dates are now being arranged. The trip will last two weeks, and will be made immediately after the class games, the latter part of April. On the way home the team will play Columbia in New York, and later will meet Cornell at Ithaca. Harvard's team is very strong this year, and expects to win a good string of victories on its trip. H. L. Grimes and George Knapp, Harvard Law School men and graduates of Johns Hopkins University, are coaching the team, with the assistance of Hugh McConaghy, a Canadian player and an old member of the Crescent Athletic Club of Boston. A game with this organization will open the season the third week in April.

Eighth Regiment's Trophy Shoot.

In the monthly shooting competition by companies of the Eighth Regiment for the Chauncey Challenge Cup, teams of men shooting, Company F last night led with a total score of 484 scored, the winning team beating by twenty-nine points its own winning score of 455, made in the December competition. The full winning score of Company F follows:

Colgate's Basket Ball Games.

HAMILTON, N. Y., Jan. 21.—The Colgate University basket ball team has just scheduled the following games: Jan. 24, Watervliet Young Men's Christian Association team at Watervliet, and Feb. 21, Mount Vernon High School team at Hamilton.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

New York City.

JOHN MCGOWAN.—Schedules of John McGowan, grocer, at 581 Second Avenue, show liabilities $2,180, nominal assets $764, actual assets $375.

JOSEPH WINTER.—Joseph Winter, dealer in dry goods at 213 and 215 Willis Avenue, Bronx, made an assignment yesterday to Henry Marx. Mr. Winter has been in the dry goods business over twenty years, and moved to the present location four years ago. His statement last February showed assets $11,200 and liabilities $4,500.

MANHATTAN RESTAURANT COMPANY.—Judge Truax of the Supreme Court has appointed Augustus Schell Hughes temporary receiver for the Manhattan Restaurant Company, at 1,281 Broadway, on the application of J. Samuel Smoot, President, and Edward Cole, Secretary, who hold 185 out of 200 shares of stock in the company. The liabilities are $14,583, and nominal assets $8,500, consisting of fixtures, $3,000; stock, $500; plant, good will, and lease, $5,000. For some time past business has been poor and not sufficient to pay running expenses. Mr. Smoot is a creditor for $4,000, and Mr. Cole $3,000 for loans. The company was organized in March, 1898, with a capital stock of $10,000, by some of the creditors of J. S. Thorpe, to continue the business, which had been started in 1881.

KUGLER SYNDICATE.—Deputy Sheriff Rinn has taken charge of the store of the Kugler Syndicate, dealer in five and ten cent goods at 281 Grand Street, running through to 84 Forsyth Street, on three attachments, aggregating $2,240. They are in favor of C. Kaufmann & Son, $222, for merchandise; Max L. Siesfeld, $1,320, on an assigned claim for tinware sold to the syndicate by the National Enameling and Stamping Company, and C. W. Shepherd, $698, on an assigned claim for merchand

FEDERAL COURTS.

United States Supreme Court.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Supreme Court of the United States:

9—Michael P. Dooley, receiver, &c., plaintiff in error, vs. James Pease. In error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.—Judgment affirmed with costs and cause remanded to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois. Opinion by Justice Shiras.

The Chief Justice announced the following orders of the court:

269—The Citizens' Bank of Louisiana, plaintiff in error, vs. Caleb H. Parker, tax collector, &c. Motions to dismiss or affirm postponed to the hearing of the cause on its merits.

535—The American Sugar Refining Company, petitioner, vs. the City of New Orleans.—Rule to show cause awarded, returnable Feb. 25.

Original—Ex parte: In the matter of Christian Daniel et al.—Motion for leave to file petition for a writ of mandamus, &c., denied.

526—S. D. Hatfield et al., appellants, vs. Henry C. King.—Submission set aside and cause restored to the docket, for oral argument, and the Clerk is directed to bring this order to the attention of the Attorney General of West Virginia.

442—Phillips and Buttoroff Manufacturing Company, petitioner, vs. James G. Whitney, as assignee.—Petition for a writ of certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit submitted by J. Quintus Cohen, for the petitioner, and by O. W. Underwood and James J. Garrett for the respondent, with leave to Mr. Cohen to file brief for petitioner within two weeks.

The Florida Central and Peninsular Railroad Company, plaintiff in error, vs. W. H. Reynolds, Controller, &c., et al.—Motions to dismiss or affirm submitted by W. B. La Mar in behalf of W. B. La Mar, in support of motions, with leave to Frederic D. McKenney, for the plaintiff in error, to file brief in opposition within five days.

525—The town of Mount Vernon, petitioner, vs. D. B. Wesson.—Petition for a writ of certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit submitted by Thomas M. Jett, for the petitioner, and by Thomas C. Mather for the respondent.

503—Frederick Williams, petitioner, vs. George C. Gaylord et al.—Petition for a writ of certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit submitted by C. Walter Artz, for the petitioner, and by Curtis H. Lindley, for the respondent, with leave to Mr. Artz to file a reply brief within one week.

201—Thomas F. Farrell et al., plaintiffs in error, vs. the West Chicago Park Commissioners.—Motion to postpone preparation of this cause for hearing until after the disposition of No. 160, submitted by A. J. Hopkins, in behalf of George W. Wilbur, for the plaintiffs in error, in support of motion, and by Robert A. Childs and Charles Hudson, for the defendants in error, in opposition.

391—John T. Pirie et al., &c., appellants, vs. Chicago Title and Trust Company, Trustee, &c.—Argument continued by Herman Frank, for the appellee, and concluded by A. J. Pflaum, for the appellants.

13 and 14, original.—Ex parte: In the matter of the District of Columbia, petitioner.—Argued by Robert A. Howard, for the petitioners, with leave to A. A. Hoehling, Jr., to file brief in behalf of certain interested parties within five days.

278—Homer Bird, plaintiff in error, vs. the United States.—Argued by L. T. Michener, for the plaintiff in error, and by Assistant Attorney General Beck, for the defendant in error.

Whereas George E. Gartland of the City of New York has lately applied to the Surrogate's Court of our County of New York to have a certain instrument in writing, bearing date the 14th day of June, 1900, relating to both real and personal property, duly proved as the last will and testament of Alexander L. McDonald, late of the County of New York, deceased, therefore you and each of you are cited to appear before the Surrogate of our County of New York, at his office in the County of New York, on the 8th day of March, one thousand nine hundred and one, at half-past ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, then and there to attend the probate of said last will and testament.

And such of you as are hereby cited as are under the age of twenty-one years, are required to appear by your guardian, if you have one, or if you have none, to appear and apply for one to be appointed, or in the event of your neglect or failure to do so a guardian will be appointed by the Surrogate to represent and act for you in the proceeding.

In testimony whereof we have caused the seal of the Surrogate's Court of the said County of New York to be hereunto affixed. Witness, Hon. Frank T. Fitzgerald, Surrogate of our said County of New York, at said county, the 18th day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and one.

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF NEW YORK.—ROBERT W. STUART, as sole surviving Trustee, &c., plaintiff, against GEORGE WALTON et al., defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above entitled action, bearing date the 11th day of January, 1901, I, the undersigned, the Referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No 111 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, in the City of New York, on the fifth day of February, 1901, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Peter F. Meyer and Company, Auctioneers, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All that certain lot, piece or parcel of land, with the buildings and improvements thereon erected, situate, lying, and being in the 23d Ward of the City of New York, being parts of lots Numbers 19 and 20, in Block Number 468 on a certain map filed in the office of the Register of the County of New York, on the 25th day of September, 1882, as Map Number 890, and entitled "Map or subdivision of the property of Isabel Tiffany Perry, in the 23d Ward of the City of New York, being part of the Fox Estate," &c. The premises hereby conveyed being bounded and described as follows, viz.: Beginning at a point on the easterly side of West End Avenue distant twenty-five (25) feet and five (5) inches southerly from the corner formed by the intersection of the said easterly side of West End Avenue with the southerly side of Sixty-eighth Street, and running thence easterly and parallel with Sixty-eighth Street, and part of the distance through a party wall, eighty (80) feet; thence southerly and parallel with West End Avenue twenty-five (25) feet; thence westerly and parallel with Sixty-eighth Street and part of the distance through another party wall eighty (80) feet to said easterly side of West End Avenue, and thence northerly along the same twenty-five (25) feet to the point or place of beginning.

Parcel No. 2: All that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land, with the buildings thereon erected, situate, lying and being in the City of New York, in the County of New York, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point on the easterly side of West End Avenue distant fifty (50) feet and five (5) inches southerly from the corner formed by the intersection of the said easterly side of West End Avenue with the southerly side of Sixty-eighth Street, and running thence easterly and parallel with Sixty-eighth Street and part of the distance through a party wall eighty (80) feet; thence southerly and parallel with West End Avenue twenty-five (25) feet; thence westerly and parallel with Sixty-eighth Street and part of the distance through another party wall eighty (80) feet to said easterly side of West End Avenue, and thence northerly along the same twenty-five (25) feet to the point or place of beginning.

Parcel No. 3: All that certain lot, piece, or parcel of ground, situate, lying, and being in the Twenty-second Ward of the City of New York, with the building and improvements thereon erected, and known as No. 68 West End Avenue, and bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point on the easterly side of West End Avenue distant seventy-five (75) feet five (5) inches southwardly from the southeasterly corner of West End Avenue and West Sixty-eighth Street; running thence eastwardly parallel with West Sixty-eighth Street and part of the way through a party wall eighty (80) feet; thence southwardly parallel with West End Avenue twenty-four (24) feet eight and three-quarter (8¾) inches; thence westwardly, again parallel with West Sixty-eighth Street, eighty (80) feet to the easterly side of West End Avenue, and thence northwardly along West End Avenue twenty-four (24) feet eight and three-quarter (8¾) inches to the point or place of beginning. The said premises being located in Block Number 1,159, Section No. 4, on the Land Map of the City of New York.

Each of said parcels, subject to the reservations as to lights and windows contained in the deed made by Charles Horn and wife to Alexander A Jordan, dated November 29th, 1895, and recorded in the office of the Register of the City and County of New York, in Section 4, Liber 45 of Conveyances, at Page 126, on December 3d, 1895.

Together with all the estate, right, title, and interest of the plaintiff and the defendants to this action therein and thereto, whether present or future, vested or contingent; and together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments, and appurtenances thereunto belonging or in anywise appertaining.—Dated New York, January 16, 1901.

AN ASSURED 7% INVESTMENT
(Interest January and July)
Positive Certainty of Large Additional Dividends.

An exceptional opportunity for safe and unusually profitable investment, in the shares of a Corporation which at present controls prosperous Western properties, and which has extraordinary opportunities for increasing its holdings and earnings, and do so upon an absolutely safe basis

The investment offered contemplates the purchase of 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock at par, and with it, full paid and non-assessable common stock, as a part of the same consideration. The payment of the dividends on the preferred stock, when and as stipulated, and commencing with the current year, is fully assured and definitely provided for.

Such Company has the active co-operation and support of one of the most important railway systems of the country, and by recent arrangements is assured of controlling interests in a large number of important dividend earning properties.

The sale of these shares is to enable the Company to acquire the above interests and extend its operations. As the earnings upon industries already under such company's control will provide ample income to pay dividends on the preferred stock, any earnings from these additional properties will go to the common stock, which, it is safe to assert, will commence to earn liberal dividends at a very early day.

A careful investigation will satisfy conservative investors that the Preferred shares offered afford an absolutely safe investment, and that the common shares promise to, very soon, become very valuable.

ARIMEX CONSOLIDATED COPPER COMPANY.

Capital. . . . . $5,000,000.

This company was organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey for the purpose of purchasing and operating copper producing properties.

Its capital is $5,000,000, divided into 200,000 shares of common stock of the par value of $25 each. It has no bonds or mortgage debt.

Of this capital 120,935 shares, or $3,023,375 of the capital stock, has been issued in payment for certain properties. The balance of 79,065 shares remains in the treasury of the company.

The company owns the following properties:

1,750,000 shares out of a total of 2,000,000 of the par value of $5 each, of the Table Mountain Copper Company of Illinois	$8,750,000
90,000 shares out of a total of 100,000 of the par value of $10 each, of the Angang Copper Company of New Jersey	900,000
500,000 shares out of a total of 500,000 of the par value of $10 each, of the Oxide Copper Company of New Jersey	5,000,000
	$14,650,000

The Oxide Copper Company owns the Copper Prince group of copper claims, located in the Silver Bell mining district, Pima County, Arizona, comprising thirty claims. Early in the Spring of the year 1900 a contract was entered into by the company for extensive developments by sinking a shaft five hundred feet, which, with cross-cuts, would develop a large part of the property, and in other ways. At the present time this shaft is down about 370 feet, and work is being vigorously pushed.

The Table Mountain Company owns twenty-seven claims, situated in the Bunker Hill Mining District, Pinal County, Arizona.

The Angang Copper Company consists of about four hundred mining claims, situated at Zituacuaro, in the State of Michoacan, Mexico, known as the Chirianganguceo Mines. Development was planned early in the year on a large scale, and Mr. Adolphe Rock, the resident director and general manager of the company, has devoted himself to this work. These mines were worked many years ago by Mexicans in a very desultory manner, large bodies of ore having been taken out and large dumps remaining, showing the extent of the former operations. Mr. Rock has unwatered the shafts, built houses for the workmen, buildings for the company, begun work on the roads, and generally begun a systematic development of the property on a large scale.

During the year 1900 development work on an extended scale has been carried on vigorously on the property at the Angang and Oxide Companies, and to a smaller extent on the properties of the Table Mountain Company, under the supervision and direction of the President of the Arimex Company, Mr. Charles H. Dickey of Baltimore, Md. The development has proven the property to be so rich as to warrant immediate extension of development operations on a very large scale, which operations, in the opinion of the Directors, will give enormous net returns.

From the fact that this property has been in charge of practical copper mining men, and that the chief executive officer, Mr. Dickey, is also President of the Parrot Company—which, since the formation of the Amalgamated Copper Company, has been one of that company's largest producing copper properties—the chances of mistakes have probably been reduced to a minimum.

For the purpose of placing all these properties upon a dividend earning basis in the shortest time possible, the Board of Directors have voted that 60,000 shares of the treasury stock of the company be sold by subscription at par, $25.00 per share, by Messrs. E. N. Morison & Company, Bankers, Baltimore, Md., and any other selling agents they may select.

OFFER FOR PUBLIC SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Notice is hereby given that offers for public subscription for 60,000 Shares, of the value of $25 each, of the stock of the will be received at the office of either of the undersigned until the twenty-third day of January, 1901, at the rate of $25 per share. Subscriptions must be accompanied by certified check for 20 per cent. of the amount of such subscription, the balance to be payable within ten days after notice of allotment.

Temporary negotiable receipts will be issued, on payment of sums due on allotment, exchangeable for certificates of stock as soon as same can be engraved.

We reserve the right to allot any or all of the above-named amount at any time on or before January 23.

We also reserve the right to allot or reject any subscription in whole or in part.

Subscription blanks sent on application.

We respectfully refer intending subscribers in Baltimore, Washington, and Philadelphia, who are more or less unfamiliar with the investment quality of copper stocks generally, to the following statement of Thomas W. Lawson of Boston, Mass.:

COPPERS IN THE PAST.

Four years ago I publicly called attention to "Coppers"—to the fact that although they had been actively dealt in on the Boston Stock Exchange for over fifty years, and had been and were still the basis of a large portion of New England's wealth, their merits as first-class and semi-speculative investments were almost unknown to investors and speculators in this country and Europe; to the fact that investigation would prove that an investment in the stock of any of the good producing "Coppers" would give much larger yearly net returns, with a surer guarantee of permanency for a longer period of time, than a like investment in any other class of stocks, and I stated my belief that so soon as these facts became known to investors and speculators throughout this country and Europe, there would begin a "scramble" for "Coppers" unparalleled in the history of the stock market, with the result that the price of such stocks then for sale in the open market would multiply, that this increased value would hold and be further increased for years to come.

At this time, and in all my subsequent statements, the following were named as some of the leading "Coppers" which would multiply in price: Butte & Boston, then selling at $2 to $14; Boston & Montana, then selling at $50 to $75, and Calumet & Hecla, then selling at $225. So radical did these views seem that they were adversely criticised by those interested in financial matters, and more particularly by professional financial critics, but it is now known and admitted that my predictions erred on the conservative side only, for the present prices of the "Coppers" then called to the attention of the public show an increase in value of hundreds of millions of dollars, or more than has ever accrued to any other class of stocks in a like period. The prices of the three named, Butte, Montana, and Calumet, alone show an increase in value of $115,000,000.

It is now known that never in the history of stocks has there been a parallel to the "scramble" for "Coppers" which carried the price of Butte from $2 to $108 per share, Montana from $50 to $400 and Calumet from $225 to $900, and others in like proportion, or another instance where such a tremendous increase in price held and became permanent. The fact that the public were so quickly educated, that such a great increase in values came in such a short time, and that this increase has held and is still advancing, and that seven out of every ten persons interested in financial matters in this country and Europe are now familiar with the merits of "Coppers," when four years ago not one in one thousand had even an intelligent idea of their worth, in my opinion proves the following statement, which was used in all my public utterances:—

"Owing to a peculiar combination of conditions, this great industry, copper, is the only one of all the great staples that has absolutely escaped the march of modern progress—escaped it for fifty years, until to-day it is possible for capital to be invested in this business on a basis that will give to it 100 per cent. net profit on all gross business—a business where the working of a natural law of supply and demand, not the artificial law of arbitrary combination, allows the producer to make his selling price such as will give to him from 100 to 150 per cent. net profit on his entire product."

THE FUTURE OF "COPPERS."

Intending purchasers of "Coppers" for investment or for speculation should first find a correct answer to these questions:—

(1) Will the earnings of "Coppers," at the present price of the metal, allow of larger net returns than can be secured from any other class of stocks?

(2) Can the permanency of production of copper mines be as surely ascertained as the future earning capacity of corporations which are the basis of other stocks, and,

(3) Will the present price of copper, the metal, be maintained? The answer to these three questions will enable one to decide whether "Coppers" are a purchase at present prices. A cursory investigation of "Coppers" will prove that no other class of business will give as large net earnings as are at the present time derived from "Coppers" at the ruling price of the metal.

A careful investigation of the present method of conducting the copper mining business will prove that in no other industry can the future earnings be as surely ascertained for so long a time in the future as "Coppers."

The reason for this is that all good producing copper mining companies first, that is, before beginning to "produce," "block out" for years in advance the copper ore which they afterwards are to "produce," and each year thereafter add to this reserve an amount of ore equal to from 50 to 100 per cent. of their yearly production; in other words, "Coppers," while paying the very large dividends they do pay, set aside each year in the form of blocked-out ore, 50 to 100 per cent. additional dividends.

So consistently has this been practiced, that mines like the Boston & Montana can at any time after their ore has "run out" pay to their stockholders a sum equal to the present selling price of their entire capital stock.

A thorough investigation will prove conclusively that the present price of copper, the metal, is permanent, that is, that it will surely be maintained for years to come, and that it will be maintained through the working of the natural law of supply and demand.

The present selling price of copper, the metal, is about 17 cents per pound. The cost of production is from 5 to 7 cents, yet with this enormous disproportionate net profit, the consumption throughout the world is so rapidly and steadily increasing beyond the possibility of production as to insure for years to come this or any other price which does not actually prohibit the use of this metal.

The only factor that can adversely affect the selling price of copper, the metal, is the discovery of new mines.

Demonstrated facts indicate conclusively that the entire production of all new mines for the coming ten years will probably not equal what has been taken from the old ones in the past three years.

The answers to these questions prove that no purchase of stocks can be made which will be so free from the risk of loss, so sure to pay for the present and for the future such large returns, and consequently so sure to give such large profits as "Coppers." In my opinion, the purchase of good, producing "Coppers" at present prices will give as large, if not larger, returns in the coming two years than have been realized in the past four.

"COPPERS" AS AN INVESTMENT.

In buying "Coppers" for speculation or investment, intending purchasers should, if possible, confine their purchases to the stocks of established, producing mines, for while such stocks are freer from the risk of loss than any other class of stocks, there is no greater risk than that which attends the purchase of the stocks of new copper mines.

No investment in a gold or silver mining stock, the stock of a land company or an industrial based upon patents, is attended with so great a risk, as an investment in the stock of a new copper mine. At least 499 in each 500 of the new copper mines whose stocks are offered for sale publicly are worthless, a large proportion of them being swindles of a most flagrant character, organized and conducted for the sole purpose of selling stock.

The reason for this is self-evident; to mine copper and legitimately conduct a copper mining business at the present time calls for the investment of a very large amount of cash capital. No new copper mining company can begin business, under the necessary modern methods, without the expenditure of at least $1,000,000 to $5,000,000 cash before any dividends can be earned, making it the most uninviting field for small capitalists who intend to conduct the business legitimately, and the most inviting field for schemers whose only purpose is to sell stocks on promises which can never be redeemed.

As an illustration of the difficulty of securing new copper mining properties: "During the past few years it has been necessary for me to closely follow all alleged discoveries of copper mining properties in the United States, Canada and Mexico. Of these there were four hundred and eighty odd which appeared to have sufficient merit to warrant investigation. Of the four hundred and eighty investigated, in only forty odd instances did they have sufficient merit to justify the expenditure necessary for complete investigation by the employment of engineers and mining machinery, and of these forty odd only three met all the requirements necessary for the establishment of a legitimate copper mining business."

Meetings and Elections.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL R. R. CO.
Public notice is hereby given that a special meeting of the stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad Company will be held at the Company's Office in Chicago, Illinois, on Saturday, January, 26, 1901, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, for the purpose of acting on these five propositions and transacting such other business as may, in connection therewith, come before the meeting.
FIRST—That in order to provide necessary moneys for the purchase of additional cars and locomotive engines needed for the accommodation of the growing traffic on the Company's lines of railway; the construction of additional second tracks, side tracks, and station and terminal facilities; the reduction of grades; the elimination of grade crossings at different places along said railway lines, and other improvements of a permanent character, some of which purchases, additions and improvements have already been undertaken, and for other corporate purposes, the capital stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company be increased by an issue of 60,000 new shares of $100 each, from 500,000 shares to 660,000 shares of $100 each, thus making the whole capital stock of the Company $66,000,000.
SECOND—That each shareholder shall have the privilege of subscribing at par on or before March 4, 1901, for one share of such new stock, for every ten shares of stock registered in his name on the transfer books of the Company at the close of business on December 26, 1900, and for fractions of shares in like proportion—payment for the new stock to be made in full at the Company's office in the City of New York, on or before Monday, March 4, 1901.
THIRD—That stockholders entitled to subscribe for fractions of shares shall, upon payment therefor, receive scrip convertible into full-paid stock when presented in sums of $100 or multiples thereof, but such scrip shall not draw dividends.
FOURTH—That the shares, or fractions of shares, of the new issue, if any, not subscribed and paid for on or before March 4, 1901, may be disposed of by the Board of Directors at such price, or prices, not less than par, as may be approved by them.
FIFTH—That the new shares shall be entitled to participate in all dividends which may be declared payable after March 4, 1901.
For the purposes of this meeting, the stock transfer books will be closed at 3 P. M. on Thursday, December 20, 1900, and remain closed until the morning of Monday, January 7, 1901.
By order of the Board of Directors.
A. G. HACKSTAFF, Secretary.
November 21, 1900.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Irregular.

STOCK TRANSACTIONS.

	Shares.
Jan. 21	1,145,339
To date this year

steel and iron stocks were weak practically all day, having only fitful rallies which did not hold. This heaviness was directly due to the depressing influences of the unfavorable trade reports and to the continued talk of serious competition developing.

No definite announcement was made regarding the proposed bond issue by Federal Steel, but that the issue is to be made is admitted.

During the day the Directors of Tennessee Coal met and elected D. H. Bacon chairman of the board. For December the company reports a surplus, after charges, of $63,530.

***

As the days progress it becomes more and more evident that the "corner" in Missouri Pacific is actually complete. Yesterday, just as on recent days, the stock held wonderfully strong, advancing almost five points, and it was clear that the pool in control could do about as they wanted with the issue. There is said to be a very large short interest in the security and Wall Street hears that some private settlements have already been forced.

It is declared that in the last few days 150,000 shares of the stock have been transferred to the Rockefeller interests.

Some interests in the Street were yesterday paying as much as one-half of 1 per cent. premium for the use of the stock.

***

Now that the local railway shares have had such a sharp drop—contributed to in no small measure by the reports that there was "nothing" in the stories of closer relations on the part of the various interests in the several properties—Wall Street is again filled with much the same kind of talk that was heard previous to the decline. This is particularly true of Brooklyn Rapid Transit, the annual meeting of which is to be held on Friday. The general expectation in the Street is that the changes on the board, practically officially assured some months ago, will certainly come to pass. Metropolitan interests being substituted in the stead of some of the present members.

***

There were many conflicting statements in respect to Amalgamated Copper. On the early decline it was declared that a fight among certain of the interests in the property was on, while, later, when the stock advanced about five points the reports were all of harmony. What clearly developed was that during the day insiders were buyers of the stock.

***

When St. Paul began to shoot up in the afternoon, rising about five points from the low figure, the Street was filled with sensational reports that the deal with Great Northern-Northern Pacific was "on again." Best information is that it was never "off."

***

The hopeful report of President Gawtry of Consolidated Gas and a revival of the story of a "melon cutting" in some form or other for the benefit of the stockholders led to buying of the gas stock yesterday. The "melon cutting" report is in well-informed quarters ridiculed.

***

So far as can be learned, the only explanation for the advance in People's Gas is that it has been heavily oversold, and that a drive against the bears in the stock is contemplated. The argument, too, is that as a 6 per cent. stock it is selling too low.

***

The coal stocks received good support throughout the day, the buying of the Readings and Ontario and Western being especially good. According to the Street gossip, the banking interests have taken advantage of the decline to buy largely of Ontario and Western—now practically the only independent coal road—with the purpose of accumulating the stock in order to carry out to completion the general coal road combination plan under way.

***

The so-called "Waldorf" clique, rampantly bearish last week, turned bullish in the late afternoon, and were prominent as bidders up of stocks.

***

Money continues easy, most of yesterday's call loans being made as low as 2 per cent. In some quarters as low a call rate as 1 per cent. is being predicted.

***

All sorts of rumors were afloat concerning the strength of the Wabash securities, the majority of them telling of closer traffic agreements arranged or being arranged with another important system. One specific report was to the effect that an actual consolidation with Missouri Pacific was being planned. Officials of both roads declined to discuss the matter.

***

Private advices from Washington that there would likely be some changes in the revenue tax on tobacco, favorable to the companies, led to buying of both the American and Continental issues. Insiders of both companies are quoted as saying that the saving to be effected by the reduction of the tax will practically be equivalent to the dividends now paid.

***

There was buying of Chicago Great Western issues throughout the day. The report is that both Alton and Burlington are after the property.

***

No gold export engagements were announced yesterday, but it is expected that at least $2,000,000 will go out on Thursday's steamer. Sterling exchange rates held steady during the day.

***

Application has been made to the Stock Exchange to list the following: Southern Pacific Company—$10,000,000 4½ per cent. mortgage bonds of 1905; Missouri Pacific Railway Company—$2,636,000 first mortgage 5 per cent. bonds of 1920; North American Company—Application to have the stock reduced from $40,000,000 to $12,000,000.

Zimmermann & Forshay yesterday received a cable communication announcing that the Bavarian one-hundred-million-mark loan was heavily oversubscribed. Allotments made to that firm were as follows: Seventy per cent. on applications for large amounts and the small ones in full.

"JOKER" VICTIMIZES BROKERS.

Gives Selling Orders by Telephone in the Name of Regular Customer.

Wall Street has a new kind of fakir—probably the most dangerous of any of the many that have yet developed. His device—though what he gains from it is not clear—is to call up on the 'phone this or that Stock Exchange house and, using the name of a regular customer, obtained no one knows how, give an order either to buy or to sell. Yesterday a number of leading Stock Exchange houses were thus victimized.

One of these was the banking house of Charles Minzesheimer & Co., whose main offices are in the Mills Building, with a branch at Thirty-third Street. Just before 10 o'clock yesterday a telephone call was received by the firm, and, being answered, the caller declared that he was "Mr. So-and-So"—a regular customer—and that he wanted to sell 100 shares of Missouri Pacific short at the opening. Not suspecting anything wrong, the firm executed the order as advised, the selling price being 85¼. Later, having occasion to communicate with the supposed seller, it developed that he had given no such order. Thereupon the firm, at its own loss, covered the sale at 88¾, losing about $375 on the transaction.

Other firms are understood to have been misled in a similar way, and the Street generally is preparing, if the offender or offenders can be found, to bring them to speedy justice.

Some months ago a number of fake orders were sent out by letter and postal cards and several firms lost not a little by the deception.

POTTER & KIRKHAM ASSIGN.

Failure of Patrons to Respond to Calls for More Margins Given as Cause of the Trouble.

Announcement was made yesterday on the Consolidated Exchange of the assignment of Potter & Kirham, a Consolidated Exchange house, doing business at 57 Broadway, and with a branch office at 1,286 Broadway. The assignee is Walter K. Griffin, a lawyer, of 11 Pine Street, who says that he will not be able to make any statement for several days, and has no idea of the assets or liabilities. It is not believed, however, that the failure will be for any large amount.

The firm was composed of Asa P. Potter and S. E. Kirkham, the latter the board member. It was organized about a year ago, and soon built up a flourishing business. That, in fact, seems to have been one of the primary causes of the failure, for just before the break in the market the house was carrying for its customers a considerable line of stock. When the decline came the customers—most of whom were long of stocks—were called upon for more margins, to which many of them failed to respond. This call was repeated, and again it met with the same answer—even in those cases where margins had been exhausted. As a consequence the suspension followed, and on the Exchange 4,500 shares of stock were sold out under the rule and 200 bought in.

Mr. Potter, the head of the firm, has had an interesting history. Ten years ago he was probably the leading financial interest in Boston, being President of the Maverick National Bank, at that time the most important bank there. He was prominently connected with the West End and Back Bay Associations, and socially and in other ways was a leader in the city. Then came the failure of the Maverick Bank, dragging down with it many prominent interests. Some years later Mr. Potter came to this city and became identified with the firm of Henry Allen & Co., but was forced to withdraw from it by a ruling of the Stock Exchange authorities. Indirectly, however, Mr. Potter continued to be identified with the house, which failed in the December panic a year ago. A few weeks later the firm of Potter & Kirkham was formed, the junior member having been cashier for Henry Allen & Co..

There was a story in the Street during the day that yesterday's failure was precipitated by the speculations of one of the firm members. This is emphatically denied.

NORTH AMERICAN COMPANY.

Representative of J. P. Morgan & Co. Elected to Board of Directors—Plans to Reduce Capital Stock Adopted.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the North American Company held in Newark yesterday, J. P. Morgan & Co.'s interests were represented on the board by the election of Robert Bacon, he being one of the three new Directors addd to the board. About two-thirds of the entire issue of stock was represented at the meeting, and it was unanimously decided to accept the readjustment plans provided by the board reducing the capital stock of the company from $50,000,000 ($40,000,000 of which is issued) to $12,000,000. The other two new members of the board were Charles F. Pfister of Milwaukee and Charles A. Spofford, representing the Villard estate.

Beyond these facts no information was vouchsafed by the officers of the company, and they refused to discuss the story printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES of Dec. 28, which stated that Mr. Morgan had gained a controlling interest in the company for the purpose of using it as a selling agent for the Coal Trust, and that the Morgan interests would be represented on the board. It was stated at that time that one of the matters that worked in consonance with Mr. Morgan's scheme to control through the North American Company the anthracite coal trade of the country and do away with middlemen by making the company his selling agent, was the extraordinary charter under which the company works.

There were denials of this plan of Mr. Morgan's at that time, but at the same time it was also denied that Mr. Morgan had acquired any interest in the company or that he would be represented on the Board of Directors. The following is the board elected: George R. Sheldon, Charles W. Wetmore, William Nelson Cromwell, Robert Bacon, Edmund C. Converse, Charles A. Spofford, J. H. Herrick, J. R. Delamar of New York, Henry C. Payne, Charles F. Pfister, John I. Beggs of Milwaukee, and A. Q. Keasbey of New Jersey.

CONSOLIDATED GAS MEETING.

President Gawtry Reports an Increase in Gas and Electric Business—Trustees Elected.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Consolidated Gas Company held yesterday, President Gawtry made a statement regarding the gas and electric business of the company, which showed that there had been a material increase in both.

"The sales in gas during the year," he said, "amounted to 16,000,000,000 feet, being an increase over the preceding year of 13 per cent. The total number of meters in use amounted to 489,455, being an increase of 17,000 for the year. There was also an increase in the sales per meter. Four hundred and sixty-five thousand dollars was spent for extensions and $646,000 for repairs. On account of the increasing consumption of gas, certain extensions will have to be made during 1901. Many economies had been effected, and the prospects for 1901 are very bright.

"The sales of electricity increased 19 per cent. over the preceding year, and I look for a greater increase this year. A new electric plant at the East River will be completed in a few months, and this will greatly increase our capacity.

"All indications point to a maintenance of earnings on the present basis, not withstanding the five-cent decrease in the price of gas."

AMERICAN SMELTING COMPANY.

The Proposed Increase of Capital Stock to $100,000,000 and Acquisition of the Guggenheim Property.

The official announcement of the American Smelting and Refining Company dealing with the proposed increase of capital stock to $100,000,000, half preferred and half common, was issued yesterday. The circular to the stockholders states that the increase is deemed advisable in order to enable the company to acquire the smelting and refining plants of M. Guggenheim's Sons. It reads:

In consideration of (1) the transfer to the American Company of Guggenheim property, (2) the repayment in cash or in working capital of a sum equal to two-thirds of the company's working capital on Jan. 1, 1901, and (3) the payment in cash of the further sum of $6,066,666.66, there is to be issued and delivered by the American Company $45,200,000 of its capital stock, one-half to be preferred and one-half to be common. The present authorized capital of the company is $45,000,000, of which $10,200,000, one-half preferred and one-half common, is unissued. The unissued stock, together with the proposed increase of $45,000,000, will provide the amount necessary to make the Guggenheim purchase.

The properties to be acquired include plants as follows: At Perth Amboy, N. J., smelting and refining and electrolytic copper plants; at Pueblo, Col., smelting and refining and copper reduction plants; at Aguas Calientes, Mexico, smelting and refining and copper reduction plants; at Monterey, Mexico, a smelting plant; in South America, mining and smelting interests; also, valuable leases and contracts running a term of years in the United States, Mexico, and South America.

The Directors strongly recommend the acquisition of these properties and the increase in the company's capital stock. A special meeting of the stockholders will be held on Feb. 16 to take action on the proposed increase of stock.

TAX ON BRITISH BONDS.

Announcement that American Holders Will Have to Pay Five Per Cent. Causes Dismay.

It became known yesterday that the American holders of the $28,000,000 allotment of British exchequer notes made in the United States are to be taxed 5 per cent. income tax by the British Government. The news was received with dismay by the holders of the bonds, and all calculations as to their value as investments are disturbed by the action of the British Government.

It was understood yesterday that representatives of local interests which subscribed heavily for the bonds have appealed to the British Government for redress, alleging that American holders should be relieved of the burden imposed.

There can be no tax dodging on this matter as the Government has everything in its own hands, and deducts the amount of the tax before the coupons are paid. The British law exempts persons whose incomes from British sources do not amount to £160 a year, and it is possible that on this basis some of the American holders may obtain relief.

One of the members of the syndicate that placed the loan stated yesterday that whatever the impression might have been to the contrary, he never had any other opinion than that the bonds would be taxed in the regular way. A number of bankers held opposite views and stated that the understanding had been that there would be no tax imposed. As soon as they learned that it would be, they disposed of their holdings.

It was the belief in some quarters yesterday that the British Government would finally return to the American holders the 5 per cent. tax, but that it will be a long time at best until the claims can be acted upon.

Colonial Life Company's Election.

The Colonial Life Insurance Company's stockholders had their annual election yesterday afternoon at 43 Montgomery Street, Jersey City. John Mullins, a furniture merchant, was elected a Director, to succeed the late Richard C. Washburn. The other Directors were re-elected. The Directors will re-elect President Edward F. C. Young and the other officers. The reports show the premium receipts in 1900 were $152,501.20. The premium receipts were $85,252.27 in 1899, and $23,625.87 in 1898. The losses by frauds alleged to have been detected recently in North Hudson will not exceed $1,000.

WALL STREET TOPICS.

Statement from Boston, said to be authoritative, that the coming dividend on Père Marquette preferred will be 4 per cent., payable Feb. 1 and declared out of the earnings of the company for the year 1900.

Heavy oversubscription for the Bavarian 100,000,000 marks loan offered through a local banking house.

Surplus of $416,150 above the legal requirement shown by last week's statement outside banks, an increase of $284,350 as compared with the previous week.

Listing on the London Stock Exchange of $4,698,500 additional preferred stock of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company.

In the eastbound shipments from Chicago the Grand Trunk and the Wabash carried the most flour, while the Erie was at the top for grain, with the Lake Shore second. The Wabash led in provision shipments; the Erie was second, and the Grand Trunk third.

According to Chicago dispatches, passenger business on all the lines entering that city is excellent, and at a time of year when travel is ordinarily light.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Money was in fair demand to-day. Gloom and depression overhung the Stock Exchange, in connection with the continually arriving telegrams regarding the Queen. Business was practically at a standstill. Consols started at 95⅝, the lowest in seven years; recovered to 96¼, reacted to 95⅞, and then readvanced. The war loan likewise receded, on the additional unfavorable influence of the coming loan. The decline in Americans progressed to well below parity. St. Paul was especially weak.

Consols, for money, 96⅛; consols, for the account, 96⅛; Atchison, 44; Canadian Pacific, 90¾; St. Paul, 148¾; Illinois Central, 132; Louisville, 88¼; Union Pacific preferred, 84; New York Central, 143½; Erie, 26⅞; Pennsylvania, 74½; Reading, 15¾; Erie first preferred, 62⅜; Northern Pacific preferred, 87; Grand Trunk, 7; Anaconda, 8½; Rand Mines, 36⅜.

Money, 2½@3 per cent. Rate of discount in the open market for short bills, 4 per cent., and for three months' bills, 4@4⅛ per cent.

Spanish 4s, 70⅞.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—Business was dull on the Bourse to-day, on unfavorable London advices concerning the Queen. Later there was a slight improvement, especially in internationals. Rentes were harder, industrials were irregular, and Rio Tintos relapsed on the decline in copper. Kafirs were maintained and quiet.

Three per cent. rentes, 101f 92½c for the account. Exchange on London, 25f 11½c for checks.

Spanish 4s closed at 71.75.

BERLIN, Jan. 21.—Prices were weak on the Boerse to-day, owing to the decline in English consols. Home funds were easier. Americans and Canadian Pacifics were weak on New York advices. Locals fluctuated, closing quiet.

MADRID, Jan. 21.—Spanish 4s closed today at 74.45. Gold was quoted at 36.62.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

At the opening of the market for outside securities yesterday there was exceedingly light demand for stock, and this condition prevailed to the close of the day. With two or three exceptions among the low-priced stocks no issue showed even moderate activity, the dullness being more marked than on any recent day. Accompanying this lack of business considerable weakness in prices appeared, and at the close most quotations were below the figures of Saturday. There was practically no news to influence prices, and, all told, the day was a monotonously dull one.

***

DISTILLING OF AMERICA, which, at the time of the announcement of the Stockholders' Committee's plans, gave some sign of strength and advanced a few points, has since been steadily declining. Yesterday the price of the preferred stock fell off to 26½, and the best bid at the close was 26. The common stock was equally dull as the preferred, but declined only slightly. It showed a net loss of a quarter of a point, while the preferred stock showed a loss of 1½ points.

***

UNITED RAILWAYS OF ST. LOUIS 4s were traded in to the extent of only $10,000, which sold at 89¼. They closed at this figure, which was that quoted on Saturday. The preferred stock enjoyed a slight net gain, ending the day at 71½ bid. St. Louis Transit was slightly firmer, at 19 bid, but in this issue, as well as in the preferred stock, business was extremely light.

***

PITTSBURG, BESSEMER AND LAKE ERIE declined fractionally, on transactions amounting to 400 or 500 shares. It closed at 29¾ bid.

***

GENERAL CARRIAGE advanced fractionally on transactions that were considerably in excess of the average for other issues. The buying appeared to be in large part for persons closely connected with the company, and as far as disclosed it was not accompanied by any news in regard to the company. It closed at 2¾ bid, a net gain of one-eighth of a point.

***

AMERICAN BRIDGE was the only one of the steel stocks that showed any activity at all. A few hundred shares of the common stock sold at 42, and a similar amount of preferred at 91. Neither issue showed any net change for the day.

***

BAY STATE GAS sold to the extent of several thousand shares at 1, which showed a decline of one-eighth from last week's price.

***

SAXONY 3s were quoted yesterday. A bid of 83.70 was made for a round lot of the bonds. They were offered at 88.84. The time for the subscription to the bonds expired yesterday. The figures quoted showed a slight premium over the subscription price, but no transactions were reported.

***

BRITISH COLUMBIA COPPER sold down to 17½ and then rallied slightly. It closed at 17⅝ bid and showed a net loss of three-eighths of a point. It was the most active of the copper stocks, none of which, however, showed much activity.

Closing quotations yesterday compared with those of Saturday were as follows:

TRADING IN TEA FUTURES.

New Business Inaugurated on the Coffee Exchange with a Bid of Five Cents.

For the first time in the history of the tea trade in America, trading in tea for future delivery was made yesterday at the New York Coffee Exchange. R. St. G. Walker, Superintendent of the Exchange, conducted the first call, and William Mitchell, a coffee man, had the honor of making the first bid. He bid 5 cents, although he explained that he did not know what the tea was worth. This was for February delivery. The price rose to 13.20 bid and 13.40 asked. Max Mayer, a coffee man, made the first sale, of 15,000 pounds for February delivery at 13.30, the buyer being H. Montgomery. This was the only lot sold on the call, but immediately afterward another lot for February delivery was sold for 13.50. Most of the bidding was done by coffee brokers. Many prominent members of the coffee and tea trade were present.

The special tea-trade rules under which trading in tea for future delivery will be conducted provide that all contracts for future delivery of tea shall be for 15,000 pounds, or multiples thereof, deliverable in bond; each lot of 15,000 pounds to be exclusively either Japan, green, or black tea, to be in licensed warehouse, and to be composed of not more than ten lines of tea; deliveries on each contract of 15,000 pounds not to exceed or be short more than 100 pounds, and to be collectively of not more than three import bonds.

The innovation of trading in tea futures is not looked upon with favor by some of the members of the tea trade. Nevertheless, the scheme has the support of some of the largest tea importers and dealers, and they propose to give it a fair and exhaustive trial.

The opening tea prices yesterday were as follows: February, 13.20@13.40; March, 13.20@13.50; April, 12.90@13.50; May, 13.20@13.80; June, 13@14; July, 13@14.40; August, 13@14; September, 13.80@14, and October, 13.50.

Brief Railroad Items.

President S. R. Callaway of the New York Central left yesterday on an inspection trip over the main line of the system.

According to the new time table of the Illinois Central, a reduction of forty minutes will be made in the running time of the fast trains between Chicago and New Orleans. The new schedule fixes the time of the trip between the two cities at twenty-five hours and five minutes.

The Transcontinental Passenger Association has appointed a committee of three to consider the question whether corpses should be transported by express or by freight.

Eastbound shipments of grain and packing house products from Chicago last week showed an increase, while shipments of flour decreased. The railroads carried 2,732,000 bushels of grain, as against 2,662,000 bushels for the previous week; 21,696 tons of packing house products, as against 18,061 tons for the week before, and 190,713 barrels of flour, as against 240,702 barrels for the previous week.

Strike at a Paterson Silk Mill.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 21.—One hundred men and boys and 230 women and girls employed at Ramsey & Gore's silk mill, corner of Green and Spring Streets, quit work this morning because of a cut in their wages. They met this morning and appointed shop committees to confer with the members of the firm to settle their grievance.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Resale of the Hotel Virginia Property—Other Dealings by Brokers and at Auction.

The Hotel Virginia property, covering the small block bounded by Broadway and Eighth Avenue, Fifty-eighth Street and the Grand Circle, purchased recently by the Central Realty Bond and Trust Company, has been resold by that corporation to Mrs. Mary A. Fitzgerald of Litchfield, Conn. The consideration was a little less than $300,000. It could not be learned yesterday what plans Mrs. Fitzgerald has for the future of the property. She is already a large owner of real estate in this city, among her holdings being the northwest corner of Broadway and Thirty-seventh Street, 104 by 195; the southeast corner of Broadway and Forty-third Street, and the southeast corner of Broadway and Fifty-eighth Street.

In speaking of the sale of the Hotel Virginia, Henry Morgenthau, President of the Central Realty Bond and Trust Company, said: "A circumstance which materially hastened the sale of this property was the introduction of the bill at Albany providing for the taking of the block by the city as an addition to the Circle. By disposing of the property this company has effectually answered insinuation and gossip to the effect that the bill was introduced to further the company's interests. As a matter of fact, I do not think that the bill has any particular merit, nor can I see any special reason for the city's acquiring the parcel."

Charles E. Schuyler & Co., in conjunction with Whitehouse & Porter, have sold for Franklin Pettit to Philip La Tourette the gore plot on the north side of Ninety-sixth Street, 250 feet east of Fifth Avenue, 45 by 103 by 100.11 by 68.

L. J. Phillips & Co. have sold for Henry Trowbridge and Frederick Hunter, to a client, the plot at the southwest corner of Amsterdam Avenue and One Hundred and Eighty-first Street, 80 by 100.

Mrs. Mary C. Tompkins has sold the four-story brownstone-front dwelling 5 East Fifty-fourth Street, 25 by 100.5, for about $100,000.

The two four-story dwellings 68 and 68 West Forty-sixth Street, on a plot 33.4 by 100.5, have been sold, through Greene & Taylor. The buyer will erect a ten-story apartment hotel on the site.

William H. Glickman has sold for Harry E. Glickman the five-story flat 524 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, 27 by 100.11, the buyer giving in part payment 451 West Thirty-third Street, a four-story brick building, on lot 18.11 by 99.2 by 17.4 by 99.

Joseph Lemmle and O. Nelson have sold 103 and 105 Macdougal Street, extending through to 11 and 13 Minetta Street, old buildings, on a plot 50 by 134, to a builder, who will erect thereon six-story tenements.

John Peters has sold for Philip Boyer to H. B. Rexer the four-story dwelling 304 East One Hundred and Fourteenth Street, 19.6 by 51.6.

William and Julius Bachrach have sold to a builder 235 East Eighty-first Street, a two-story frame building on lot 25 by 102.2.

Marcus Nathan has sold, through William Jamson & Bryan, the property 700 St. Paul's Place.

Gordon, Levy & Co. have bought 53 Ludlow Street, 25 by 87.6.

David Davis has sold for Louis Lese the five-story flat 4 West One Hundred and Eighteenth Street, 25.6 by 100.11; also, for Friend & Cohen, the five-story flat 73 West Ninety-eighth Street, 26 by 100.

Moore & Graham and Charles S. Brown have leased for the Hemenway estate to the Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Company the four-story building at the northeast corner of Broadway and Walker Street, for five years at an annual rental of $10,000.

Rushser & Babcock have sold for Mary E. Bolton 24 West Nineteth Street, a four-story brownstone dwelling, 18 by 55 by 100, for about $30,000.

Martin Engel Buys Real Estate.

Martin Engel, Tammany leader of the Eighth Assembly District, forsook the political welfare of his constituents yesterday long enough to go down to the Real Estate Salesroom and buy $43,000 worth of property at auction. Under partition proceedings Auctioneer Peter F. Meyer offered the three three-story brick tenements 327, 329, and 331 East Eleventh Street. A number of real estate operators also fancied the property, but Engel proved a good stayer in the bidding and became the buyer, at the figure mentioned. He would not say what he intended to do with the houses.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

In the following list "mtg" stands for mortgage and "R S" for revenue stamps. The war revenue law provides that stamps shall be placed on all conveyances at the rate of 50 cents for each $500 of consideration. This "consideration" has been held to mean only the equity above the mortgage, except in the rare cases where the purchaser assumes payment of the mortgage. The amount of the mortgage plus 1,000 times the value of the revenue stamps on the conveyances should therefore show the true consideration:

OWNERS OF PROPERTY

in the Bedford-Stuyvesant district will confer a favor by letting me know early in the Spring their offerings for rent.

The renting inquiry begins on Lincoln's Birthday, (February 12th,) and is fairly under way by Washington's Birthday.

This activity lasts until about March 15th, falling off rapidly thereafter.

Don't wait till the market is over before asking your tenants their intentions. Have it settled with them all the first week of February—or before if you can.

The best business people are early in the field for homes. That's the kind you want for tenants, and will get if you follow my advice.

CAPT. HERLIHY'S DEFENSE

Witnesses Testify that He Did Not Abuse Mr. Paddock.

Commissioner York and Attorney Grant Again Indulge in Sharp Exchanges—Motion to Dismiss Denied.

At the trial of Police Captain Herlihy, which was resumed yesterday before the Police Commissioners, five witnesses for the defense testified that Capt. Herlihy did not use any abusive language toward the Rev. Robert L. Paddock on the night of April 26, 1900, as has been alleged by Mr. Paddock. With one exception, these witnesses were members of the police force who have served under Capt. Herlihy in the Twelfth Precinct and in other precincts. Their testimony was substantially the same in each case.

The witnesses were Lawrence W. Norton, who arrested a watch boy on complaint of Mr. Paddock on the night of the alleged assault; Michael Haggerty, Sergt. Donald McDermott, George W. Stevenson, and August Dreyer.

Mr. Dreyer is a lawyer of 106 Sixth Avenue.

Norton, who was the first witness for the defense, was asked:

"Did you see Mr. Paddock on April 26?"

"Yes."

"Tell the Commissioners what took place that night?"

"Mr. Paddock came up to me and said he wanted me to arrest a boy who he said had just warned a woman. I took the boy to the station house. Mr. Paddock went with me. Sergt. McDermott was at the desk, and Mr. Paddock made a complaint.

"Did you hear Capt. Herlihy tell Mr. Paddock he was disgracing his cloth, and that what he said was a lie?"

"No, Sir."

"Did Capt. Herlihy come out from behind the railing and shake his fist at Mr. Paddock?"

"No, Sir. He never came out from behind the railing."

On cross-examination, Norton described the women tenants of the premises as respectable women, most of them having children, who would bring them outside for a little fresh air.

August Dreyer, the lawyer, was then called. He said he had been at the station house on the night Mr. Paddock came in. He said that Mr. Paddock left the station in a friendly way that night, touching his hand to Capt. Herlihy as he went. He stated that the Captain did not come from behind the railing, and there was no fault-finding language used by him toward Mr. Paddock.

Other testimony was merely of a corroborative character.

At the beginning of the trial yesterday Lawyer Grant made a motion to dismiss the case on the ground that insufficient evidence had been adduced by the prosecution. Speaking to the motion, he said many other things:

"Out of a population of 170,000 people, only one business man was called. As for the rest, there were four clergymen and one who would have been a clergyman, but didn't quite get there. And four young men comprising a morality committee who found out when they got here that they didn't know as much about the matter as they thought they did.

"These young morality gentlemen, just out of their pinfeathers, went out looking for trouble, and the man who does that will always get it. They were not trying to help the police. They were trying to get Capt. Herlihy into trouble. No overt act has been testified to."

"Oh, you may smile," said Mr. Grant, "but if you took a case into court you could not prove it without an overt act."

"I never heard of that," said the President.

"Well, Commissioner, there are a good many things which some people have never heard."

"Yes," said President York, "probably a good many such decisions have been made that are not reported in the books."

The motion was denied.

Upon some further argument by Mr. Grant, President York interrupted him by saying:

"Then your information is greater than ours."

"Well, I'll admit that it is. I'll admit that it is," was the reply. "I'm glad that for once you give me credit for knowing something you don't."

ROD IN PICKLE FOR THE MAYOR?

Mr. Nixon Won't Deny Again that He Will Call Mr. Van Wyck to Account.

Col. Michael C. Murphy, President of the Health Department, was absent yesterday from the weekly session of the Tammany Hall investigating committee at the Germania Bank Building. The committeemen were in session half an hour, and when their secret meeting was over Chairman Lewis Nixon announced that the committee had no statement to make. Mr. Nixon appeared nettled when questioned about his intentions in regard to Mayor Van Wyck and his attitude toward the bettering of vicious conditions in New York.

"It's sheer nonsense," he said. "I will not trouble to again deny that I propose to call the Mayor to account in any way.

"For the committee I will say that today everything looks encouraging; in fact, I was never better satisfied with the condition of affairs since the committee was formed."

"Have you changed your programme and your way of operating to suppress vice, Mr. Nixon?"

"Not in the least. We are working on the same lines and there has been no change in our policy."

"Has your committee made any overtures to the Committee of Fifteen in the interest of joint action, as has Mr. Baldwin's committee made any to you?"

"None either way; but I will say that if the Committee of Fifteen wants anything of us or we are convinced that anything we have is necessary to the Committee of Fifteen, we shall not stand on ceremony."

"Are you still furnishing District Attorney Philbin with evidence?"

"I will not discuss that at all. We are not idle. That is sufficient. As for publicity, I do not now know if we shall make an announcement next Monday. The Committee of Fifteen has without doubt done excellent work, and we are not in the field to head it off or thwart it. The Tammany committee and it are not moving like pieces on a chessboard, in rivalry and to check each other."

ACKRON FINED ON EXCISE CHARGE

Tivoli Proprietor, However, Is Acquitted of Complaint of Assault.

Charles E. Ackron, formerly proprietor of the notorious "Tivoli," in West Thirty-fifth Street, was convicted in the Court of Special Sessions yesterday of selling liquor in his resort after 1 o'clock, in violation of the Excise law, on the night of March 10 last, and acquitted of a charge of assault preferred by James Brown, a cabman.

Brown declared that Ackron assaulted him without provocation on the night of July 11 last. On that night State Senator John Ford and Charles O. Mass, a lawyer, were in Ackron's place, and became involved in a row with a waiter, and in a general mix-up which followed Senator Ford, Mass and several others were hustled into the street. During the excitement Brown says that Ackron struck him. Senator Ford and the others of the party, including Ackron, were arrested and taken to the West Thirtieth Street Police Station. Ackron was discharged in the Jefferson Market Police Court next day. A warrant was later issued on the same charge, and Ackron surrendered himself. Justice Holbrook decided that Brown had used violent language to Ackron, and that the assault was not without provocation.

On the excise charge Ackron and Samuel Brown, a waiter, were fined $25 and $10 respectively.

To Oppose Subway Easements.

Franklin Bien, Philip A. Smyth, and Michael Coleman, all lawyers, were yesterday appointed by Justice Leventritt, in the Supreme Court, as Commissioners of Appraisal, with reference to the easements of property owners along Broadway, from One Hundred and Twenty-second Street to One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street, in connection with the rapid transit railroad. Mr. Bien's name was one of those sent in by the property owners; Mr. Smyth was suggested by Corporation Counsel Whalen, and Justice Leventritt selected Mr. Coleman.

KEMPSON ASSAULTS WITNESS.

New York Editor Who Got a Dakota Divorce Again Remanded.

St. George Kempson of Metuchen, N. J., editor of The New York Insurance Journal, who has been in the Middlesex County Jail since November for contempt of court, was yesterday taken to Chancery Chambers, Jersey City, where argument was heard as to his further punishment. Kempson was married in 1882. In 1898, as Mrs. Kempson alleges, her husband went to North Dakota, where he began suit for divorce. He then returned to his home and remained until she was served with notice of the divorce suit.

Mrs. Kempson then sought the aid of the Chancery Court, and Chancellor McGill issued an order directing Kempson to discontinue his Dakota suit. He ignored this order, and when he secured a decree went to New York, where he married Miss Amy Daniels.

In November last he returned to New Jersey and was at once arrested.

The argument lasted all day yesterday. During recess Kempson attempted to assault a witness who had given testimony at a previous hearing, and who, he said, was the uncle of his second wife. Kempson was restrained by Sergeant at Arms Haggerty, who led him to an ante-chamber.

Decision was reserved, and Kempson was remanded to the New Brunswick Jail.

NEW BRANCH POST OFFICE.

Lower West Side Residents Will Have Increased Mail Facilities.

Residents of the lower west side above Clarkson Street are soon to have an increased mail delivery, by the establishment of a new branch Post Office at Morton and West Streets. The building at present is the foreign branch of the General Post Office, but a portion of one of the floors will be set apart for the new branch.

The order for its establishment was issued last night, and will become effective next Monday. The territory embraced lies between Spring, Hudson, Clarkson, Carmine, Bleecker, and Barrow Streets and the North River, and includes many of the new North River piers. The new branch will greatly relieve the work of Station C, at Hudson and Bethune Streets, which has heretofore served this territory. Registry and mail-order departments may be established later. Superintendent Alexander Haff of the foreign branch will be in charge.

BOGUS BUTTER IN NEW YORK.

Agricultural Department Report Tells of War on Oleomargarine.

The fourth annual letter of the Agricultural Department of the State of New York has been issued. In it Assistant Commissioner Kracke says that the search for oleomargarine has taken up the largest part of the department's time, although the inspections of milk have been carried on as formerly. "We have also," he continues, "seized and destroyed about 200 bob calves, and taken over 100 samples of linseed oil and a number of miscellaneous samples, with the result that the Attorney General prosecuted 200 cases, more than half of them being oleomargarine cases.

"One of the difficulties that we meet with in the enforcement of the oleomargarine law," he continues, "is the New Jersey peddler wagon coming across the river under the guise of a licensed expressman."

Attention is again called to the fact that any information relating to the illegal sale of oleomargarine, adulterated butter, cheese, milk, or vinegar will be thankfully received and accepted in strict confidence by the department.

"POOLROOM QUEEN" HIDES.

Bench Warrant for ex-Lieut. Martin's Wife If She Doesn't Appear.

Mrs. Gussie McKee Martin, wife of ex-Lieut. Edward H. Martin, who was dismissed from the Fifth Artillery for irregularities in his canteen accounts, has been indicted by the Grand Jury for keeping a poolroom, and unless she appears in General Sessions to-morrow, her police court bail will be declared forfeited and a bench warrant will be issued for her arrest.

Mrs. Martin, who is variously known as Gussie Dudge, Mrs. McKee, and Grace Ryan, the name under which she was indicted, kept a poolroom for women at 284 Eighth Avenue, and did a flourishing business. June 5, 1900, upon the personal order of Chief Devery, the place was raided. Recently Mrs. Martin has appeared in various music halls in the city under the soubriquet of "The Poolroom Queen." On numerous occasions many of her former clientele have greeted her appearance enthusiastically.

Mrs. Martin's case was on the calendar for pleading before Judge Cowing yesterday. Emanuel Friend, her counsel, stated that his client was at present out of town, but that he would, if possible, have her in court by to-morrow. Judge Cowing allowed the pleading to go over until then.

LEGAL NOTES.

PENSION BY TOWN TO TEACHERS.—The law passed in 1895 authorizes the submission to the electors of a town whether they make provision by taxation "for a sum of money sufficient to pay such teachers, resident of such town, who have been employed in the common schools therein for not less than twenty-five years," a pension. If the vote is in favor of paying such a fund, the town board is required immediately to proceed and ascertain what teachers are entitled to recover their proportioned shares of the amount "so voted." In March, 1896, such a question was submitted to and favorably voted upon by the town of Plattsburg, St. Lawrence County, in this State. Mary O'Brien, who had been a teacher in the town since September, 1871, continued her teaching up to June, 1898. When she made application to the town in June, 1899, to estimate her pension in the town expenses she had taught continuously twenty-five years, but had not done so when the vote was taken. The Town Board refused her application, and a writ of mandamus then asked for was also denied. The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, at Albany, has affirmed that decision, holding that Miss O'Brien was not entitled to a pension upon subsequently completing her twenty-five years' service, especially where it did not appear that notice of submission of the question voted upon was ever published or posted.

***

NECESSITY OF A BARRIER ON A HIGHWAY.—John Coney was nonsuited in the action which he brought to recover damages for injuries he received upon one of the highways of the town of Gilboa, in Schoharie County, N. Y., because of the alleged negligence of the town Highway Commissioners. The Appellate Division, at Albany, has reversed that judgment in an opinion by Presiding Justice Parker. The accident occurred a short distance from the village, and was at the foot of a steep ascent where the road was somewhat curved, and over which a great deal of travel passed. The Court holds that the necessity of barriers upon a town highway, including the question whether the Highway Commissioners were negligent in omitting to supply them and keep them in repair, was generally a question of fact for the jury. Justice Kellogg gave a dissenting opinion, which was concurred in by Justice Smith, holding that the test of the safety of a highway cannot be in its capacity to guide and carry safely a loaded, uncontrolled wagon, running, as in this case, by gravity backward down a steep hill. An accident of such unusual character, Justice Kellogg held, could not be imputed as negligence on the part of the Highway Commissioners not to have anticipated it. Nor was there any evidence from which the jury had a right to find that, had there been at the place of the accident any obstacle, bunker, or barrier, the accident would not have happened.

Inquest to be Held on Murray H. Hall.

Coroner Zucca will, on Monday, conduct an inquest into the cause of the death of Murray H. Hall, who proved to be a woman, at 145 Sixth Avenue. The Coroner said yesterday that he would subpoena the adopted daughter, Minnie Hall; Senator Hall, and all other persons necessary for him to hold an inquest. He said he could not subpoena the relatives of the woman supposed to be Hall's wife, and who died more than two years ago, but that he would write them asking if they desired to testify at the inquest. They live in New Hampshire.

In Memory of Justice Beekman.

Services in memory of Supreme Court Justice Henry R. Beekman will be held in Trial Term, Part IX., of the County Court House, at 10:30 o'clock this morning. All the parts of the Supreme Court will stand adjourned for the day. Addresses will be made by several of the Justices, as well as by a number of lawyers.

When the thermometer registered only 3° above zero, we weren't exactly "cock-a-hoop" over having marked some of our best $25, $22 and $20 overcoats to $15—but if the Clerk of the Weather can't hit it, how can we expect to?

A few of the overcoats still remain.

Also some of those $25, $22 and $20 winter sack suits marked down to $15.

Also some boys' short trouser suits to $4.

Also some boys' stockings to 10 cents.

MAYOR IN WORDY WARFARE

Pounds His Desk and Shouts at Bridge Commissioner Fairchild.

Latter Retaliates in Kind and Calls Board of Estimate's Criticism of the Commission Contemptible.

Mayor Van Wyck pounded his desk with his fist yesterday and glared at Julian D. Fairchild, one of the East River Bridge Commissioners. In return Commissioner Fairchild pounded his fist on the Mayor's desk and from the height of over six feet glared down on Mayor Van Wyck. This incident happened near the end of one of the most spirited conferences held in the Mayor's office. The Board of Estimate at the last meeting criticised the New East River Bridge Commission, and Mayor Van Wyck remarked that if the Commissioners would attend to their business the bridge would be finished "some time."

Commissioner Fairchild went to Mayor Van Wyck's office yesterday to resent Mayor Van Wyck's remarks. Mayor Van Wyck spoke in loud tones and was emphatic and belligerent. Commissioner Fairchild left the office unsatisfied, and said:

"The action of the Board of Estimate in criticising the East River Bridge Commission was contemptible. We'll show them what we'll do at our meeting on Thursday."

The conference between Mayor Van Wyck and Commissioner Fairchild began very peaceably in the public office, at the desk at which the Mayor usually holds all public hearings and transacts business which he wants the public to know about. A group of reporters gathered in the room. The talk began in low tones. In a few minutes it was so loud that it could be heard in the corridors of the City Hall. The first words Mayor Van Wyck said in a loud tone were:

"Weren't you directed by resolution of July 10 to proceed to acquire property for the bridge approaches?"

"We did not so understand it. We thought we had the right to purchase by agreement," replied Fairchild.

"You didn't?" fairly yelled the Mayor. "Well, you will now. I tell you once and for all that it is the wish of the Board of Estimate that you shall acquire all property by condemnation. If you did not know or were in doubt, why didn't you come to me as Chairman of the Board of Estimate and find out? I would have told you."

Mayor Van Wyck was pounding the table at this stage of the conference. Mr. Fairchild spoke in low tones, apparently trying to control his temper.

The Mayor then said, pounding the table at nearly every word:

"You want me to go to the Corporation Counsel? Do you want me to be an errand boy for your commission? You go to the Corporation Counsel yourselves, and if there is any delay you come to me."

Commissioner Fairchild told Mayor Van Wyck his commission thought it had the right to purchase by private agreement all the property it could, so as to hurry the completion of the bridge.

"If you did not understand it, I want you to understand it now, once and for all. I want the East River Bridge built, and I want your commission to act with all speed. What is the use of six Commissioners if you depend on the Mayor to do the work?"

Commissioner Fairchild kept his temper. He looked at Mayor Van Wyck in a conciliatory way. He evidently twitted him about his being a member of the commission he was criticising. Mayor Van Wyck became more excited, and shouted:

"I never attended a meeting of the commission. I appointed you six Commissioners to look after the bridge, and six men ought to be enough to look after that business properly."

Commissioner Fairchild said something about Corporation Counsel Whalen. Mayor Van Wyck shouted:

"Get him to act. Go after him, keep after him, make him act. If he don't, let me know, and I will make him act."

Then Commissioner Fairchild lost his temper. He glared fiercely at the Mayor and exclaimed in loud tones, at the same time pounding the desk:

"Personally, I don't care how this property is bought. It does not make any difference to me. I am only doing this in the interests of the city. I want to save time and expense. I don't care how the property is purchased—whether it is purchased by this commission or through condemnation proceedings."

"Again I tell you that the property must be purchased through condemnation proceedings," shouted the Mayor. "It makes a difference to me when that bridge is completed. I was promised that the bridge would be finished before 1901. Have you anything else to say?"

Mr. Fairchild made no comment, and the Mayor, in his most frigid tones, said:

"I am glad to have seen you. Good-bye."

Commissioner Fairchild left the Mayor's office, and said to the reporters:

"The Board of Estimate is to blame for everything. I have been running all over trying to hurry up matters. The Board of Estimate simply wants to throw the blame for the delay on the Commissioners. It is contemptible."

Corporation Counsel Whalen said yesterday that the Commissioners of Estimate for the condemnation of land for the East River Bridge plazas and approaches in Manhattan would probably be appointed by the Supreme Court in a few days.

WIRE FOR EAST RIVER BRIDGE.

Pittsburg Company Takes Contract from Swedish Competitors.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 21.—The Carbon Steel Company of this city has booked orders for 6,000 tons of a high grade of open hearth acid steel wire for use on the new East River Bridge at New York. The company took the contract from Swedish producers who heretofore have been regarded as the only interests able to supply the grade of wire required.

Special Jury to Try Dr. Kennedy.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday granted a motion made last Friday for a special jury to try Dr. Samuel J. Kennedy on the indictment charging the murder of Dollie Reynolds. The trial is set for Feb. 4. Special Commissioner of Jurors Henry Winthrop Gray will draw the jury, probably next Monday.

THROUGH TRAINS OVER BRIDGE.

They Belong to the Fifth Avenue and Brighton Beach Divisions of the B. R. T.

Through trains of the Fifth Avenue and Brighton Beach Divisions of the elevated system of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company were running over the bridge yesterday. The first through train crossed the bridge at 10 o'clock. This service will be continued every day between 10 A. M. and 4 P. M., but will not be in operation during the rush hours. The through trains are sandwiched between what are known as bridge locals. The passengers on the local and through trains are separated by an ingenious system of railings at the terminals.

During the first hour yesterday morning there was a hitch in the operation of the trains, and there was considerable confusion in separating the two classes of passengers.

VALUES HER LOVE AT $100,000.

Richard G. Sibley Sues George S. Smith for That Sum for Alleged Alienation of Mrs. Sibley's Affections.

George Stuart Smith, an insurance man, was arrested late Saturday night by a Deputy Sheriff on the complaint of Richard Gray Sibley who wants $100,000 damages from Mr. Smith for his alleged alienation of Mrs. Sibley's affections. Mr. Smith remained in Ludlow Street Jail until noon yesterday, when he was released on $20,000 bail, furnished by Thomas G. Field of 41 East Fifty-seventh Street and Charles P. Buchanan of 22 East Sixty-third Street.

The warrant on which Mr. Smith was arrested was signed by Justice Fitzgerald in the Supreme Court, and it was issued on the affidavits submitted by Mr. Sibley, who was one of the organizers of the United States Rubber Company, and is well-known in Wall Street.

Mrs. Sibley was Caroline Weil, a granddaughter of the late Henry Weil. She left her husband in 1898, and last Spring began an action for a legal separation. Mr. Sibley in the affidavits he submits declares that Smith is the cause of all the trouble, and, through his counsel, Kellog & Rose, he announced yesterday that, in addition to suing Mr. Smith for alienating his wife's affections, he proposed to institute an action for absolute divorce against his wife.

Mr. Sibley submits affidavits from a detective and several boarding-house keepers to show that Mr. Smith and Mrs. Sibley had been together at various places at different times, ranging from 1897 to date.

Mr. Sibley is fifty-six years old, and his wife is thirty-one years old. They were married in 1886. Mr. Smith is about forty years old.

FORTUNE WAITING FOR HEIRESS.

Efforts to Find the Daughter of the Late Dr. Schindeler Unsuccessful.

Detectives have been engaged to search for a young woman, formerly a resident of Hoboken, who is apparently determined to keep out of the way of a larg fortune that is awaiting her. The fortune that is thus going begging was left by Dr. Frederick Schindeler, for many years a practicing physician living at 316 Hudson Street, Hoboken.

The doctor's wife died about five years ago, and he and his daughter were the only remaining members of the family. The physician's health began to fail soon after the death of his wife. About two years ago he was taken seriously ill and his life was almost despaired of. A short time previously his daughter had become acquainted with a young man who claimed to be related to a well-known police official of this city. The father had objected to his attentions, but during the doctor's illness the young man helped to nurse him.

When the doctor recovered sufficiently he forbade the young man the house. The daughter and her sweetheart promptly disappeared. A short time later Dr. Schindeler received a letter from his daughter, mailed in a Western town, saying that she and the young man were married, and asking for money. The money was refused, although the girl was told that if she would return all would be forgiven. The girl did not return or write again, and all trace of her is lost.

After his daughter's disappearance Dr. Schindeler's condition grew rapidly worse, and he soon died. He left behind him a very large estate, part of which is in Holland, and the daughter is the sole legatee. Every effort has been made to find her through advertisements and letters to Western Postmasters and Chiefs of Police. Detectives have been engaged as a last resort.

NURSE HELD FOR ROBBERY.

Charged with Stealing $500 in Jewelry from Broker Carbury.

Thomas Donohue, a trained nurse, of 1,423 Park Place, Brooklyn, was arraigned as a fugitive from justice in the Centre Street Court yesterday by Detective Charles Farley of the Central Office. Farley stated to Magistrate Mayo that Donohue is wanted in New Jersey for the larceny of $500 worth of jewelry from J. S. Carbury, a broker in the Produce Exchange Building, living at Westfield, N. J.

Donohue, it is alleged, was called to care for Mr. Carbury during a recent illness. One day he disappeared, and the jewelry was missed at the same time. Part of the stolen property was located by the detectives in pawn shops in Albany and along the Bowery. Donohue was arrested yesterday in Brooklyn. His picture is in the Rogues' Gallery. He was held.

QUEEN VICTORIA DEAD AT OSBORNE

Passed Away Quietly at 6:30 o'Clock Last Evening.

SCENE AT THE BEDSIDE

Family, with Bowed Heads, Listened to Bishop's Prayers.

QUEEN BADE THEM FAREWELL

Said to Have Spoken Words of Great Moment to Prince of Wales.

ALBERT EDWARD NOW KING

Privy Council and Parliament Will Meet in London To-day, and the Proclamation of the New Monarch's Succession Will Follow—Grief Over the Queen's Death and Admiration for Her Character Universal in the United Kingdom, the British Colonies, Europe, and America—Arrangements for the Funeral Not Yet Announced.

COWES, Isle of Wight, Jan. 23.—Queen Victoria is dead. The greatest event in the memory of this generation, almost the most stupendous change in existing conditions in England that could be imagined, has taken place quietly, almost gently, upon the anniversary of the death of Queen Victoria's father, the Duke of Kent.

The end of this splendid career came in a simply furnished room in Osborne House. This most respected of all women, living or dead, lay in a great four-posted bed. Around her were gathered the majority of her descendants. Well within view of her dying eyes there hung a portrait of the Prince Consort. It was he who designed the room and every part of the Castle. In scarcely audible words the white-haired Bishop of Winchester prayed beside her, as he had often before prayed with his sovereign, for he was her Chaplain at Windsor.

With bowed heads the imperious ruler of the German Empire, the man who is now King of England, the woman who has succeeded to the title of Queen, the Princes and Princesses, and those of less than royal designation listened to the Bishop's ceaseless prayer.

Naturally, the family, while recognizing the claim for public information, insist that some details of the events around the deathbed shall be sacred for the present, and have imposed the strictest secrecy on the whole household. The Queen is, however, said to have bidden farewell, in a feeble voice, to her family. She first recognized the Prince of Wales, to whom she spoke a few words of great moment; then Emperor William and the others present filed past and heard a whispered good-bye. All those in the bedroom were in tears.

Six o'clock passed. The Bishop continued his intercession. One of the younger children asked a question in a shrill, childish treble, and was immediately silenced. The women of the royal family sobbed faintly and the men shuffled uneasily.

THE END QUITE PEACEFUL.

At exactly 6:30 Sir James Reid held up his hand, and the people in the room knew that England had lost her Queen. The Bishop pronounced the benediction.

The Queen passed away quite peacefully. She suffered no pain. Those who were now mourners went to their rooms. A few minutes later the inevitable element of materialism stepped into this pathetic chapter of international history, for the Court ladies went busily to work ordering their mourning from London.

The wheels of the world were jarred when the announcement came; but in this palace at Osborne everything pursued the usual course. Down in the kitchen they were cooking a huge dinner for an assemblage the like of which has seldom been known in England, and the dinner preparations proceeded just as if nothing had happened.

An incident characteristic of the Queen's solicitude for others occurred two days ago, when, in one of the intervals of consciousness, she summoned strength to suggest to her dressers, who had been acting as nurses, that they take the opportunity of getting some fresh air.

QUEEN ASKS FOR HER DOG.

On Monday afternoon the Queen asked that her little Pomeranian be brought to her bedside.

It was feared that the Queen was dying at about 9 o'clock yesterday morning, and carriages were sent to Osborne cottage and the rectory to bring all the Princes and Princesses and the Bishop of Winchester to her bedside. It seemed then very near the end; but, when things looked the worst, the Queen, in one of the rallies due to her wonderful constitution, opened her eyes and recognized the Prince of Wales, the Princess, and Emperor William. She asked to see one of her faithful servants, a member of the household. He hastened to the room, but before he got there the Queen had passed into a fitful sleep.

Four o'clock marked the beginning of the end. Again the family were summoned, and this time the relapse was not followed by recovery.

The Prince of Wales was very much affected when the doctors at length informed him that his mother had breathed her last. Emperor William, himself deeply affected, did his best to minister comfort to his sorrow-stricken uncle, whose new dignity he was the first to acknowledge.

OUTSIDE OSBORNE HOUSE GATES.

No member of the royal family left Osborne House yesterday for the customary drives. A changing group of correspondents and townspeople loitered about the gates all day long, but never reached the proportions of the crowd of Monday.

It was a melancholy day. Occasional drizzles obscured the emerald hills beyond the castle. Greater simplicity or a more entire lack of any of that pomp traditionally attached to royalty could not be found in any country house in the kingdom than here, where the best-beloved monarch of centuries was dying and the ruler of another great nation waited by her bedside as grandson rather than as Emperor.

Two stalwart policemen guarding the gates against intruders were the sole reminders of officialdom. They were compelled in the morning to refuse admission to three dusky visitors from India who drove up arrayed in such gorgeous robes that the bystanders instinctively lifted their hats, mistaking them for potentates. The trio announced themselves as lecturers touring England in behalf of a foreign mission, and insisted upon an audience with the Prince of Wales to tender the sympathies of India.

Many of the country gentry and a few titled personages appeared at the lodge and registered their names in the visitors' book, the thrifty flunky who officiated doing a profitable business by selling the original copies of official bulletins to souvenir enthusiasts. Artists and photographers obtained pictures of the gates and grounds and any prominent persons who appeared.

THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN ARRIVES

Everybody feared that the Queen would never waken from the sleep which the noontime bulletin spoke of, and everybody was watching the flag on the castle tower, expecting it to sink to half mast. Lord Clarendon, the new Lord Chamberlain, with Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein and the Duke of Argyll, arrived at Osborne in the afternoon. The arrival of the Lord Chamberlain was an ominous sign, as he announces to a new monarch his accession to the throne.

When the 4 o'clock bulletin announced that the Queen was sinking, all the watchers at the gates of Osborne House made up their minds to remain to the end. The cold was intense, and a few favored ones sought shelter in the royal lodge, just inside, where they waited in absolute silence.

NEWS OF THE EVENT ANNOUNCED.

The telephone bell rang at 7:04 P. M., but before a royal servant had time to take the message the Chief of the Queen's Police emerged from the darkness, and, with bared head, said:

"Gentlemen, the Queen passed away at 6:30."

All present reverently uncovered, and then shrill whistles outside and the ringing of the bells of the bicycles in waiting were the signals for messengers to race to Cowes with the news. In a few moments the place was deserted. Simultaneously, mounted messengers, on white horses, dashed from Osborne. What happened within the royal residence is purely surmise.

On their arrival at Cowes the correspondents found the news had been known both at East and West Cowes fifteen minutes before it had been announced to those in waiting at the gates of Osborne House. The streets were already filled with sorrowful crowds discussing her Majesty's death.

Prince and Princess Louis of Battenberg arrived at Osborne just too late to see her Majesty alive.

From all parts of the world there are still pouring into Cowes messages of condolence. They come from crowned heads, millionaires, tradesmen, and paupers, and are variously addressed to the Prince of Wales and the King of England.

RESULT OF ROBERTS'S NEWS?

The record of the last days of the reign of Victoria is not yet fully known. The correspondent of The Associated Press was the only correspondent admitted to Osborne House, and his interview with Sir Arthur John Bigge, private secretary to the late Queen, was the only official statement that was given out.

For several weeks the Queen had been failing. On Monday week she summoned Lord Roberts and asked him some very searching questions regarding the war in South Africa. On Tuesday she went for a drive, but was visibly affected. On Wednesday she suffered a paralytic stroke, accompanied by intense physical weakness. It was her first illness in all her eighty-one years, and she would not admit she was sick. Then her condition grew so serious that, against her wishes, the family were summoned. When they arrived her reason had practically succumbed to paralysis and weakness.

The events of the last few days, described in the bulletins, are too fresh to need repetition.

THE LAST BULLETINS.

OSBORNE HOUSE GATES, Isle of Wight, Jan. 22.—An official bulletin issued at 8 o'clock said:

The Queen this morning shows signs of diminishing strength, and her Majesty's condition again assumes a more serious aspect.
JAMES REID.
R. DOUGLAS POWELL.
THOMAS BARLOW.

The bulletin issued at noon said there had been no change for the worse in the Queen's condition since the morning bulletin.

At 4 P. M. another bulletin was posted. It said the Queen was slowly sinking.

At 6:45 P. M. the end was announced as follows:

Her Majesty the Queen breathed her last at 6:30 P. M., surrounded by her children and grandchildren.
JAMES REID.
R. DOUGLAS POWELL.
THOMAS BARLOW.

THE QUEEN'S FUNERAL.

Will Probably Be at Frogmore—Many Royalties Expected.

COWES, Isle of Wight, Jan. 23.—The body of Queen Victoria is being embalmed to-night, and will probably be taken to Windsor on Saturday.

The coffin arrived last evening from London.

Emperor William's arrangements are not settled, but it is believed that he will not depart until after the funeral, which will probably be a ceremony never before equaled in this country.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—There is little doubt that the funeral of Queen Victoria will take place at Frogmore, Hertfordshire, though nothing in regard to this matter has yet been announced.

Her Majesty was so closely related to the European Courts, big and little, that the gathering of royalties at the obsequies will be unprecedented.

ATHENS, Jan. 22.—King George will start for London to-night.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—The French Government will be represented at the funeral of Queen Victoria by an extraordinary embassy.

The members have not yet been chosen, but the embassy will be headed by Vice Admiral de Lajaille, who on several occasions welcomed Queen Victoria at Cherbourg in the name of France.

TO-DAY'S CEREMONIES.

Privy Council and Parliament to Meet —The Proclamation of the King.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—The Privy Council will meet in London to-day, and the proclamation of the King will take place thereafter at all places required by custom.

The King will come to London to preside over the Council. The Ministers will attend, give up their seals of office, be resworn, receive the proclamation of the King, pass votes of condolence and congratulation, and adjourn.

After giving up their seals the Ministers receive them back from the new ruler. The Privy Councilors will also be sworn afresh.

Shortly before midnight yesterday an official announcement was issued calling Parliament to assemble at 4 o'clock this afternoon to enable members of the House of Lords and House of Commons to take the oath of allegiance to the King. Precedent orders that Parliament shall meet within twenty-four hours of the death of the ruler.

At the offices of the Lord Chamberlain and of the City Remembrancer, at the Guildhall and at the College of Heralds, the officials were busy yesterday preparing for the formalities which for the first time in a generation, are to take place—the proclaiming of a new ruler of the United Kingdom. All the ancient gazettes, Court circulars, and other papers which describe the ceremonial of 1837 were taken from the libraries, that the officials might familiarize themselves with the ancient pageantry whereby a sovereign is proclaimed. The City Remembrancer said yesterday:

"It will depend on the pleasure of the new monarch to decide how far the ancient customs will be modified to suit modern methods; but, in a country where precedents are so firmly adhered to as England, it may be anticipated that we shall follow closely on the acts which prevailed when the Queen ascended the throne. The Privy Council, which is a very large body, will meet at once at St. James's Palace, where the form of proclamation declaring that 'we, etcetera, with one voice and consent of tongue and heart declare and proclaim the high mighty Prince Albert Edward, etcetera, who, by the death of the monarch, has become our only lawful and rightful liege, etcetera.'

"This proclamation will give the new title the King may assume, but this is not yet announced to us. The proclamation will then be sent to Heralds' College, and the following day the Earl Marshal, the Garter King at Arms, the Herald's Pursuivants, and other officials, with the college members and the Household troops, will proceed from the palace, clad in their splendid surcoats, and proceed to Trafalgar Square. There the King at Arms will halt, command silence, and read the proclamation. Proceeding down the Strand to Temple Bar, a halt will again be made, to demand an entrance into the City to proclaim the King. There the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, in their state carriages, will form a great procession, and when the Earl Marshal's party comes just within the City boundary the proclamation will be read again, and the procession will pass down Ludgate Hill and Cheapside to the Royal Exchange, where similar ceremonies will close the spectacle."

DEEP GLOOM IN LONDON.

Places of Amusement All Closed—How the News Was Received.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Silence, gloom, and darkness characterize London to-night. From Whitechapel to Mayfair streets usually gay with nightly festivity are dark, deserted, and desolate, and this depression of the public mind is likely to continue for many days to come.

Only a few hours ago the pleasure-seeking populace was hurrying to the theatres and music halls, only to find in every case the doors closed and big, black-bordered bills announcing that the performances had been suspended. The people, thus turned into the streets, gave for a short time an unusually thronged appearance to the West End. Many turned in the direction of Buckingham Palace and Marlborough House, where absolute silence reigned. Small bills, signed "Balfour," were posted outside, announcing the death of the monarch.

Everywhere, in vehicles and on the streets, the one topic of conversation was what would happen under the new reign, rather than the life and death of Victoria. Much interest was evinced in the way in which the enormous fortune of the dead Queen would be distributed, the general notion being that Osborne House would go to Princess Beatrice, and that she and Princess Christian would come into a considerable portion of Queen Victoria's wealth.

The probability that the King will take up as practically permanent residence in Buckingham Palace was much canvassed. This is a question that comes very much home to Londoners. Queen Victoria's preference for Balmoral Castle and Osborne House has been a complaint of long standing in the metropolis, and it is hoped that the new reign will see a change in this respect. The presence of the Court in London would give a brightness and gayety to the city which have long been absent.

Not until Queen Victoria has been laid to rest beside the Prince Consort at Frogmore will the theatres or music halls reopen. Moreover, business will come to a practical standstill. Music in all the hotels and public places ceased last evening. Fashionable resorts were empty, and very few of the nightly habitués were in evidence.

Americans who have passed through great National calamities may recall the crepe-draped buildings and the National hush; but they can ill-conceive, since the death of Lincoln, any such expression of gloom as has already fallen on the United Kingdom. Marlborough House, so long the home of the new monarch; Buckingham Palace, where Queen Victoria made her last stay in London, and St. James's Palace, the residence of so many former monarchs, are to-night all black and deserted. Sentries in black overcoats keep silent vigil before the closed gates and bolted doors.

Early in the evening from St. Paul's, Westminster Abbey, and other churches bells were solemnly tolling or ringing muffled peals. In some cases the shops were already exhibiting signs of mourning. Beyond these things, however, and the boys crying extra editions in every direction, there was little that would outwardly indicate the passing of the country through an experience novel to almost the whole people.

SORROW IS UNIVERSAL.

Telegrams arriving from all parts of the country and the colonies re-echo the deep feeling of sorrow pervading all classes. These show that everywhere bells have been tolled and public performances and private functions suspended.

In Dublin the expressions of regret were universal. The bells of St. Patrick's Cathedral were tolled. Earl Cadogan, the Lord Lieutenant, was absent from Dublin yesterday, but it is expected that he will return immediately to preside at a meeting of the Irish Privy Council to proclaim the new King.

The news was received with the greatest sorrow at Balmoral, Windsor, and Eton, where Queen Victoria was regarded in an especially personal manner by the inhabitants.

Princess Beatrice telegraphed the tidings to ex-Empress Eugénie at Farnborough.

SCENES YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

The gloomy faces of the crowds incessantly approaching the bulletin board at the Mansion House indicated yesterday how little the public hoped to receive better news of the condition of the Queen. Men of all ages and conditions, women and even children were content to spend a long time in awaiting their turn to get within reading distance of the board. As the throng moved slowly past the notice board, those who were unable to get there personally sent messenger boys with notebook and pencils to copy the text of everything posted. The grief of all was evident. Never were there so many black ties in the city before the actual arrival of a time of general mourning.

There was a remarkable scene outside the Mansion House early in the afternoon. On receipt of the alarming reports something resembling a groan was uttered by the hundreds of people assembled, and then some one started singing the national anthem. All heads were bared, and in a moment the crowds were singing "God Save the Queen" with a fervor proving how earnestly they wished for her Majesty's recovery. The passengers in passing carriages, cabs, and omnibuses joined in the singing, the drivers reverently doffing their hats.

At 4:35 P. M. the following was posted:

Osborne, 4 P. M.

My painful duty obliges me to inform you that the life of our beloved Queen is in the greatest danger. ALBERT EDWARD.

In reply the Lord Mayor, Frank Green, dispatched the following:

"I have received your Royal Highness's sad intimation with profound grief, which is shared by the citizens of London, who still pray that under Divine Providence the irreparable loss to her Majesty's devoted family and loyal subjects throughout the empire may still be averted. Will your Royal Highness be pleased to accept this heart-felt expression of my deep and sincere sympathy?"

THE FINAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

The latest bulletins previous to the announcement of the Queen's death, especially the message sent by the Prince of Wales, dispelled the last gleam of hope. The crowds silently dispersed from in front of the Mansion House, and only a few groups awaited the appearance of the inevitable announcement. This came at 7 o'clock in the form of a dispatch to the Lord Mayor from the new King as follows:

Osborne, 6:45 P. M.

My beloved mother has just passed away, surrounded by her children and grandchildren. ALBERT EDWARD.

The Lord Mayor immediately sent the following reply:

"Your Royal Highness's telegram announcing the nation's great loss I have received with profound distress and grief, and have communicated this most sad intimation to my fellow-citizens. Her Majesty's name and memory will forever live in the hearts of her people.

"May I respectfully convey to your Royal Highness and to all the members of the royal family the earnest sympathy and condolence of the City of London in your great sorrow?"

The scrap of paper a foot square, posted on the wall of the Mansion House, gave the first notice to London's homeward hurrying thousands of the death of the Queen. Excavations by which the street had been torn up made access to the bulletin difficult, but the bared heads of a silent group under a flickering gas jet told the crowds on the 'bus tops and sidewalks that the Queen was no more.

"BIG BEN" IS TOLLED.

A quarter of an hour later more than a thousand newsboys had invaded the streets with black-ruled newspapers, crying, "Death of the Queen," while through the dark streets boomed the deep-toned notes of "Big Ben," the big bell of St. Paul's Cathedral, the bells of the city re-echoing the news.

The shops closed as soon as the bells began to toll, and the blinds of the Mansion House were drawn down as soon as the message from the Prince of Wales was received by the Lord Mayor.

The bell tolled at St. Paul's Cathedral was the gift of William III., and is used only on occasions of the death of royal personages, Archbishops of Canterbury, Lord Mayors of London, and Bishops of London. The tolling continued for two hours at intervals of a minute and could be heard for miles in the direction of the wind.

Some hundreds of people stood in front of the cathedral around the spot where Queen Victoria prayed on the sixtieth anniversary of her accession to the throne.

LONDON PRESS COMMENTS.

Universal Grief Reflected in Editorials —Labouchère's Warm Eulogy.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—All the morning papers appear in heavy mourning borders, with editorials eulogistic of the dead Queen and recalling the leading events and characteristics of her reign. Very few political references as to the future are made. The Daily Mail says:

"We can but regret that the Queen was not permitted to see the end of the South African struggle. She has been taken from us in a dark hour which, we may hope, is a prelude to the dawn, and when we can ill spare her rigse experience and her vast knowledge of measures and men."

"Let us think of her this morning," says the Daily Chronicle, "by her highest title, not by her crown and sceptre, but by her own magnificent and splendid ideal of womanhood. This it is which touches the heart's core of a proud and imperial race. We have lost mother, wife, and Queen."

The Chronicle remarks that President McKinley was slightly premature in sending a communication to "His Majesty, the King," inasmuch as the Prince of Wales has not yet been proclaimed by the Privy Council.

The Daily Telegraph publishes two editorials under the captions "The Queen" and "The King." In the latter it says:

"Most happy for him, for his, with infinite credit to himself, passed through a period of probation in some ways more difficult and certainly more prolonged than that to which any successor to a throne in modern times has been subjected. He assumes the burden of his imperial task equipped with all the invaluable experience which the most painstaking discharge of great duties could secure him during the lifetime of his august mother. So accustomed have we become to his direct, personal patronage of every charity and every beneficial movement, many of which he initiated himself, that we are apt to forget the exhausting nature of the strain almost daily imposed upon his strength. He has won among the masses of the people a popularity that has been vouchsafed to few of his predecessors."

The Times says:

"The confidence inspired by her personal character enabled Queen Victoria on many occasions to use her intimate knowledge with effect in smoothing the rugged places of international relations or in modifying a policy which, through sheer inadequacy of information, would have led to undesirable friction. We have also to thank the Queen for influence of the most potent kind consistently and vigorously used to enforce high ideals of social and personal virtue, of religious faith and of Christian life."

Referring to the intellectual upheaval and the enormous social and economic progress which characterized the Victorian era, The Times expresses regret that the impetus has to some extent spent itself.

"At the close of Victoria's reign," continues The Times, "we find ourselves somewhat less secure of our position than we could desire, somewhat less abreast of the problems of the age than we ought to be, considering the initial advantages we secured."

"The great English-speaking Republic beyond the Atlantic has not failed to send us officially by the mouth of President McKinley, and unofficially by innumerable newspaper articles and other tokens of popular feeling, proof of how heartily and profoundly it shares in our grief. Need we say for ourselves and our colonies how dear to us in such an hour is the fellowship in woe which our American kinsmen so generously and warmly tender us?"

In another article The Times says:

"If anything can in some measure console the nation for the irreparable loss it has sustained, it is the well-founded conviction that the Queen has left behind her a worthy successor, who may be trusted to walk in her footsteps.

"In the whole range of English social and political life no position is more difficult to fill satisfactorily and without reproach than that of the heir apparent, and it may be justly said that the way this position has been filled has contributed to the remarkable increase in the devotion to the throne and the dynasty which has been one of the most striking characteristics of Victoria's reign.

"As Albert Edward has been a scrupulously constitutional Prince, we may confidently predict that he will be a scrupulously constitutional King. In the fulfillment of this onerous task he will have by his side a Queen who is already enthroned in the hearts of her loving subjects."

Henry Labouchère, M. P., in Truth has a remarkable tribute to Queen Victoria, a tribute all the more remarkable because of his democratic ideas and frank criticisms of royalty.

"Among all her millions of subjects," he says, "there are but few who will not mourn for her loss as for one of their own household. Nor will the mourners be found among her own subjects alone. It is not too much to say that never in the history of the world has a single death caused such universal grief. Alike in happiness and sorrow, she lived a life beyond reproach, without thought of self, unreservedly devoted to the duties of the hour. Although occupying perhaps the proudest position ever filled by a woman, and never wanting in a certain queenly dignity, her tastes, habits, demeanor, and even her dress were marked by the rarest simplicity.

"She has been indeed the mother of her people, and as a mother she will be mourned. In all the affairs of State she manifested the same wisdom that inspired her private life, nor did her own country alone enjoy the fruits of her experience and sagacity. Through her kindred and descendants abroad her influence for many years has been felt in Continental politics, always on the side of peace; and, in at least one crisis, she is known to have rendered service to the whole of Europe.

"Her sudden and lamentable breakdown was due entirely to worry and overwork. She had been greatly distressed by events in South Africa and by domestic griefs."

The Daily News says that Queen Victoria was always a peacemaker. It refers to the incident of her modifying in a pacific sense Lord Russell's dispatch in the Trent case.

The Standard, expressing regret that the Queen was not spared to see peace restored in South Africa, says: "The end for which she strove and prayed has yet to come, and the hope is perhaps visionary that the common grief of Britons and Afrikanders may abate those racial animosities which stand in the way of pacification."

Referring to the conspicuous success of Queen Victoria's reign, The Standard says: "There was a time when republicanism was a serious phrase on English lips. To-day no whisper of discontent with the monarchical Constitution breaks the mourning of a loyal nation around the bier of the sovereign. It will be said of her in the annals of our land that she strengthened the Throne by loving the people, and that she was a great Queen and the mother of Kings because she was a good, noble, and true-hearted woman."

THE NATIONS' TRIBUTES.

Enmity for Great Britain Hushed and Only Sympathy Expressed.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—The news of the death of Queen Victoria was known in Paris at 8 o'clock last evening through special editions of the evening papers, which newsboys carried throughout the city. Great sympathy was expressed on all sides.

As soon as definite information reached Parliament the Presidents of the chambers announced that the next session would be adjourned as a sign of mourning.

When the news was known at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, M. Delcassé, the Foreign Minister, went to the British Embassy to express to the Acting Ambassador the condolence of the French Government. President Loubet postponed his visit until the return of Sir Edmund Monson.

Not until then, moreover, will the arrangements relative to mourning be made. The British flag, draped with crape, will be placed over the entrance to the embassy to-day.

Last evening there was a steady stream of callers to inscribe their names in the register at the embassy.

Few and far between, indeed, are the Paris papers this morning which do not sound the note of regret at the passing of Victoria. In addition to long obituaries, special writers publish appreciations, reviewing the Queen's life work, noting in what respects it contributed to the greatness of the British nation, and speculating in some cases upon the reign about to open. Foremost of these special writers is M. Hanotaux, who, in Le Journal, refers to the extent of England's debt to Victoria.

"Her temperament and judgment, thanks to the precious lessons of Lord Melbourne," says M. Hanotaux, "were in complete accord with English Parliamentary institutions. Her success as a sovereign was due to her close attention to the affairs of State, her frequent journeys, her interviews with foreign statesmen, and above all, to the extraordinary position of being allied to several of the reigning sovereigns of Europe."

Le Gaulois says:

"Her action may be summed up in a brief phrase, little authority and much influence. The changes which are about to take place express better than blind and foolish flattery the place she occupied in Europe. That will be her true funeral oration, the final word of which will be that she, the possessor of most ordinary faculties, accomplished more than certain conquerors, and has left a greater gap than Catherine or Elizabeth."

Le Siecle says:

"Doubtless the Prince of Wales will follow the good example of his mother, whose death will mark no change of policy or opinion in Great Britain. He will peaceably enjoy the loyalty of the empire, accorded during the long reign of the Queen."

Le Temps, discussing the outlook, says:

"The sadness, alarm, anxieties, moral sufferings, and pecuniary cares arising out of the Transvaal war have created a new feeling in England. Queen Victoria has been like a mother of a family, a living link with the prosperity of the past, an anchor of security for the British people. With her disappearance will come the unknown, the groping into the dark future."

BERLIN, Jan. 22.—The news of the death of Queen Victoria had been hourly expected in Berlin, and on its arrival special editions of the newspapers sold like wildfire, the announcement being read with silent and respectful sympathy. The fact that Empress Augusta Victoria started today for Homburg to be near Dowager Empress Frederick added to the sad circumstances of the occasion.

Immediately after the receipt of the news Count von Eulenburg, the Chief Court Marshal, ordered the flags half masted on all public buildings. Although the hour of the evening was somewhat advanced, a number of the embassies and legations, including the United States Embassy, did the same.

Special mourning orders to the Schloss, the army, the Court, and the public departments were issued this evening. These will be published to-morrow and go immediately into effect.

The German nation fully shares in the feelings of the British people toward the venerable and illustrious sovereign who has just breathed her last.

Semi-official paragraphs in the press this evening rebut the idea, commonly held in Germany, that the new King will be inclined to be hostile toward Germany. On the contrary, they assert that he will act in the interests of Great Britain and the British people alone.

A sense of gratification is felt by all Germans that Emperor William was present at Osborne during the last hours of Queen Victoria's life and that the lofty feelings of filial piety which prompted his action have met with such full and unqualified recognition on the part of the British nation.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 22.—The Dutch press printed the news of the death of Queen Victoria with mourning borders.

The Court will go into mourning; but it is probable that there will be no change in the arrangements for the marriage of Queen Wilhelmina.

ROME, Jan. 22.—A most painful impression was produced by the receipt of the news of Queen Victoria's death.

King Victor Emmanuel, Queen Helena, the Pope, and members of the Government immediately telegraphed condolences.

GRIEF IN CANADA.

Flags at Half Mast Everywhere and Amusement Places Closed.

TORONTO, Ontario, Jan. 22.—To Torontonians no tidings fraught with greater sorrow ever flashed over the wires than those which recorded the death of the Queen. All classes of the community show their heartfelt grief. From early morning till the announcement of her Majesty's death, great crowds gathered and waited around the different newspaper offices, eagerly scanning each bulletin as it was posted up. When at last the dreaded news came, heads were reverently uncovered, and the crowds dispersed silently. For half an hour the bells kept tolling their mournful messages, while national flags, half-masted, swung from every pole.

The children in every school in the city this forenoon sang for the last time "God Save the Queen." The Mayor will proclaim a day of mourning.

MONTREAL, Jan. 22.—The bulletin officially announcing the death of her Majesty turned Montreal into a city of mourning. No sooner was the fact announced than the fire bells began to ring out at minute intervals, and mingled with them came the tolling of the big cathedral bells of both the English and Catholic churches. Flags appeared at half-mast everywhere, and the crowds in the streets and at the bulletin boards of the various papers, their heads in most cases bared, reverently read the announcement.

All entertainments of a social nature have been canceled, and even skating rinks, hockey rinks, and places of public amusement have been closed.

OTTAWA, Jan. 22.—The news of the Queen's death reached Ottawa at 2 P. M. The Secretary of State at once issued a proclamation continuing in office all who held positions under the Crown. This is merely formal.

All public buildings in the Dominion at once placed the union jack at half mast, and it will so remain until sundown on the day of the Queen's funeral.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Jan. 22.—The announcement of Queen Victoria's death has called forth expressions of the keenest regret in Newfoundland, the oldest colony of the British Empire. The Colonial Cabinet met this evening and adopted resolutions of condolence, which were cabled to London.

To-morrow will be observed as a day of mourning throughout the colony.

Arrangements are being made for the proclamation of the new sovereign upon receipt of an official intimation of his accession.

HALIFAX, N. S., Jan. 22.—Symbols of mourning for Queen Victoria are everywhere displayed. Flags fly half-mast on ships and from the frowning fortress, and the royal standard, for the first time in many years, is half-mast at the Citadel.

All performances have been canceled, and on the day of the Queen's funeral the tolling of half a hundred bells will mingle with the loud notes of minute guns for the departed sovereign.

A sketch of the life of Queen Victoria will be found on Pages 6 and 7 of this issue.

AMERICAN TRIBUTES TO QUEEN VICTORIA

President McKinley Cables Condolences to the New King.

WASHINGTON FLAGS LOWERED

Such a Mark of Respect Had Never Been Before Paid on the Death of a Monarch—Action by Congress.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Four days of anxiety, in a large measure, prepared official Washington for the news which was flashed across the cable this afternoon from England. So it happened that all things that could be decently done in anticipation of the death of Queen Victoria had been disposed of, and all was in readiness for the execution of the formalities which are indispensable to such occasions. The President and his advisers were in receipt from time to time of all news which came from Osborne House. When the end came it found appropriate measures of condolence framed, and even orders, ready for execution, looking to the half-masting of the flags over the executive departments and the carrying out of the usual formalities.

The half-masting of the National ensign was an unusual tribute. This has been done once or twice on the occasion of the funeral of some great ruler, but never before in the case of the death of a monarch. The adjournment of the House was also an unusual mark of respect.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

The news announcing the death of Queen Victoria was conveyed to President McKinley simultaneously with its receipt by the newspapers. Soon afterward the President sent the following message of condolence to the new King:

Washington, Jan. 22, 1901.

His Majesty the King, Osborne House, Isle of Wight.

I have received with profound sorrow the lamentable tidings of the death of her Majesty the Queen. Allow me, Sir, to offer my sincere sympathy and that of the American people in your personal bereavement and in the loss Great Britain has suffered in the death of its venerable and illustrious sovereign, whose noble life and beneficent influence have promoted the peace and won the affection of the world.

WILLIAM McKINLEY.

Secretary of State Hay cabled the following message to Ambassador Choate at London:

Department of State, Jan. 22, 1901.

Choate, Ambassador, London:

You will express to Lord Lansdowne the profound sorrow of the Government and people of the United States at the death of the Queen and the deep sympathy we feel with the people of the British Empire in their great affliction.

The actual dispatch of the message from the President to the new King of England and from Secretary Hay to Ambassador Choate was delayed only long enough to receive the physicians' statement announcing the demise of the Queen, and then they were sent forward at once and copies were furnished to the press.

The flag on the Executive Mansion was placed at half-mast at 3:30 o'clock.

THE SENATE'S RESOLUTION.

The Senate was in executive session when the news of Queen Victoria's death was announced, but the bulletin announcing her death was passed around by the doorkeepers. Expressions of regret and of admiration for the virtues of the dead sovereign were heard on all hands. Senators Allison and Morgan held a hurried consultation, as the result of which the latter drew up a resolution, which the former presented when the executive session closed. The resolution was as follows:

"That the death of her Royal and Imperial Majesty, Victoria, of noble virtues and great renown, is sincerely deplored by the Senate of the United States of America.

The resolution was adopted unanimously. Afterward Mr. Allison offered the following resolution:

"That the President pro tem. of the Senate cause to be conveyed to the Prime Minister of Great Britain a suitably engrossed copy of the foregoing resolution."

This was agreed to. Senator Lodge, evidently voicing the sentiment of most of his colleagues, said later:

"The Queen's death is to the people of the United States a real sorrow. Her reign, the largest in English history, has been a great and memorable one, but it has perhaps nothing greater or more memorable than her own ability and purity of character; her fidelity to her high duties, and her devotion to those ideals of conduct and of domestic life which appeal most profoundly to all English-speaking people. The Queen has always been a steadfast friend to the United States, and during her long life has made that friendship traditional in her family. Americans can never forget that England was withheld from active interference in our own civil war largely, if not wholly, by the influence of the Queen and the wise counsels of Prince Albert."

THE HOUSE ADJOURNS.

The House received the news at about 2 o'clock, and for the time being it was the theme of universal discussion among the members. Speaker Henderson had shown deep interest in the Queen's condition, and the first bulletin announcing her death was taken to him in his private office and to Chairman Hitt of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. Mr. Hitt conferred with his colleagues as to the precedents in such cases, and then framed a brief and expressive resolution of sympathy and respect to be introduced in the House later. For a time it was feared that this might give rise to some expressions from Boer sympathizers, but, on the contrary, it was developed that the sentiment of respect for the departed sovereign was shared by all alike.

At the conclusion of the general debate on the District of Columbia Appropriation bill Mr. Hitt offered the resolution, which was as follows:

"Resolved That the House of Representatives of the United States of America has learned with profound sorrow of the death of her Majesty Queen Victoria and sympathizes with her people in the loss of their beloved sovereign; that the President be requested to communicate this expression of the sentiment of the House to the Government of Great Britain; that, as a further mark of respect to the memory of Queen Victoria, the House do now adjourn."

The reading of the resolution was listened to with impressive silence. Mr. Hitt stated very briefly that this resolution followed the precedents in similar cases. It was, he said, copied almost literally from the resolution adopted upon the occasion of the death of the President of the French Republic, and followed the expression adopted upon the death of the Czar of Russia. He did not, he said, think that the occasion called for any extended remarks, and asked for a vote.

The resolution was unanimously adopted, and the House at 3:05 P. M. stood adjourned until to-morrow.

After the adjournment members gathered in knots and discussed the event, the tributes being to the womanly virtues and purity of the life of the Queen, no less than to her national service.

PRAISE FROM CABINET MINISTERS.

Secretary of State Hay, on being informed of the Queen's death, declined to make a statement for publication on the ground that, being under obligation to send an official message to the British Government on the subject, he did not feel called upon to make a further supplementary private statement.

Attorney General Griggs said:

"Hers has been a noble life. Whether she was great as a Queen, or as a woman is hard to say. Her good influence upon society and individual character is beyond estimate or calculation. It is rare that the personal worth of a royal personage equals in public estimation the reputation that attaches to the royal office, but, great as has been the glory of her political reign, her personal sway over the manners, the morals, and the hearts of men and women of all nations has given her a worldwide dominion, and brings at her death an extent of profound sorrow and mourning which comprehends the whole civilized world."

Secretary of the Treasury Gage said:

"The death of England's well-loved Queen closes the happiest period in all her country's existence. Victoria was, by force of character, conspicuous in molding the life and tendencies of the English people during her reign. She will be venerated by them because of her personal qualities, purity of mind, and integrity of character. She was endowed with a clear and independent judgment, which early won the profound respect of her official advisers and the love of her countrymen. This respect and love have increased as the years have gone by. A sovereign under the theory of 'divine right,' she was in reality the head of a highly democratic State. Her sympathies were toward the people. The people recognized the fact, and repaid her with a generous and loving confidence. To few on earth has it been given so to guide the unfolding destinies of a mighty nation. She will live in the hearts of the people wherever the English tongue is spoken as a good woman, a wise ruler, and a worthy exemplar for all who may be clothed with political responsibility, whether under democratic or aristocratic forms of government. The greatest laureate of her reign might well have had her in mind when he wrote:

"'Tis only noble to be good.
Kind hearts are more than coronets."

Secretary of the Navy Long said:

"I feel the greatest respect for Queen Victoria, both as the sovereign of a mighty empire and as a woman who has borne herself with dignity through a long reign and set an example of a noble, devoted, pure, and useful life."

Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock expressed his sympathy as follows:

"The American people will deeply and sincerely sympathize with their kinsmen across the sea in their irreparable loss of a devoted sovereign, whose pure and gracious personality and illustrious reign have so abundantly blessed the people of her great dominion, and which have contributed so effectively to Christian civilization in every quarter of the world."

Postmaster General Smith expressed his sympathy in the following statement:

"She has been a model Queen and a model woman, and her death will be a source of sorrow throughout the world."

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson said:

"She has been a good, exemplary Christian woman, and one of the wisest rulers Great Britain has had."

AT THE BRITISH EMBASSY.

The announcement of the death of Queen Victoria was received with universal sorrow at the many embassies and legations in Washington, and nowhere was the sentiment of bereavement more poignantly felt than at the British Embassy. Lord Pauncefote had expected that the end could not be long deferred, and had been prepared for the sad intelligence that the Queen was no more. But it came to him almost as a personal affliction, for it was only a few months ago that he was the guest of the Queen at Osborne, when she elevated him to the Peerage. Aside from this, her Majesty had frequently shown most gracious consideration to the Ambassador and Lady Pauncefote, inviting them to Windsor and to Osborne for visits which were something more than brief official calls.

On the last occasion when Lord Pauncefote saw the Queen at Osborne, she was in excellent health, considering her years, her mental faculties keen and observant. She drove about the palace grounds and conversed freely and pleasantly with the circle of friends gathered about her, which included, besides Lord and Lady Pauncefote, Prince Christian, and a number of the members of the royal family.

The Foreign Office has kept the Embassy advised by cable of the Queen's condition, and from these dispatches it became evident some days ago that the Queen's death was near at hand. The Ambassador and the members of his family, as well as the large circle of officials about him, are keenly affected by the event, for to each one of them the Queen had been something more than a monarch, and had been regarded as a gentle superior and friend.

Official business proceeds as usual, for in the eye of the law the national existence is in no wise interrupted by the death of the Sovereign. But throughout the Embassy, and particularly in the private quarters of the Ambassador, a sense of deep gloom prevails. About the Embassy there are many personal mementos of devotion to the Queen. At the head of the main staircase hangs a superb oil portrait showing her Majesty soon after her coronation, young, radiant, and beautiful. It is by Sir George Hayter, Court Painter during the early days of the Victorian reign, and is a companion piece to that in the Grand Corridor at Windsor Palace. In the Ambassador's library hangs another portrait of the Queen, showing her with the royal diadem on her brow.

The complexities of the occasion forbid Lord Pauncefote to publicly speak at this time, but in his large circle of friends he has expressed his heartfelt sorrow. Among the British officials there is but one view upon the reign of Victoria. They look upon it as transcending in importance the Elizabethan or other eras, and as being more fraught with great achievements than any epoch in English history. But the personal character of the Queen attracts as much respect and tribute as the glories of her reign.

It is too early to say what official tribute the British Embassy will pay to the dead Sovereign. These formalities must await the determination of the new King and his Ministers. It is probable that the King will reissue to Lord Pauncefote the credentials of Ambassador to the United States, and the Foreign Office will announce that the period of mourning is to be. Whether there will be commemorative exercises, similar to those held in Washington after the death of the Empress of Austria and of the King of Italy, will depend upon the instructions issued from London. In any event, Lord Pauncefote and those about him are withdrawn for some time from participation in the social and official affairs at the capital.

The German Embassy shares in the universal sorrow, and there is an added sentiment of bereavement in the fact that Emperor William is the grandson of the dead Queen. The German Ambassador, Dr. von Holleben, gives expression to his deep grief, and pays a tribute of respect and admiration for the noble life and the illustrious reign of the departed Queen.

At the French Embassy, M. Cambon, the Ambassador, spoke of the exemplary qualities of the Queen and her service to her country. M. Cambon's brother, Paul Cambon, is the French Ambassador at London, and in this capacity has had frequent audiences with the Queen, and has had opportunity to learn the gentleness and dignity of her character.

Count Cassini, the Russian Ambassador, spoke in the same vein of the noble qualities of the Queen. Similar expressions were made by the Duke de Arcos, the Spanish Minister; Minister Wu of China, Minister Takahira of Japan, and others. Indeed, the sentiments of mingled grief and admiration were universal and sincere. All the Ambassadors, Ministers, and their suites took early occasion, after receiving word of the Queen's death, to call at the British Embassy and leave their cards. Lord Pauncefote saw only a few of his most intimate associates, and received from them personal expressions of condolence.

ACTION IN OTHER CITIES.

Flags at Half Mast — Arrangements for Memorial Services.

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—A special service in honor of the memory of Queen Victoria will be held at All Saints' Cathedral, in this city, the leading church of the Episcopal diocese of Albany. The Right Rev. William Croswell Doane, when he learned of the death of the Queen, made this announcement:

"Mindful of the many people of English descent living in Albany, and convinced of the universal sympathy of all our citizens in the great sorrow of the death of the Queen of England, the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral of All Saints unite with the Bishop in appointing a solemn service of memorial in the cathedral, of which notice will be given when the day is determined. It is the intention of the authorities of the cathedral that the service shall be representative, so far as the clergy go, of all the religious bodies, of any societies specially affiliated with England, and of all citizens of Albany who desire to unite in the commemoration of a noble life."

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—Elaborate memorial services in honor of Great Britain's dead Queen will be held in Chicago by former Britons. Representative Chicago Englishmen, Irishmen, and Scotchmen, together with Canadians and other former subjects of the late sovereign, met this afternoon and arranged for a mass meeting to-morrow, at which plans for the memorial services will be adopted. Local representatives of foreign Governments presented themselves at the British Consulate this afternoon and tendered formal expressions of sympathy.

BOSTON, Jan. 22.—When the news of the Queen's death was received this afternoon a number of business houses displayed flags at half mast. Many of the vessels in the harbor also displayed colors, running up their ensign, streamers, and bunting half way on their staffs, fore and aft.

Immediately on receiving word of the death of the Queen, Mayor Hart instructed the City Messenger to have the flag on City Hall placed at half mast.

When the House of Representatives was opened this afternoon Chaplain Waldron referred feelingly to the death of the Queen and prayed for the proper guidance of the English Nation.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Jan. 22.—When Charleston was stricken by the earthquake in 1886 Queen Victoria promptly cabled a message of sympathy, and an autograph copy of the message is now among the archives of the city. To-night the City Counsel authorized the Mayor to send a message of condolence to the King on the death of the Queen.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 22.—Great sorrow was expressed among all classes here to-day at the death of the Queen. F. Stanley Young, the British Vice Consul in Kansas City, called for a meeting of British residents and others to arrange a memorial service.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Jan. 22.—The Senate to-day adopted the following resolution:

"That when the Senate adjourns it do so out of respect to the memory of Victoria I., late Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, and Empress of India, and as a mark of sympathy with that sentiment, which in the presence of her death makes all the world kin."

OLYMPIA, Washington, Jan. 22.—The Washington Legislature to-day passed a concurrent resolution of respect to the memory of the Queen.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 22.—The House to-day adopted a motion to adjourn out of respect to the memory of Queen Victoria.

MR. HARRISON'S TRIBUTE.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 22.—When notified of the Queen's death to-day, ex-President Harrison said:

"No other death could have excited so general a sorrow. There are persons in every nation, other than Great Britain, whose death would more profoundly move the people of that nation, but Queen Victoria's death will bring real sadness to the hearts of more men and women than any other. The drumbeat did not define her dominions; the union jack was not the symbol of her larger empire. More hearts pulsated with love for her, and more knees bowed before her queenly personality than before the Queen of Great Britain. 'God Save the Queen' had become well-nigh a universal anthem.

"Heredity does not stay our quest for he real man or woman upon whose head a crown has fallen. Indeed, that has come to be the way of the world. The sovereign whose life is not clean, noble, sympathetic, whose personal character is below the best thought of his people is not loved, and the powers of an unloved King or Queen are shorn, however the law may run. Queen Victoria's power was larger than the law.

"I do not care to speculate as to the effect of the Queen's death upon European politics further than to say that a mighty influence on the side of peace has been lost. The British people will find it hard to adjust their minds and hearts to a succession. There will be a disposition to make the pause unusually long after the first member of the proclamation 'The Queen is dead,' but the other member will follow, and 'Long live the King' will be spoken resolutely by Britons everywhere.

"The new sovereign will be loyally supported in his constitutional prerogatives, and will not be denied an opportunity to win that dominion over the hearts of his people which they yielded to his mother."

What W. J. Bryan Said.

Special to The New York Times.

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 22.—Among the many expressions of sympathy and regret heard here, occasioned by the death of Queen Victoria, is the following from W. J. Bryan, who said:

"The death of Queen Victoria will be regretted in all lands. Her personal virtues won for her the love of her subjects and the respect of the world. Her successor will find it difficult to fill her place in public esteem."

Cardinal Gibbons Sorrowful.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 22.—Cardinal Gibbons, upon being informed of the death of Queen Victoria, plainly showed in face and manner that the intelligence caused him profound sorrow. "The death of Queen Victoria," said his Eminence, after a brief pause, "will send a thrill of sorrow throughout the world, not only because of the almost universal diffusion of the British Empire, but still more because of the domestic virtues of the woman whose long and eventful reign will be ever memorable in the annals of England and whose character will command the love of her subjects and the admiration of the civilized world."

EDWARD VII. LOSES A SUBJECT.

Robert Dawson of Chicago Renounced Allegiance Yesterday.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—To Robert Dawson belongs the distinction of being the first man of Chicago to declare his intention of renouncing allegiance to King Edward VII. of England.

The news of Queen Victoria's death had hardly reached here when Dawson filed a declaration of his intention to become a citizen of the United States. He appeared in the office of the Clerk of the Cook County Circuit Court shortly after noon and inquired for the naturalization clerk. When asked to what Prince, King, or potentate he owed allegiance, he responded, emphatically, "The King of Great Britain."

STOPPED IN MIDDLE OF HIS OATH.

News of Queen's Death Prevented Naturalization of British Subject.

An unusual incident marked the proceedings yesterday in the Naturalization Bureau in the Court House. Henry Zimmer, a British subject, was in the act of forswearing his allegiance to the Queen of England before Chief Clerk Loos, when another clerk rushed in and announced the death of the Queen.

Clerk Loos had just reached the part of the oath in which the person being naturalized promises to forswear allegiance to all foreign powers and potentates, and especially to the Queen of England, when the announcement of the Queen's death was made.

The words making Mr. Zimmer an American citizen had not been pronounced. There was a hasty consultation among the officials of the Naturalization Bureau, the upshot of which was that Chief Clerk Loos decided that he would not naturalize any more British subjects until the news of the Queen's death had officially been confirmed and her successor to the throne of England named officially.

Mr. Zimmer was disappointed at the turn affairs had taken, but left the building with the promise to return as soon as the throne of England had been filled.

TRIBUTE OF NEW YORK SCOTS.

Queen's Death Casts Gloom Over Their Annual Burns Celebration.

The death of Queen Victoria cast a gloom over the thirteenth annual Burns celebration of the New York Scottish Society, which was held at Assembly Hall, 156 Fifth Avenue, last night. There were about 500 members of the society present. The event of the evening was the speech of the Rev. Donald Sage Mackay of the Collegiate Reformed Church, on the death of Queen Victoria. When the speaker finished there were not a few wet eyes in the hall. Dr. Mackay said:

"It cannot be out of place to say a few words in reference to that common sorrow which touches all our hearts to-night—the death of Queen Victoria in the fullness of her years and amid the love and devotion of her people and with the respect of the whole world.

"Queen Victoria leaves behind her a record of high duty nobly done. The dignity of her womanhood, more than the dignity of her position, has made the title of Queen a title of respect wherever her name is spoken. The womanliness of the Queen made possible the queenliness of the woman. In that fierce light which beats upon a throne she has stood all these years as one whom no slander could touch and no calumny harm. To-night as we express here a common sympathy with her children and her children's children, we are glad to think of her as one who held the citadel of a pure womanhood sacred and inviolate. She is enthroned in the memory of her people, but because of her greatness in the empire of the State, but because of her greatness in the empire of the home."

The programme for the evening consisted of Scotch ballads and organ numbers, a sword dance and a Highland fling, and an oration on Robert Burns. Miss Jessie N. Maclachlan, the Scotch soprano, made her first appearance in this city and was enthusiastically received.

NEW YORK'S MOURNING FOR QUEEN VICTORIA

Trinity Bell Tolls and Flags Are Hung at Half Mast.

Messages of Condolence Sent to the Prince of Wales and Lord Salisbury —Societies to Take Action.

The tolling of the bell of Trinity Church and the lowering to half mast of flags on many buildings apprised New Yorkers shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon that Queen Victoria had passed away.

The first announcement of the Queen's death was received here shortly before 1 o'clock, and was confirmed by additional dispatches. William C. Broughton, sexton of Trinity Church, received early a private cable from London and immediately began tolling the bell.

The news spread rapidly throughout the city. The newspaper extras were selling on the streets at 1:30, and the newsboys did a rushing trade. On every street corner groups formed discussing the tidings, and on all sides were heard expressions of sorrow and praise for the departed Queen. Large crowds gathered in front of the newspaper offices' bulletin boards until late in the evening.

Immediately upon receipt of the news from London the flag on the Commercial Cable building, opposite the City Hall, was lowered to half mast, and very soon the same was done on almost every building on Broadway.

At 2:40 P. M. a cable dispatch was received at the British Consulate, 17 State Street, confirming the report of the Queen's death. It was not official confirmation, which would come through the Embassy at Washington, but it was of such a nature as to remove all doubt in the mind of the Consul General, Sir Percy Sanderson, who at once ordered the British union jack hoisted at half mast, and the Consulate closed, and the following notice posted on the doors:

In consequence of the death of Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria this Consulate General is closed.

The British Consulate will remain closed except for important business. A book was opened yesterday for callers to inscribe their names.

The flag of the Russian Consulate, which is in the same building, was at once put at half-mast, and the National flags of Austria-Hungary, Mexico, France, Germany, Italy, Sweden, and many other countries were unfurled to the breezes at half-mast directly the news was heard at the respective Consulates.

The Earl of Dregheda, who is at the Cambridge Hotel, was much affected by the news. At other hotels where visiting Englishmen are guests the latter manifested great sorrow.

IN THE FINANCIAL DISTRICTS.

The news was received in Wall Street at 1:14 P. M. It was at once followed by a general display of flags at half-mast; until the street looked like a continuous line of waving bunting right down to the East River. In the insurance and underwriting districts where British interests are especially prominent almost every building displayed one or more English flags at half-mast.

A big royal standard was suspended from the windows of the Royal Insurance Company of London, and flags at half mast were also exhibited on the following buildings: North British and Mercantile, Commercial Union of London, Liverpool and London and Globe, Anglo-American, J. P. Morgan & Co., H. B. Hollins & Co., Manhattan Trust Company, Baring, Magoun & Co., Central National Bank, Hanover National Bank, Western National Bank, the United Bank, the Equitable Life Insurance Building, the Maritime Exchange, the Bowling Green Building, the Battery Park Building, the Chesebrough Building, and scores of other skyscrapers.

Some comment was heard because the flag on the City Hall was not placed at half staff. It had been reported that this was done in keeping with the Mayor's order, but this was denied. It was said on the other hand, that, no official notice of the death had been received until the time flags are usually taken in for the night, and that the flag would be placed at half mast to-day.

The news had no perceptible effect on the stock market quotations, other than a trifling halt.

It seemed to be the opinion of the more prominent financiers that the Queen's death would work very little if any change in the policy of the British Empire.

Cecil Baring, head of the banking house of Baring, Magoun & Co., and a member of the Baring family of London, said that in his opinion affairs in the British Empire would go along without the slightest hitch. He looked for no change of policy, thought that the present campaign in South Africa would be continued to a successful end, and that the value of good securities would be little affected.

Up town most of the well-known hotels had their flags at half-mast, and before dark a large number of the leading business places up town also had their flags at half-mast. Arnold, Constable & Co. and the Constable Building were among the first places to be decorated. Altman, Son & Co. at Eighteenth Street and Broadway, had a large British flag and half a dozen American flags all at half-mast. Among other buildings where the usual tribute of sorrow was paid were Tiffany's, Steinway's, and the University Building, in Washington Square.

Many of the vessels in the harbor, irrespective of nationality, also showed the sign of respect to the memory of the Queen by lowering their ensigns. For miles along the Brooklyn shore and along the New York side of the East River every English ship had her ensign at half-mast.

The big British steamship companies are making arrangements to drape their Broadway offices and piers, and yesterday orders were telephoned to lower the ensigns on several docks. The big vessels of the Campania of the Cunard Line and the Vaderland and the Southwark of the Red Star Line each lowered its ensign, also the Manitou of the Atlantic Transport Line. The Patricia of the Holland-America Line and the cruising yacht of the Hamburg-American Line paid a similar tribute.

At a meeting of the Empire State Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, held at the rooms of the Aldine Association, the following was adopted and cabled to the American Ambassador at London:

The Empire State Society Sons of the American Revolution learns with sorrow the death of her gracious Majesty, Victoria, Queen of Great Britain and Empress of India. She has left a crown on earth for one more glorious in heaven. Her character remains an example to the world for all time.

EDWIN VAN D. GAZZAM, Secretary.

The Canadian Society of New York sent the following message to the Marquis of Salisbury:

Jan. 22, 1901.

To the Marquis of Salisbury, London, England:

The Canadian Society of New York sends loving sympathy to family of our late gracious Queen. BARTINDALE, President.

The New York branch of the Salvation Army sent a message of condolence to the Prince of Wales. It read:

Jan. 21, 1901.

His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, Osborne:

On behalf of American Salvationists we assure your Royal Highness and members of royal family of our profoundest sympathy and prayers. FREDERICK AND EMMA BOOTH TUCKER.

The following reply was received:

Osborne Govt. Jan. 22, 1901.

Frederick Booth Tucker, American Salvationists, 123 West Fourteenth Street, New York:

Prince of Wales thanks the American Salvationists for telegram of sympathy.

The Associated Press received the following telegram from Alfred Harmsworth, editor of The London Daily Mail:

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Jan. 22.—May I be allowed to convey to the American newspapers my fraternal congratulations on the magnificent enterprise and broad spirit with which they have handled the passing of our lamented Queen.

ALFRED HARMSWORTH,
Editor London Daily Mail.

Sir Percy Sanderson, British Consul General, issued an announcement last night that all British subjects resident in the city are invited to attend a meeting to be held at the Down-Town Association, 60 Pine Street, to-morrow at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, to take suitable action on the death of the Queen.

Notices were sent out last night for a special meeting of the St. Andrew's Society, to take notice of the death of the Queen. Andrew Carnegie, the society's President, has offered the use of Carnegie Hall for the purpose, but it was thought that a larger attendance would be attracted if the meeting were held down town. The dinner given annually by the society in honor of the birthday of Robert Burns has been postponed. It had been arranged for Friday.

At the regular annual business meeting of the St. George's Society, to be held at Delmonico's to-night, appropriate action will be taken in relation to the passing of the Queen and the accession of the King.

G. G. Ward, President, called yesterday afternoon upon the British Consul General and discussed plans for a union memorial meeting of all the local societies composed of British citizens. This meeting will probably be held in Trinity Church.

St. David's Society will also hold a special meeting to adopt resolutions on the Queen's death. The time and place of meeting will probably be announced to-day by Julien T. Davies, its President.

Dr. John A. Irwin, President of the British Schools and Universities Club, issued yesterday a call to members for a memorial service on Sunday. It will probably take place in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, the Rev. D. Parker Morgan, rector.

OPINIONS OF THE QUEEN.

Bishop Potter spoke on the Queen as follows:

"In my opinion, there has been no political bond that has bound together the British Empire with more power, if as much, as the bond of personal devotion to this beautiful character and personality. I was much struck, on my recent trip around the world, to observe the extent to which this extreme personal devotion was noticeable. People who had never seen the Queen, had never even been in England, and never expected to go there, appeared to feel the same personal devotion as Englishmen themselves. The attraction and cohesive force of this sentiment upon colonial life was very remarkable."

Bishop Hartzell said:

"The death of Queen Victoria removes from the midst of men a most exalted personality. Her influence for good, as wife, mother, and Queen, has been wonderful, and history will accord to her a first place as a leader and benefactor of the race."

Charles D. Pierce, Consul General of the Orange State and Treasurer of the Boer Relief Fund in this country, observed that the Queen, "who was possessed in the highest degree of those Christian sentiments that have underlain the whole course of her reign," was forced into the war "by the malign influences of a Chamberlain and a Milner, who, by systematic misrepresentation, kept the truth from her." the Boers he said: "They have always believed that the Queen was their friend."

NO INSURANCE ON QUEEN HERE.

Report that She Had Interests in New York Real Estate Discredited.

Insurance companies of this country are by many supposed to have carried large risks dependent on the life of Queen Victoria. According to officials of the three largest insurance companies in this city that supposition is wrong.

Richard A. McCurdy, President of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, said last night that his company carried no insurance risk dependent on the life of the Queen.

"Queen Victoria," said Mr. McCurdy, "has not been an insurable risk for many years on account of her age and the condition of her health. If there is any insurance on her life it must be of old standing and in British companies. At the time of the Queen's jubilee many policies were taken out by tradesmen and business men of England, who had an interest in the Queen's survival beyond that date because of the loss which her death before that time would have caused them. We took a large amount of these risks, but, fortunately for us, the Queen survived beyond the term of their expiration—they were only for a few months—and the money paid in was so much gain to us."

James H. Hyde, a Director in the Equitable Life Assurance Company, and that his company does not insure the lives of sovereigns on account of their liability of being assassinated.

John A. McCall, President of the New York Life Insurance Company, said that the Queen was not insured in his company, and that the company never received an application for such insurance from any one, here or abroad.

The report that the Queen had large interests in real estate in this city was discredited by all these officials. One of them said:

"The reasons, such as fear of revolutions, &c., which might prompt other monarchs to invest part of their money at least outside of their own country would not hold good in the case of England, with its great stability, largely due to its insular pride."

News Broken to Empress Frederick.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—"The news of her mother's death was tenderly broken to Dowager Empress Frederick late this evening," says a dispatch to The Daily Mail from Frankfort. "It was a terrible shock, but the Empress is bearing up bravely. The trials of the last few days, however, have exercised a most prejudicial effect upon her health, which causes serious anxiety."

CHILD HURT UNDER A CAR.

Uninjured by Wheels, She Was Burned by the Electric Fluid.

Special to The New York Times.

VICKSBURG, Miss., Jan. 22.—Emma Marshall, the pretty little daughter of Policeman Marshall, was fatally injured late this afternoon in a peculiar manner by an electric car, and the accident also came very near resulting in the death of Motorman Williams. The child was playing in the street, and ran in front of Williams's car. She was knocked down and the car passed half way over her before Williams succeeded in stopping it. He, thinking the girl had been crushed, started to reverse his controller to back the car off the body.

Spectators, who saw that the child was alive and safe so long as the car remained standing, yelled to Williams not to move, but he misunderstood them, evidently thinking they were about to attack him for killing the child, and turned on all the power. There was a flash, a tongue of blue flame came out from under the car, and the little girl was burned almost beyond recognition.

POWER FROM NIAGARA FALLS.

Its Use Will Be a Feature at the Pan-American Exposition.

Special to The New York Times.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Jan. 22.—In the central station of the Niagara Falls Power Company there are now ten huge dynamos in operation, each one of which generates 5,000 horse power, which is said to be the largest amount of electricity generated under a single roof in the world. Ground for this remarkable power plant was broken on Oct. 4, 1890.

When the plan of the Pan-American Exposition was conceived it was quickly recognized that the presence of Niagara electrical energy would be a wonderful factor in the success of the exposition, and as the plans of the exposition have been developed the value of the transmitted force from Niagara has become so pronounced in connection with the Pan-American Exposition that its application and use in various ways are expected to be a leading feature of the exposition.

GUGGENHEIMS IN THE TRUST.

Last of the Smelter Plants Will Be Transferred Soon.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Col., Jan. 22.—Maurice Untermyer of New York, one of the attorneys of the American Smelting Company, said today that the Guggenheim family will in the future practically have charge of the Smelter Trust.

The Guggenheim plants remained independent for months after the trust was formed. When they came in it was on a basis of $20,000,000 for their different works at Perth Amboy, N. J.; Pueblo, and Monterey, Mexico, and with the understanding that the Guggenheim family was to be consulted in all the business and plans of the combine. Samuel Guggenheim was made Chairman of the Executive Board of the American Smelting Company, which virtually places him at the head of the concern.

Mr. Untermyer is on his way to Mexico to close up the transfer of the Monterey smelters to the trust.

PAPER MILLS IN THE WEST.

New Company Will Acquire Property of Denver Paper Company.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Col., Jan. 22.—The Federal Court to-day discharged the receiver of the Denver Paper Company and authorized the transfer of the property to the Rocky Mountain Paper Company, capitalized at $1,350,000, which will be incorporated at once. The property includes the Denver Mill and the Platte River Mill, both near Denver. The capacity of the mills will be doubled.

Contracts have been made through the President of the new company, Thomas H. Savery, who is also Vice President of the Pusey & Jones Company of Wilmington, Del., manufacturers of paper machinery, to equip the consolidated mills with whatever may be required to make them equal to the most advanced and representative plants in the East. Three carloads of new machinery will be set up in the next two weeks.

KING OF GREAT BRITAIN

Personal Character of Victoria's Son and Successor.

Popular with All Classes, He Has Refrained from Politics—His Affability and Tact.

The new King of England comes to the throne of Great Britain and Ireland, its honors and responsibilities, in the third month of the sixtieth year of his rather uneventful and yet somewhat spectacular life. For forty years he has performed the public and spectacular duties of a sovereign. He steps to the throne rather with the reputation of a man of the world than that of a statesman and politician.

A tactful, courteous man, he takes up his sceptre with the reputation of a popular idol of the people, such as would not have been attached to him had he been called on to assume authority a score of years ago. A rather plentiful sowing of the wild oats that young noblemen think necessary had then aroused something of opposition to him. But that reputation he has, to a certain extent, lived down, and since the serious illness of 1871, that threatened his life, he has become, in fact, the first gentleman of England, if not of Europe.

Tactfulness may be called the chief characteristic of Great Britain's new sovereign. He has possessed it to such degree that even on his taking up the duties of his sovereignty it is very doubtful if the most intimate advisers of the late Queen know what is his politics, or if he has any for that matter, so close-mouthed has he been. Never by any public pronouncement has he permitted his future subjects to know what were his views on the various political questions that agitated them. Yet he has managed to avoid offense to any of the factions in which the English nation is divided.

He has by the same policy avoided any complications in international politics, and, save for the marked preference he has shown for the society of Americans, his preferences in international affairs are hardly more than to be guessed at. Certainly there is no public record on which to base an assertion that he favors this or that policy. So he ascends the throne a man bound to no expressed policy, with hands unfettered, and free to act as he thinks best for the good of the great nation he is called on to rule. He is thus a unique personage.

There has been no Marlborough House clique, politically, and so, as far as is known publicly at least, he has no friends to reward or enemies to punish. Yet he is said to be a man of pronounced political views and with a well-defined policy that he has quietly outlined while patiently awaiting the event that has now called him to the throne.

Born at Buckingham Palace Nov. 9, 1841, the eldest son of Victoria and Albert started out in life burdened with fewer names than it is usually the fate of such royal personages to bear, as he was named only Albert Edward. Less than a month after his birth he was by patent created Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester. To these titles were afterward added a string of a score or so. Educated by private tutors on a plan outlined by his father, he later studied for a time at Edinburgh and later at Christ Church, Oxford, and at Cambridge as well.

Then followed a period of travel in Europe and the East, followed by the trip to Canada and America in 1860. This latter was undertaken under the guidance of the Duke of Newcastle at the instance of the Prince Consort, who did not altogether approve of the sort of life the heir to the throne was living, nor the companions he sought among the gilded youth of the time.

That tour was, in fact, a triumphant one for the lad. His receptions in Canada and this country alike were enthusiastic in the extreme. Chicago, Washington, Richmond, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, and Portland, Me., alike extended to him a most cordial welcome. He was constantly feasted and feted: President Buchanan and his official family made him more than welcome. The like courtesies extended elsewhere laid the foundation for the liking he always entertained for Americans.

After this trip here he made a tour of Germany, Italy, and the Holy Land in 1862, with Dean Stanley as his mentor. A year later he was married to Alexandra, daughter of the Danish Prince, who some months later became King Christian IX. On her mother's side Alexandra was descended from George II. of England, so that she was related to him. The wedding ceremony was performed in St. George's Chapel, Windsor, March 10, 1863.

The year following his marriage the Prince visited Denmark, Sweden, and Russia. Still later there were trips to Egypt, Turkey, the Holy Land, Greece, and other Mediterranean countries. The culmination of his experiences as a traveler was the trip to India in 1875-6, for which Parliament voted a grant of £60,000. This was made on the warship Serapis, and is said to have cost the nation upward of £200,000 before all the bills were settled.

Six children were born to the Prince of Wales, four of whom are still living, the eldest, and heir to the throne of his father, being George Frederick Ernest Albert, Duke of York, and father of four children, three sons and a daughter. Of the living children of the Prince are the Duchess of Fife; Maud, wife of Prince Charles of Denmark, and the unmarried Princess Victoria. His eldest son, the Duke of Clarence and Avondale, died shortly after his betrothal to Princess Mary of Teck, who later married the Duke of York. The youngest child of the Prince, also a son, died shortly after its birth. As royal marriages go, the marriage of the Prince was considered a happy one, and the royal pair have appeared in public as a satisfied pair, whatever their private life may have been.

Twice since he has been the apparent heir to the throne have fears been entertained that the Prince would not live to assume his sovereign rights. The first time was in 1871, when he had a severe attack of typhoid fever. The Prince was removed to his home, at Sandringham, and there, after a long illness, recovered his health and strength. In July, 1898, while on a visit to Baron Ferdinand Rothschild at Weddestor Manor, he slipped on the stairs and fell, breaking his knee-cap. Other complications ensuing, he was confined to his house for several weeks, and then England feared that he would not outlive his injuries.

He was as a lover of sports that the Prince came nearest to the hearts of the mass of his people. He has been a constant attendant at the sports of the colleges, a lover of cricket and boating, as well as of athletics. Shooting was ever his favorite sport, and amounted almost to a passion with him. For racing he had a penchant, and for years he has maintained a racing stable, having twice won the Derby. His yachting successes were mostly with the Britannia. As a young man he was a good rider, but increasing weight compelled him to abandon the saddle. He drives some, but is not an enthusiast.

Cards were, and probably are still, the favorite game of the new sovereign. Fondness for the pasteboards and playing for high stakes have made trouble for Albert Edward on many occasions. Chief of these, perhaps, was the Tranby Croft baccarat scandal, in which were involved Sir Gordon Cumming, Mrs. Wilson, and Lady Brooke—"the babbling Brooke"—she was called after it. This brought the Prince into court and made no end of talk, both in England and here, in 1889. Only the shrewdness of the Duchess of Devonshire prevented an almost as bad scandal from being made public property as it was private chatter in the set in which the Prince and his friends moved.

In this George Russell, the private secretary of the Prince previous to the installation of Sir Francis Knollys, was implicated and later Russell's operations became so flagrant that he was obliged to leave England and was expelled from the clubs to which he belonged. It was his unwillingness to stop playing baccarat during Goodwood race week that led to a quarrel between the Prince and the Duke of Richmond, one of the most trusted advisers of the Queen. The Duke found the Prince and his party playing baccarat for high stakes, so he claimed, after the Prince had given him his word there should be no card playing in the house.

There was a violent scene, and only by the greatest of tact was a scandal prevented. Later the Prince refused an invitation to Welbeck Abbey, going instead to the house of Willie James, an Australian millionaire, with his party, while the Duke of York and his friends were entertained at Welbeck Abbey. This led to a social upheaval and gossip that lasted a whole season. It was also asserted that the Queen would not allow the Prince to occupy Windsor during Ascot Week because he insisted on baccarat while the races were the attraction there. So set was the Prince on his card games that he took a private cottage there for the week instead of occupying Windsor without the cards.

The income of the Prince has been set at £100,000 per annum, of which amount £40,000 came from the settlement made for him at the time of his marriage. The balance came from the Duchy of Cornwall, and aggregated a trifle more than £60,000 per annum.

Frank, loyal, and warm-hearted, and almost affectionate, his friends say, the Prince has ever been. Those who have had the pleasure of his association say the same of him. He was emphatically of the "good-fellow" sort—simple, courteous, but a stickler for the courtesy and deference his position as heir to the throne demanded. For one occupying the position he has for so many years, he was approachable, good-natured, and affable, so long as those who met him remembered his prerogatives, used Sir whenever they spoke to him, and remembered never to speak until spoken to or failed to make topics instead of allowing him to do the suggesting.

The Prince was an honorary officer of so many military corps in Europe that his uniforms alone constituted a formidable wardrobe. Yet he had so little liking for display in this direction that he never wore them except on occasions when it was absolutely necessary for him to do so. Taken all in all, an Englishman would sum him up as being "not at all a bad sort."

The new King is a habitual theatregoer, and, though the death of his brother Alfred, Duke of Edinburgh and Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, last Summer, and the enforced period of mourning in the Court, kept him away from the playhouses more than four months, some enterprising London chronicler estimates that he went to the theatre no fewer than forty-eight times in the year 1900.

As Prince of Wales, however, he never dabbled in theatricals and never became so closely allied with persons of the theatre as his illustrious predecessor who bore that title, and made it glitter at the beginning of the nineteenth century.

Albert Edward has presided at banquets of the Royal General Theatrical Fund and other formal theatrical gatherings, and has met all the leaders of the English stage in his time. In short, he has cared for the theatre, but he has not meddled with it or ever posed as its patron. He has shown only the Englishman's traditional liking for "the play" as an entertainment.

With his two nephews, William of Germany and Nicholas of Russia, he will now become one of a trio that will rule the greater part of Europe. How he will get on with them is the problem that the world will now patiently wait to see solved.

DOELGER'S LIVELY ENCOUNTER.

Claims Men Were Trying to Rob Him, but They Wait Until He Summons the Police.

A telephone message received by Sergt. Walsh of the East Fifty-first Street Station shortly after 11 o'clock last night informed him that burglars were in the building at 234 East Fifty-fifth Street.

Capt. Lantry was in the station at the time. He ordered the patrol wagon to be made ready, and with Detectives McLaughlin and Roach and several policemen started for the place. They found that the building was occupied as the office of Joseph Doelger & Sons, brewers. A bright light was burning in the front office.

The building was surrounded. Some of the policemen tried to enter by the front door, but found it locked. Capt. Lantry and Detective McLaughlin went to the rear of the building through a hallway and were making an entrance through a window, when Peter Stobel, a watchman, who was on the inside, opened the front door, allowing the policemen to enter. In the meantime Capt. Lantry and the detective had entered a rear office. Lying on the floor they saw two well-dressed men. Standing over them, holding a Cuban machete in his hands, ready to strike the men, was Joseph Doelger, Jr.

When Capt. Lantry and several of the policemen who had entered by the front entrance approached Doelger dropped the machete, and fell into a chair prostrate. The police took the men to the station, where they described themselves as William Miller, twenty-seven years old, clerk in a broker's office and living at 323 East Seventy-second Street, and William Brown, twenty-five years old, a clerk, living at 307 East Seventy-sixth Street.

Doelger told the police that he had met the men on the street and had invited them into the office. He fell asleep and awoke in time, he said, to see the men going through his pockets. Doelger alleges the men took between $4 and $6 from him.

The prisoners denied the charge, saying that Doelger had been out drinking with them, and that soon after entering the office he fell asleep. Without any cause, they assert, Doelger jumped to the telephone and told the police that he was being robbed. Miller and Brown were locked up, charged with larceny.

TAX MEASURE AIMED AGAINST THE CITY

Bill Introduced Relating to Croton Aqueduct Structures.

Under It New York Would Be Called Upon to Pay Taxes on $10,000,000 Worth of Property.

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—Assemblyman Everett's bill to allow counties to tax the structures on the line of the Croton Aqueduct, in addition to the land, as introduced to-day, is looked upon to-night as one of the biggest bills of the session. It means, it is said, that New York City will have to pay a tax on $2,340,000 worth of property in Putnam County alone that now escapes, and on about three times that amount in Westchester County. Mr. Everett admits that the bill is for that purpose, and says he believes he can pass it.

A companion bill introduced by Mr. Everett repeals the act of 1866 regulating taxes on lands taken or to be taken for the Croton Aqueduct. Mr. Everett says in explanation:

"The City of New York has acquired vast areas of property in the Counties of Westchester and Putnam. In the County of Putnam some 7,000 acres, and in Westchester some 15,000 acres. These lands are situated in the Croton basin.

"In the County of Putnam the property is situated in the four easterly towns—Southeast, Carmel, Kent, and Patterson. In three of these towns the city has constructed storage reservoirs. In Southeast there are two, one known as the Drewville Reservoir and the other as Double Reservoir I. In Carmel there is a large reservoir, also two structures in Kent. The erection of these structures adds to the intrinsic value of the property which has been acquired, and makes it useful and valuable for the purpose for which it was acquired and is used. If the structures were not there, there would be no storage reservoirs.

"In the County of Putnam the superstructures come to the enormous sum of $2,555,000. The total assessment of the city's real estate is about $215,000.

"In 1866 the City of New York prepared to escape its fair proportion of taxation for the property in the outlying districts which it then owned, and which it should thereafter acquire. To that end Chapter 502 of the Laws of 1866 was passed, which provided that the lands then taken, or thereafter to be taken, under existing laws, for storage, reservoirs, or other constructions necessary for the introduction and maintenance of a sufficient supply of water for the City of New York, should be assessed and taxed in the counties where located, at the value of the lands exclusive of the constructions and works necessary for the aqueduct and reservoir purposes, and providing that the constructions and the works and the capital invested should be deemed personal property and assessed in the City of New York as personal property in the same manner as the other personal property of the city might be assessed, and also providing that the assessed value of the lands should not exceed the assessed value of the lands in the immediate neighborhood. This should be repealed.

"The original provision of the tax law was just, particularly when applied to the City of New York. This city has reached out from fifty to seventy miles and acquired a vast amount of property, and is contemplating acquiring property still further removed. Unfortunately for the country and the people in the vicinity of the lands taken, the city has acquired the best and most valuable lands. They are denuded of valuable homes and dwellings and are made absolutely non-productive. After the acquisition of lands the city has erected upon the property structures of great value, which add to the value of the property, and are a source of large profit to New York. Payment is made by the issuance of bonds, to be paid by the water rents received. The city receives a profit of from $2,000,000 to $4,000,000 a year from its Croton water plant, and at the end of fifty years will own the plant without the expenditure of taxes by the residents of the city.

"The city through its charter has acquired the most valuable strips of land in the region. The value of lands in the immediate neighborhood has depreciated because it is left without water and sufficient meadow land. It is unjust that these depreciated lands should be assessed at a valuation not exceeding the value of poor lands made poorer by the municipality acquiring this exceedingly valuable property."

EX-SENATOR FORD ON TAXATION.

Says Bills Introduced Monday Are Commendable Measures.

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—Ex-Senator John Ford, the father of the franchise tax law, was about the Capitol this morning. He said that he was merely around to advance as much as he legitimately could the bill for the westerly extension of One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street in New York City. He kept a keen eye on all that was going on, however, and made the following statement:

"I notice that taxation is the predominant legislation of the session. The three bills introduced last night, following the suggestion of Gov. Odell, seem to be commendable measures, although the taxation problem is one that should be given the very gravest consideration before radical action is taken. There is a danger at all times, of course, in tinkering with taxation, to change some of the provisions of the franchise tax law, which I had the honor to assist in placing on the statute books. But although successive Legislatures may fiddle around the franchise tax law, the people of the State will find that the longer it is on the statute books the more plainly will its merits be discerned and appreciated."

ELEVATED RAILROAD TAXES.

Company's Application for Reargument Denied by Court of Appeals.

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—The Court of Appeals has denied the application of the Manhattan Elevated Railroad Company for a reargument in the appeal to have its tax reduced.

The court, in a decision lately given, cut in half the New York City Tax Commissioners' valuation. The company believes it should be lower and appealed for a reargument. The Court of Appeals fixes the assessment of the company for local taxation at $9,492,000, reducing it from $15,526,000.

United Verde Copper Company's Taxes.

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—The Court of Appeals to-day decided that the United Verde Copper Company must pay a tax on $1,440,920 to New York City for local purposes. The company was assessed on $3,000,000 and took an appeal to the Supreme Court, which reduced the amount on which the tax was to be collected to $1,440,920. The company took an appeal to the Court of Appeals, and that court to-day refused to make any further reduction.

CITIZENS' UNION INCORPORATED

Step Taken Because of the Action of District Organizations in Using a Similar Title.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 22.—The Citizens' Union of the City of New York, with principal office in New York City, filed articles of incorporation with the Secretary of State to-day. The objects stated are for "a union of the citizens of New York City, without regard to party, for the purpose of securing the honest and efficient Government of the City of New York."

The Directors are R. Fulton Cutting, Paul Fuller, John De Witt Warner, Wallace MacFarlane, Isaac N. Seligman, Gustav H. Schwab, Fielding L. Marshall, Thomas A. Fulton, and Samuel Seabury of New York City, and John W. Weed of Flushing, L. I.

Persons purporting to be the representatives of the Citizens' Union in the Sixth and Eighth Assembly Districts have filed articles of incorporation at Albany. The incorporators are repudiated by Messrs. Cutting, Fulton, and others interested in the Citizens' Union movement, and the claim has been made that those district organizations are being incorporated by politicians opposed to the Citizens' Union, with the intention of attempting to secure recognition as integral parts of that body.

To forestall any further efforts in this direction the main body of the original Citizens' Union decided to incorporate.

Will Act on Kraft Nomination.

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—The Senate Finance Committee to-day decided to report favorably to-morrow on Gov. Odell's nomination of John E. Kraft to be State Civil Service Commissioner instead of Silas W. Burt, removed.

RAMAPO CHARTER HEARING.

Messrs. Hinrichs and Lauterbach Indulge in Personalities During Argument on Repeal Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—The Ramapo Water Company was dealt some hard blows today at the hearing before the Assembly Committee on Cities upon the bill to repeal the company's charter. Fred W. Hinrichs, who was one of the delegation sent here by the Merchants' Association of New York to advocate repeal, in his address to the committee used some plain language, which provoked the resentment of Edward Lauterbach, the counsel for the company, and led to a sharp passage between the two.

"Wherever there has been an attempt made to improve the deficient water supply of Brooklyn," said Mr. Hinrichs, "this Ramapo Company seems to have stalked like a ghost, and the improvement desired by the citizens has been thwarted. I do not hesitate to say there is a strong suspicion among the citizens of Greater New York that there are men who would bring on a water famine and inflict great deprivation, and possibly suffering, upon the citizens in order that they might secure a contract which would enrich themselves."

Mr. Lauterbach retorted that such suspicions existed only in the minds of "men like Mr. Hinrichs, who doubt the honesty and are ready to impugn the motives of any man."

When Mr. Hinrichs told of how a section had been surreptitiously inserted in the charter of Greater New York which virtually tied the hands of the municipality as regards helping itself to obtain a better water supply, Mr. Lauterbach was on his feet in an instant and walked over toward Mr. Hinrichs, with angry countenance.

"Can't you conduct this hearing decently, Hinrichs?" he exclaimed. "Must you impugn the character of everybody? Do you mean to say that such men as Seth Low, Gen. Tracy, and Judge Dillon would be guilty of surreptitiously putting into the charter something which they believed had no business there and was against the interest of the city?"

Mr. Hinrichs was about to make a quick retort, when a member of the committee relieved the strained situation by breaking in with an inquiry. Quickly recovering his composure, Mr. Hinrichs said in reply to Mr. Lauterbach that, as a lawyer, Mr. Lauterbach well knew it was not impossible for some things to be slipped into a voluminous document like the New York Charter, which might not have been approved by the committee if the full purport of the section had been comprehended.

Ex-Senator Guy, who followed Mr. Hinrichs, used even stronger language than Mr. Hinrichs in characterizing the Ramapo Company.

"This company existed," said he, "for the purpose of levying tribute upon the citizens of New York City and New York State. It has selected New York City as the most fertile field of spoliation to start with, but once it has secured its tribute from New York City it will proceed to hold up the rest of the State. What this company is doing is nothing more nor less than attempted blackmail under the form of law."

Mr. Lauterbach had spoken of the Ramapo Company having rights to water sheds in two counties. Mr. Hinrichs produced a map showing by red lines the counties in which the Ramapo Company had secured options. They numbered nineteen.

Mr. Lauterbach waved Mr. Hinrichs and his map aside. "They are trying to prove, by that map," he said, "that we have a had case of smallpox, but the truth is we have only a slight case of varioloid."

The committee gave both sides two weeks in which to file briefs.

HEARINGS ON CHARTER REVISION.

Committees Are Ready to Hear Arguments on All Bills.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—The Senate and Assembly Committees on Cities are now ready to accord hearings upon any or all of the bills relating to changes in the charter of Greater New York, including the comprehensive bill recommended by the Charter Commission. Chairman Kelsey of the Assembly Committee on Cities said to-day that dates for hearings upon the charter bills would be fixed by the committee as soon as applications for hearings were received.

The general belief here is that the Governor's message accompanying the Charter Revision Commission's report will render the fight for the adoption of the commission's report as a whole hopeless. Where the Governor differs with the Charter Commission, the chances are that the Governor's suggestions will be carried out.

PROCEEDINGS IN THE LEGISLATURE.

Assembly Makes Common Law Marriage Bill a Special Order.

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—Senator P. H. McCarren of Brooklyn was present to-day for the first time this session. Senator Ellsworth presided, the Lieutenant Governor being still in New York.

Acting as the Committee of the Whole, the Senate considered the Brackett bill in relation to notaries public acting in more than one county. Senator Brackett explained the bill, stating that it makes the law applying to notaries in outside counties the same as in New York and adjacent counties. The bill was reported favorably and advanced to third reading.

Senator Brown endeavored to have another bill substituted for a fish protection measure. Senator Raines made objection, saying that it was unnecessary, and that the committee considering the first bill might report the second if it so desired. Senator Grady raised a point of order, and Senator Brown, in order to avoid fruitless discussion, he said, withdrew his motion.

A bill authorizing the City of Binghamton to borrow money to meet temporary deficiencies in its current fund and to issue its notes therefor was passed.

The proceedings in the House this morning were purely of a routine nature. Several minor bills were passed, and Mr. Weekes's bill to abolish common law marriages by providing for a written contract executed by the contracting parties, on the order of second reading, was made a special order for Tuesday next upon motion of the introducer.

Both houses adjourned early until to-morrow morning.

BILLS INTRODUCED AT ALBANY.

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—These bills were introduced in the Senate to-day:

By Mr. STEWART—Amending the law requiring Governors, Keepers, or Wardens having control of prisons, hospitals, and asylums to turn over all cadavers to medical colleges in Tioga, Tompkins, Broome, Chemung, Schuyler, Monroe, Seneca, Steuben, Wayne, and Yates and Ontario Counties.

By Mr. AUDETT—Requiring elevated railroad stations in Kings County to be provided with conveniences for the accommodation of passengers.

By Mr. SLATER—Authorizing New York's Board of Estimate to examine and audit the claim of Margaret F. Tyson as executrix of the Isaac Tyson estate, for legal fees against City of New York.

By Mr. SLATER—Amending the act in relation to the preservation of the Palisades, to incorporate Trustees of scenic and historic places, changing the name to the American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society. The bill increases the Board of Trustees from twenty-five to thirty-five, and makes the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of State, State Controller, and State Engineer ex officio members. The bill allows the board compensation for services and provides for four Vice Presidents instead of one. The Regents are authorized to co-operate for the advancement of the society's work.

By Mr. McKINNEY—Amending the game law relating to the taking of web-footed wild fowl, making the close season April 30 to Aug. 31.

By Mr. MARSHALL—Bill to reinstate George H. Walsh as patrolman in New York City.

By Mr. MARSHALL—Bill authorizing the City of New York to exchange a block of land bounded by New York Bay, First Avenue, Forty-third and Forty-fourth Streets, Brooklyn, for a block bounded by New York Bay, First Avenue, and Fifty-first and Fifty-second Streets, for the purpose of opening a street.

These bills were introduced in the Assembly:

By Mr. HENECK—Making it unlawful for street surface, steam, or other railways to charge more than a fifteen-cent fare within the limits of cities of the first class.

By Mr. MORGAN—A concurrent resolution amending the Constitution so as to provide that the debts incurred by the City of New York after Jan. 1, 1901, for water supply shall not be included in ascertaining the power of the city to become otherwise indebted.

By Mr. STEVENS—Fixing the fees of jurors at $2 for attending and serving upon the trial of an action, where sworn, and 25 cents for attending where he is not sworn.

By Mr. WAITE—Appropriating $5,000 for the care, maintenance, and repairs at the Quarantine station.

By Mr. O'MALLEY—Changing the name of the Niagara Fire Insurance Company of Erie County to the Prudential Fire Insurance Company of Buffalo.

By Mr. S. W. SMITH—Amending the insurance law relative to the tax paid by foreign fire insurance companies to Fire Departments by exempting New York City's Fire Department from paying the accustomed 10 per cent. of the amount for the support of the Firemen's Home at Hudson, and providing that all other departments shall furnish the Treasurer of the State Firemen's Association with the name of each person or corporation from whom any such tax shall have been received, and the amount paid by each, and any failure to pay said 10 per cent. shall forfeit $50 in addition to the said tax not reported.

By Mr. EGAN—Prohibiting any person to practice as a mason, builder, or general contractor in New York City, except he be duly registered by the County Clerk. In order to get a certificate he must pass an examination showing that he has passed an apprenticeship at bricklaying, masonry, or carpentry of at least four years, or is a duly certified civil engineer of at least five years' experience in the construction and erection of buildings. An examining board, to consist of a practicing architect, civil engineer, a carpenter, a mason, a builder, a practical bricklayer, and the Commissioner of Buildings, is to be appointed by the Mayor and shall receive a compensation of $25 for each session. The person registering is to pay a fee of $20.

REFORM MEASURES PENDING.

Tax Measures If Passed Are Expected to Add $9,000,000 Yearly to State's Revenues.

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—Twelve measures carrying into operation Gov. Odell's reform recommendations are now before committees of the Legislature. Three additional bills of this character will be introduced within a few days. The measures already introduced provide for the following radical changes:

1. Abolishing the State Bureau of Labor Statistics, the State Board of Mediation and Arbitration, and the office of State Factory Inspector, and creating a State Department of Labor, with an executive officer at a salary of $5,500 per year, who with deputies shall exercise the powers and functions now reposed in the departments to be abolished.

2. Abolishing the Forestry Preserve Board, as now constituted, and the Forest, Fish, and Game Commission, and creating a State Board of Forestry, to be composed of one member, to be appointed by the Governor, at an annual salary of $5,000, and two State officers, to be designated by the Governor and to serve without salary.

3. Abolishing the State Board of Charities, and creating a new board, to be composed of one member appointed by the Governor, at an annual salary of $2,500, and two State officers, to serve without salary.

4. Abolishing the State Commission of Prisons, and creating a new board, to be composed of one member appointed by the Governor, at an annual salary of $2,500, and two State officers, to serve without salary.

5. Abolishing the State Board of Health, and providing for a single-headed department, the head of which is to be appointed by the Governor and to receive an annual salary of $3,500.

6. Abolishing the office of Sealer of Weights and Measures.

7. Placing a tax of 1 per cent. on the surplus of savings banks.

8. Placing a tax of 1 per cent. on the capital stock, surplus, and reserve fund of insurance companies.

9. Placing a tax of 1¼ mills upon each dollar of the maximum capital of every stock corporation organized under State laws except banking, moneyed, and insurance companies, and imposing an additional tax of one-fifth of 1 mill upon each additional percentum greater than 8 per cent., declared as dividends. Corporations manufacturing wholly within this State are exempted from the dividend tax.

10. Reducing from one-eighth of 1 per cent. to one-fiftieth of 1 per cent. the rate of organization tax for corporations in this State.

11. Providing for a single-headed Police Commission in New York City.

12. Providing for a bi-partisan Bureau of Elections in New York City.

The following other measures are under course of preparation:

1. Placing a tax of 1 per cent. on the surplus and undivided profits of trust companies.

2. Placing a tax of 1 per cent. on the surplus of National and State banks and private bankers.

3. Providing that foreign corporations shall pay a tax of one-eighth of 1 per cent. for the privilege of transacting business in this State.

The bill placing a tax of 1 per cent. upon the surplus of the State and National banks, if it becomes a law, is expected to yield a revenue of about $2,000,000 a year. The other bill, placing a like tax on trust companies, is expected to add $1,400,000 to the State's revenues annually. The total yield of the tax measures which the administration is indirectly fathering and hopes to see passed will be in the neighborhood of $9,000,000 a year. The annual State tax levy at present is about $10,000,000. The bills, if passed, and supplemented by the economies which Gov. Odell has urged and will endeavor to have carried out, would do away with the necessity of a direct tax.

The measure to place a tax of one-eighth of 1 per cent. on foreign corporations for the privilege of doing business in this State is expected to bring into the State Treasury a vast sum of money during the first year it is in operation, as well as place those corporations in the future on the same plane with domestic corporations.

Under existing conditions, domestic corporations pay a tax of one-eighth of 1 per cent. for the privilege of incorporating under the laws of this State, whereas foreign corporations are admitted to transact business in this State by paying a tax of one-eighth of 1 per cent. on the capital actually employed in the State during its first year of operation. The proposed statute will make the foreign corporations pay one-eighth of 1 per cent. on their entire capitalization, and will therefore remove the inducement for corporations of great size and large capitalization to incorporate in other States.

The new measure will affect the American Sugar Refining Company, the American Tobacco Company, the Cigarette Trust, the Steel Trust, and other large corporations whose capitalization amounts in the aggregate to many millions of dollars.

WILL REPORT A LABOR BILL.

Committee Acts Favorably on a Measure Advocated by Gov. Odell.

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—Senator Ellsworth's bill consolidating the Factory Inspector's office, the Board of Mediation and Arbitration, and the Bureau of Labor Statistics will be reported favorably by the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, with several important amendments. This is one of the measures recommended by Gov. Odell in his first annual message, and the committee deliberated on it for an hour after to-day's session.

Perhaps the most striking amendment is one that provides that the Commissioner of Labor shall be appointed for four years instead of three, in order that a Governor entering office after four years shall have the privilege of appointing a Commissioner at the beginning of his term, so that he may institute any reforms or carry out any plan that the Governor may suggest immediately.

The formal construction of the bill is entirely changed. Senator Ellsworth says, in order to eliminate seeming incongruities. Instead of creating an office of Commissioner of Labor and dividing it into three bureaus.

There was a rumor that the members of the committee had a fiery discussion on the bill and that action was not unanimous. Senator Grady subsequently said: "The committee's action in deciding to report Gov. Odell's labor bill was unanimous."

The committee also decided to report favorably the Elsberg bill enabling New York's Police Board to reinstate C. D. Westbrook as a patrolman, who resigned in 1882.

BILLS AFFECTING GAS COMPANIES.

Prohibit Demand of Deposits and Discontinuance During Disputes.

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—Assemblyman Harburger to-day introduced two bills affecting gas and electric light companies. The first prohibits the demanding of deposits by gas companies in the Boroughs of Manhattan, the Bronx, Brooklyn, Richmond, and Queens, either as security for gas or for meters, and makes the penalty for a violation a fine of not less than $200 or imprisonment in the county jail for thirty days or less, or both fine and imprisonment.

The other bill makes it unlawful for gas or electric light companies to discontinue the supply of gas or electric light pending a dispute between the company and the consumer, as to the quantity of gas supplied, or as to the proper registering of the meter, provided such consumer offers in writing within five days after the presentation of a bill for such lighting to deposit the amount in dispute in any court in which such corporation may bring an action to recover the amount claimed to be due therefor. In case it shall be adjudged that the amount charged was excessive, then the defendant shall be entitled, irrespective of the amount of the claim, to recover costs.

Sussex Hotel at Spring Lake Burned.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Jan. 22.—The Sussex Hotel, at Spring Lake, was destroyed to-day by a fire believed to be of incendiary origin. The hotel was unoccupied. Two other buildings owned by Mrs. S. E. Urie of Philadelphia and being a part of the old Essex and Sussex block were badly damaged. The loss is estimated at $12,000.

F. H. POTTER A COMPLAINANT.

Bishop Potter's Nephew Causes the Arrest of George S. Hoesmer, a Promoter.

Frank H. Potter, a nephew of Bishop Potter, who gave his address as 29 Lafayette Place, which is the Episcopal See House, was a complainant in the West Side Police Court yesterday morning against George S. Hoesmer, a promoter, of 6 West Ninety-ninth Street, who was charged with intoxication and disorderly conduct. It appeared from the complaint that Mr. Potter was visiting the home of Richard King, a broker, at 200 West Forty-fifth Street, on Monday evening. There were a number of women and men there playing cards when Hoesmer and a companion rang the door bell. They pushed their way past the maid servant and demanded some persons whom they said they were in quest of.

Mr. Potter and Mr. King came into the hallway and told the men that they had made a mistake in the house. Then it is alleged that Hoesmer struck Potter. The latter and King made an outcry which attracted the attention of Special Officer Ryan of the Holmes Patrol, who came into the house. Hoesmer and his companion showed fight. There was a struggle and during the mêlée Hoesmer fell down a flight of steps, necessitating his being taken to Roosevelt Hospital to have his head dressed, after which he was taken to the West Forty-seventh Street Police Station, where he gave bail. His head was swathed in bandages when he appeared in court yesterday morning.

Mr. King did not appear in court and Mr. Potter told the Magistrate that it was the desire of Mr. King not to press the complaint. Hoesmer was discharged. It seemed to be the desire of all the parties concerned to hush the matter up.

Athletic Mass Meeting at Harvard.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 22.—A rousing mass meeting to stir up interest in athletics at Harvard was held in Massachusetts Hall to-night. The big room was filled to overflowing, and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. Everett Wendell of New York, who, it is understood, has charge of the arrangements for an international track meet, made a strong appeal for Harvard men to come out and support the team, but he did not mention the culmination of any negotiations with the English colleges which might add to their interest for the work.

Knickerbocker A. C. Billiards.

The billiard competitions in the Knickerbocker Athletic Club's members' handicap were finished last night. In Class X, M. A. Diaz handicap, 125, defeated W. R. Bracken handicap, 110, by 125 points to 87. In Class Y, M. L. Lissberger, handicap 115, beat W. R. Bracken, handicap 110, by 115 points to 80.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

UTICA, N. Y., Jan. 22.—Fire in Burlington this morning destroyed $8,000 worth of property, including the store and dwelling of C. R. Reeve and the hotel of George Groat.

SCRANTON, Penn., Jan. 22.—The Babylon breaker of the Temple Coal Company at Duryea was burned this morning, causing a loss of $100,000, which is covered by insurance. Five hundred men and boys are thrown out of work.

CAPTAIN HERLIHY'S CASE

Inspector Cross the Chief Witness at Yesterday's Hearing.

Testifies that the Rev. Mr. Paddock Refused to Make a Complaint Against the Captain.

Inspector Cross was the chief witness at the trial of Capt. John D. Herlihy at Police Headquarters yesterday. Mr. Sexton was the only one of the Commissioners absent from the hearing. Capt. Herlihy was called to the stand to testify at the conclusion of Inspector Cross's examination, but at the suggestion of President York the hearing of his testimony was postponed until to-day, when he will be the first person called.

Under examination by Mr. Grant of counsel for Capt. Herlihy, Mr. Cross said that he first met Rev. Mr. Paddock on the 14th of May or June, 1899, at the Pro-Cathedral. He had again met him at Headquarters on Jan. 11, 1900, when he appeared before the Chief of Police, and on several later occasions.

In answer to a question as to what took place on April 27, 1900, Inspector Cross said that when Mr. Paddock came in he greeted him and Capt. Herlihy pleasantly and shook hands. "What can I do for you, Mr. Paddock?" I asked. "Inspector, I have come to make a complaint against Capt. Herlihy," he said; "I would rather speak to you alone." "I told him that I thought that the Captain ought to be present. Mr. Paddock then said that in the station house the night before Capt. Herlihy had called him a liar. I said to the Captain, 'That is language a gentleman would not use.' Then I told Mr. Paddock that he ought to make a complaint. He said that he did not want to do so. 'You refuse to make a complaint?' I asked, and he then said he had come to me for advice. I told him my advice was that he should make a complaint. He consented to do so." Inspector Cross then told of sending for a stenographer.

"In the meantime we conversed," he added, "and I told him we had done much to stamp out vice in the precinct. He agreed with me. I told him that we wanted the co-operation of all good citizens, but that I thought he was a little unreasonable. I said—it was a jocular remark—'I am not sure that if we made the precinct a paradise you would be entirely satisfied.' Mr. Paddock immediately got up and said that if that was my feeling he didn't think he would make a complaint. When I asked him why he said that I had prejudged the case. I told him that I could not do so, that it had to come before the board, and begged him to make the complaint. He refused."

"Did Mr. Paddock shake hands with you before leaving?"

"At least six times."

Mr. Olcott called for the report made to the Chief and read from it: "It is no exaggeration to say that Mr. Paddock is really unreasonable." Then Mr. Olcott asked the witness if he meant that as a sneer.

The witness said that he did not, and explained that he thought Mr. Paddock was unreasonable because he saw him go day after day to court against these people and still was not satisfied.

Lawrence Grimshaw, a policeman of the Twelfth Precinct, and Stephen J. Reagan, a detective of the Eighty-first Precinct, formerly of the Twelfth, who were in the station house on the night of April 25, the time of the alleged insult, testified that Capt. Herlihy had at no time come from behind the desk, had not put his fist in Mr. Paddock's face, and had not called him a liar. Under cross-examination by Mr. Olcott they were unable to remember anything that occurred in the station house on the nights immediately preceding or following that date.

POLICE BEFORE GRAND JURY.

Chief Devery and Other Officials Summoned to Brooklyn and Examined.

It became known yesterday that Chief of Police Devery, Deputy Chief P. H. McLaughlin of Brooklyn, and two Inspectors and five Captains of the department in that borough had been summoned before the Kings County Grand Jury at different times during the past week. The examination of these police officials was conducted by District Attorney John F. Clarke in person. Chief Devery and Deputy Chief McLaughlin appeared before the Grand Jury on Monday, but this fact was carefully guarded, and leaked out only yesterday.

Mr. Clarke was out of town yesterday, and all of his assistants were non-committal when questioned with regard to the matter. Assistant District Attorney Frank X. McCaffry, who is in charge of the Grand Jury, said:

"I did not examine any one before the Grand Jury yesterday, and officially I knew nothing about Chief Devery's visit."

"You will have to see the Chief about that," said Deputy Chief McLaughlin, when asked about the Grand Jury's investigation. "I will say, however, that no charges have been made against him by me, nor has he made any charges against me. The matter under consideration has no relation to vice in Brooklyn, as there is no vice here. I have been subpœnaed to appear before the Grand Jury on Thursday at 10 o'clock."

Mr. McLaughlin admitted that he had been before the Grand Jury last week, but would not say with regard to what matter.

James Shevlin, the acting leader of the Kings County Democratic organization, which effected the return of Deputy Chief McLaughlin to his old command after he had been transferred to Queens by Chief Devery, when asked about the inquiry by the Grand Jury, declined to discuss the matter in any way. No one is in a position to know what was the nature of the investigation instituted by the Grand Jury would talk about the matter.

While most of the talk as to the character of the investigation was mere conjecture, it was quite generally believed about the Court House that the inquiry was devoted to police conditions in Brooklyn.

THE COMMITTEE OF FIFTEEN.

President Baldwin Says that They Are Going Ahead Slowly.

Matters were at a standstill in the crusade against vice yesterday, at least so far as the Committees of Fifteen and Five were concerned. Lewis Nixon, the leader of the Tammany committee, spent the day in Philadelphia, and had not returned home up to late last evening. President Baldwin of the Long Island Railroad, who, as Chairman, directs the affairs of the Committee of Fifteen, spent the day in his private office and refused to make any forecast of the results of the weekly meeting of the organization, to be held this afternoon at the United Charities Building.

"I am decidedly encouraged by the outlook," said Mr. Baldwin. "The committee is going ahead slowly but surely. We will not take any decided action until we are sure of our ground."

He said that if a hearing is granted on the Police bill at present pending in the Legislature the committee would be represented by Robert Grier Monroe, its counsel, and several of its members, who would support the position already taken that the power of removal by both Governor and Mayor of the proposed single head of the department will, under such conditions as the present, when the head of the State Government belongs to one party and the head of the Municipal Government to the other, perpetuate the very worst features of the present bi-partisan system of control of the department.

VREDENBURGH MAKES A RAID.

Gambling House at 121 Park Row Closed—Six Men Arrested.

Capt. Vredenburgh of the Oak Street Station, Detective Hahn, and five policemen raided an alleged gambling room at 121 Park Row last night and arrested six men, besides securing 4,900 poker chips and other paraphernalia. The men arrested gave their names as Edward McMahon, 93 Park Row; George Kelly, 9 West Street; A. M. Smith, 82 Catharine Street; Joseph McCarthy, 31 Catharine Street; Martin Moore, 31 Catharine Street, and Thomas Murray, 87 Catharine Street.

The men were not playing at the time the raid was made. There were two tables in the room and several chairs. No cards were found, but 4,900 poker chips of all shapes, colors, and sizes were taken, some green table covers, and a valise of carpenter's tools. No resistance was made to the officers. The men were locked up in the Oak Street Station and will be arraigned in the Centre Street

Interest is Redoubled in this Reorganized MUSLIN UNDERWEAR Occasion

The Main Aisle was busy as a beehive Monday and yesterday. Little wonder with such fascinating garments at the almost startling prices. Not the cheapest pieces there, either; yet perhaps the best bargains of the sale; for in these medium-priced goods are combined best muslins, refined trimmings, neat sewing—ideal garments such as you would make for yourself, yet at prices you could not match in most cases in materials alone. And you couldn't, or at least you wouldn't, do the work any better if you did it yourself.

That's why the selling has been so tremendous, since the stocks were filled up again. Look at this array shown on the MAIN AISLE to-day:

Night Gowns—

50c—Of muslin; square neck; yoke of fine plaits and insertion; neck and sleeves trimmed with embroidery. Were 75c.

OPERA WRAPS
A Theatre Fund

Bargains in theatre tickets are unheard-of—except at a premium when the box-office is sold out. If we gave two-dollar tickets to fifteen different performances, with a seventy-dollar opera wrap it would be a tempting inducement, if the wrap was the handsomest that could be bought for seventy dollars, wouldn't it?

Would it? Here it is. Only we let you buy the tickets yourself—

Wraps worth up to $70 at $40
Wraps worth up to $43.50 at $28
Wraps worth up to $30 at $20

These are the finest wraps brought from abroad this season—only a few more than a hundred remain, and they will probably go in a jiffy. Some are trimmed with Thibet or Mouffion fur; some are handsomely appliqued; many with double or triple capes; all full length with quilted linings. The colors are best evening shades.

There are also a few exquisite Carriage and Opera Wraps marked a third under price—sumptuous garments—

$93 from $140—Wrap of white broadcloth; cuffs and high collar of royal ermine, from which falls a jabot of green velvet; triple cape fastened with small green buttons; yoke effect, from which fall closed plaits which open at the knee; lining of white satin.

$200 from $300—Wrap of Velour du Nord; yoke of Royal ermine; flaring collar of gathered chiffon; Paquin sleeve, under part of white satin covered with point d'Esprit; six panels of velvet fall from yoke; all are beautifully embroidered and appliqued; lining of white satin.

Second floor, Broadway.

The FUR SALE

Now our own fine furs furnish most of the news of this greatest fur sale ever known in this business. Prices show just as radical reductions as were found in the manufacturer's offerings. Our styles are perhaps more staple than the more fancy furs previously offered. To-day brings forward a remarkable group of offerings:

$5—Dyed Opossum Collarettes; 9 in. deep; were $12.50.

$5—Natural Lynx Cluster Scarfs; were $12.50.

$17.50—Short Electric Seal Capes; were $35.

$25—Mink Collarettes, trimmed with tails; were $50.

$25—Natural Lynx Collarettes; were $50.

$25—Long Round Boas of black bear; were $45.

$25—Long Round Boas of blue lynx; were $50.

$25—Dyed Blue Fox Animal Boas; were $35.

$30—Long Round Boas of Alaska sable; were $55.

$35 Plain Astrakhan Coats; were $60.

$200—Plain Seal Coats; were $265 and $275.

A few cloth Carriage Wraps, lined with squirrel, in light shades only, at $22.50 to $37.50, were $45 to $75.

Second floor, Broadway.

WAIST Patterns

Beautiful goods at a full third less than regular prices. Henrietta cloth in the most favored colorings—light and dark. They are elaborately embroidered and braided in silk and chenille, forming most attractive waist fronts, and collar and cuff garniture. The designs are in effective color contrasts—some white and black on colors.

Repriced this morning as follows:

The $5 Patterns are now $3.50 each
The $6 Patterns are now $4 each
The $7 Patterns are now $5 each
The $8 Patterns are now $6 each.

Rotunda.

Flannel Waists

Warm, comfortable, serviceable Waists for women, at two unusual prices. They are odd lots, as we count them. You're only interested in your particular size, and it's here, though not in every style.

$1.25 to $2.25 Waists at $1
$3.50 to $5 Waists at $2.50

They should be sold out in a jiffy.

Second floor, Tenth street.

Handkerchiefs

These are for women. A special lot of 450 dozens at a remarkable price. They are pure linen, unlaundered, with initials; yet the almost ridiculous price is

75c a dozen

For practical, everyday use they offer a splendid opportunity.

The Sale of SILKS

Do you wonder that the Rotunda was busy as a bee-hive yesterday? Would you think such startling offerings could be publicly exploited and not stir up tremendous interest all over Greater New York? But if you missed coming yesterday your chance is just as good to-day, except for some of the littlest prices. The fine silks at medium prices are still here in large quantities; for you know there was

HOMESPUNS

Just a little more than half price for these, though they're brand-new and absolutely perfect. They are elegant Melton homespuns—a manufacturer's surplus after his spring orders were filled. Impatient—preferred immediate cash to waiting for some one to come along that needed the goods.

These Melton homespuns are in the best, most recent mixtures: Three shades of gray—light to dark—and one of tan. Pure wool, and 50 in. wide. 55c a yard; value $1.

Rotunda.

Rich CREPONS

A Three-dollar quality at $1.25 a yard. They are dainty silk-and-wool Crepons, in the prettiest of color combinations: Gray-and-white, tan-and-white, brown-and-white, navy-blue-and-white, tan-and-light-blue, tan-and-reseda. Nothing could be more suitable for that new fancy waist you're thinking of. And there's nothing to be had anywhere else at anywhere near so little a price. New—just here from an overstocked maker who was willing to stand a loss just at this time. Crepons that are fully worth $3 a yard, and the price is $1.25.

The Under-price Store

The splendid values in the silver-ware sale alone are sufficient to attract large audiences daily to this basement collection of unusually low-priced merchandise. It, however, is surrounded with other attractive offerings, part of which—the newcomers—are here mentioned:

Rogers' Forks and Spoons—

Perfect goods in desirable patterns, at prices ranging from one-fourth to one-half under actual value: Tea spoons, $1.10 doz.; dessert spoons, $2; table spoons, $2.20; table forks, $2.20; dessert forks, $2; coffee spoons, $1.10; orange spoons, $1.50; oyster forks, $1.35 a dozen. Fancy pieces to match. Triple-plate medium and dessert knives, $2.25 a dozen.

Quadruple-plated Table Ware—

Though without a single fault, many of these goods are priced at 50 per cent. less than regular. None of this offering is marked higher than three-quarters usual prices. Still in good supply are these: 5-piece tea sets, $8.75, $9.50, $12.50; kettles, $4.75; ice pitchers, $5; odd tea and coffee pots, $1.50; cake baskets, $2.50; fruit dishes, $1.25 to $4.50; glass-lined salt cellars, 75c; Children's cups, 50c and 75c.

Women's Pocket-books and Bags—

Some suede-finish pocket-books, in gray and brown, square shape or long and narrow, at 45c each; value $1. Also a lot of walrus grain pocket-books, sterling silver trimmed, in black, brown, and tan, at 45c, instead of 75c.

Some Boston bags, of checked gray and tan cloth, leather bottom and side stays, 11 and 12 in. sizes, at 45c; values 75c and $1.

Low-priced Towels Made Still Lower—

These hemmed huckaback towels, German, full bleached, soft finish; size 17x33 in.; cheap at 12½c each; price 10c.

Bath towels, full size; extra heavy, white or cream; cheap at 15c; price, 12½c.

Imported Nail Brushes at a Little Price—

They all have solid backs, neatly varnished, Tampico fibre; sold regularly at 10c to 15c. Price, 5c. About 500 at this price.

Feather Pillows Reduced in Price—

Prime, white live geese feathers; best blue and white ticking; size 20x30 in.; weight 2½ lbs., at $1.25; regularly $1.50; 22x30 in., 3 lbs., $1.50, instead of $1.80; 24x30 in., 3½ lbs., $1.75 instead of $2.10.

$2 and $3 Framed Pictures at $1—

They are platinum photographs—about 25 good subjects in all. Some in very wide black wood frames with silver-gilt edge; others in wide gilded frames; 12x17½ in. and 15x17 in. Choice at $1. Values up to $3.

Chocolate Eclairs at 15c a Pound—

Regularly sold in the candy store at 30c. Sold on several occasions as a particularly good bargain at 20c. Now 15c a pound.

Making SHIRTS
To Order for Men

Perhaps you send to Paris for your shirts. That used to be necessary if you wanted the best in the world. We knew that—then we went to Paris for ideas. We had the best shirt-makers—couldn't get better work even in Paris—seldom as good. Now we have the ideas, and are constantly getting new ones.

As for materials, we would be ashamed of the line that the best Paris shirt-maker shows, because the variety is insignificant compared with our assortment of materials and patterns. Of course the Frenchman shows you exquisite silks and batistes; but we show you the same silks and batistes, in much greater variety—we bring them from Paris. We have also a wide variety of French percales and satin broches. Then besides, and best of all for most men, we have a magnificent assortment of madras from Glasgow.

And we haven't a single pattern that we had last year!

Do you know any other shirt-maker that can say that? This is the finest and newest collection of fabrics to be found anywhere.

And the making—

One man who always brought his shirts from Paris, tried us between times and now he doesn't want Paris-made shirts. Says ours are better.

Naturally our work is best appreciated by men who are familiar with expert shirt-making. And no man is ever asked to keep shirts made for him unless they suit him perfectly.

We should like to show you the new materials. We'll send a capable man to your home or office to show samples and measure you at your convenience.

These are the prices of shirts made to order from the various stuffs:

Percale from France, $3
Madras from Glasgow, $3.50
Satin broche from France, $3.50
Batiste from France, $10
Silk from France, $12

PARLOR SUITES

These are some of the finest Parlor Suites on our floors—the samples that we have shown during the past season. We want to renew them, so that our showing may be constantly bright and new. You'll find no perceptible hurt on any; yet the reductions in price are quite remarkable. Latest styles and best designs; finely constructed and finished; late pattern fabrics. Price hints:

At $87.50, from $135—Three pieces; inlaid frames; damask cover.

At $70, from $140—Three pieces; inlaid frames; tapestry cover.

Fourth floor.

TABLE CLOTHS

These are pattern Table Cloths, unhemmed—all much under price, though our previous prices were not matched anywhere. Various reasons suggest closing out these particular lines. Good housekeepers only need be told that fine pure linens can be had for so little. These sorts and prices:

Bleached Scotch Table Cloths, 67 in. wide, 66 in. long, at $1.60; half a yard longer, $2. Worth $2 and $2.50 each. Same, 84 in. wide, 88 in. long, at $2.75; one yard longer, $3.75. Worth $3.50 and $4.50.

Bleached Flemish Table Cloths, 69 in. wide, 87 in. long, $2.50; were $3.50.

Bleached Irish Table Cloths, 2x3 yards, $3.25; were $4.50; half a yard longer, $3.75; were $5.25.

Bleached Scotch Table Cloths, double damask, 2x3 yards, $4.50; worth $6.

Bleached Moravian Table Cloth, double damask, 2½ yards square, $5.50; was $6.25. Same size, finer, $7; was $8.

EX-SENATOR HISCOCK DEFENDS VENEZUELA

Visits State Department and Denounces Asphalt Trust.

SAYS LOOMIS LOST HIS HEAD

Declares that the Only Censorship in the Caribbean Republic Is One the Minister "Dreamed."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Ex-Senator Frank Hiscock of New York reached Washington to-day and immediately went to the State Department to urge the cessation of all efforts to interfere with Venezuela's disposition of the asphalt affairs. He spent several hours there, and seemed to make a good impression. Hitherto the Warner-Quinlan asphalt interests, which he represents, have had very little success in convincing the State Department that Venezuela was acting fairly. Mr. Hiscock went at it in a vigorous fashion, and did not scruple to denounce Minister Loomis and to uphold the good faith of President Castro.

Mr. Hiscock makes point-blank charges that the whole trouble in Venezuela was deliberately cooked up by the Asphalt Trust in an effort to embroil that country with the United States, and that all the reports of the attacks upon the company's property, whether made by Minister Loomis, by the officers of the trust, or by press representatives at Trinidad and Curacon, are inventions by which the State Department has been imposed upon. He does not charge Minister Loomis with bad faith, but only with weakness and excitability, which make him an easy victim to the people, who, according to the ex-Senator, have been trying to induce the Government to land marines on Venezuelan soil.

"There has never been an attack on the Bermudez Company's works," he declared to-day, "nor has any ever been contemplated. That telegram about the demand made upon the company's men to lay down their arms, on the strength of which the Navy Department sent the Scorpion to Guanoco, was an infernal lie. The stories now being circulated about President Castro's offer to restore the company's property for $400,000 or $1,000,000 are lies. He has never offered to restore anything.

"Minister Loomis is responsible for it all. He is a nervous, dyspeptic man, and he imagined that he had a Chinese imbroglio on his hands and that the eyes of the world were focused upon him. This story that the Venezuelan Government has established a censorship over its dispatches comes from Loomis. It has done nothing of the kind. In his overheated condition he has dreamed this censorship.

"Just think what it was that these people wanted. Did you ever hear of such a thing as landing troops on the soil of a country with which we are at peace for such a purpose?

"This question is going to be settled in this way: We are going to work in our mines. Then the Bermudez Company may interfere with us if it chooses, in which case we shall bring suit in the courts of Venezuela; or, if it prefers, it may itself bring suit as soon as we begin work. In that way we shall reach a judicial determination. All we want is to have the matter settled by the courts, and we are going to do it.

"You can say further that the Venezuelan Government has never undertaken or threatened to dispossess the Bermudez Company from its holdings. These stories are lies made up out of whole cloth."

Mr. Hiscock was asked whether he believed that the Administration had changed its policy toward Venezuela.

"I can't answer that," he replied. "But the Scorpion was going to Gunnoco, and now she is not going there. Draw your own conclusions."

At the State and Navy Departments it was stated that nothing had been received from Venezuela. Lieut. Commander Sargent has not yet reported his arrival at Curacao.

Ex-Senator Hiscock and other counsel have submitted to the State Department a statement in which they say that "as a matter of fact the concession which Warner & Quinlan had of La Felicidad (the asphalt lakes) has never been worked in any way, shape, or manner, and there never has been the slightest attempt on the part of the Venezuelan Government, or intimation of an attempt, to put Messrs. Warner & Quinlan in possession by force or in any other method than by the usual and ordinary methods of legal proceedings under the law of Venezuela."

The statement contains an elaborate history of the conflict between the two concessions, and a legal argument intended to show that Felicidad is a separate lake from the one which the New York and Bermudez Company is now working.

TO SURVEY OKLAHOMA LANDS.

Rock Island Railroad Company Will Simplify Work of Settlers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 22.—The Rock Island Railroad has undertaken a job of surveying that is large, interesting, and unusual. In the southern and southwestern parts of Oklahoma Territory there are 3,800,000 acres of lands that have been owned by the Wichitas, Kiowas, Comanches, and Apaches, but which those tribes have ceded to the United States. These lands are declared by observers to be quite as fertile and desirable as those in other parts of Oklahoma for which the remarkable rush of 1889 was made, resulting in the settlement of an empire of nearly half a million people in about ten years.

The Rock Island Railroad runs through a goodly part of the section ceded and to be opened. The lands have not been surveyed, and, as a survey will hasten the orderly settlement of the lands and the development of the new territory, the railroad company has undertaken, for something like $75,000, to make the survey and turn it over to the Government in time to be used when the lands are thrown open next August.

A VENEZUELAN PAPER'S VIEWS.

Says There Is No Trouble and No Danger of War.

According to the passengers who arrived from Venezuela on the Red Cross Line steamship Caracas yesterday, the possibility of a war between that country and the United States over the troubles of the New York and Bermudez Asphalt Company is very remote. Venezuela, they said, would be able to establish satisfactorily her contention to a prior right in the asphalt claims. One of the passengers had a clipping from El Tiempo, one of the Venezuelan papers, which comments as follows on the reported differences of the two Governments:

"Venezuela will protect American interests. Our Government is on a most friendly and diplomatic footing with the United States, and with its Minister, Mr. Loomis, here, the question of asphalt ownership will be settled in a legitimate way. Any way it is a subject for arbitration. Questions of the first importance only are entitled to settlement by force and the United States and Venezuela are not going to get into violence over a second-rate question which the asphalt affair nearly is."

HAY-PAUNCEFOTE TREATY.

State Department Has No Knowledge of Great Britain's Intentions.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The State Department, fearing that repeated assertions that the Government of Great Britain has decided to accept the amended Hay-Pauncefote treaty may prejudice the negotiations, has given out the following official statement:

"The State Department has received no communication from any quarter which would lead it to believe that the British Government has decided to accept the amendments to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty."

The officials of the British Embassy refrained from adding to the official denial of the correctness of the dispatch to a London paper, but it is known that they have no information whatever indicative of the purpose of the British Government.

COINAGE COMMITTEE TO BRYAN

Late Candidate Invited to Give His Views on Financial Measures.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22. — Chairman Southard of the House Committee on Coinage to-day sent the following dispatch:

Hon. William J. Bryan, Lincoln, Neb.—Could you appear before the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, or send your views, as to financial measures pending there?

J. H. SOUTHARD.

The dispatch grew out of the request of Representative Shafroth, (Silver, Col.,) that Mr. Bryan should be invited to express his views along with others prominent in the financial world who are being heard on the pending bill making all silver obligations redeemable in gold.

CRAMPS' CLAIM SENT TO COURT.

Amount Involved Is $1,300,000—Placer Mining Law Extended.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The House to-day passed the bill to send to the Court of Claims the claims of Cramp & Sons, amounting to something over $1,300,000 for alleged damages due the company on account of the failure of the Government to promptly furnish armor plate and other material used in the construction of the New York, Columbia, Massachusetts, and India.

The Senate bill to extend the placer mining laws to saline lands was passed after a rather spirited debate.

The District of Columbia Appropriation bill was taken up and some progress was made with it.

TWO MORE AMERICAN ISLANDS.

Treaty for the Acquieition of Sibutu and Cogoyan Ratified.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The Senate to-day in executive session ratified the treaty with Spain for the acquisition of the Islands of Sibutu and Cogoyan of the Philippine group at a cost of $100,000. There was not a vote to spare, a two-thirds vote being needed, and the vote standing 38 to 19. In the debate preceding the ratification a number of Senators manifested a disposition to oppose the further acquisition of Oriental territory.

Senators Lodge (Rep., Mass.,) and Chandler (Rep., N. H.,) spoke in behalf of the treaty, and Senators Bacon, (Dem., Ga.,) Money, (Dem., Miss.,) and Pettigrew (Sil-Rep., S. D.,) in opposition. Senator Lodge said that it was necessary to acquire the islands to prevent Germany's getting possession of them. Their acquisition by any foreign power, he said, would be an awkward circumstance for the United States.

The opposition Senators replied that the land was worthless, and added that as there are no harbors on the coast of any one of them there could be no object in any other country's taking them. They also charged that as the islands are in the Sulu group, their population is polygamous and also that slavery exists on the islands.

HISTORIC PAINTING ACCEPTED.

Gift of Dr. Octavius White of New York to the United States Senate.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—In the Senate to-day Mr. Tillman (Dem., S. C.,) had read a letter from Dr. Octavius A. White of New York tendering to the Senate a painting by his father, John Blake White, of the famous battle of Fort Moultrie, fought in the harbor of Charleston, S. C., just six days before the Declaration of Independence. Believing that the painting was too valuable to remain subject to the vicissitudes of private ownership, Dr. White proposed to give it to the Nation. About two years ago Dr. White gave to the Senate three other historic paintings by his father.

Mr. Wetmore, (Rep., R. I.,) Chairman of the Committee on Library, offered a resolution accepting the tender of the painting and extending the thanks of the Senate to the donor. The resolution was passed.

To Count the Presidential Vote.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Mr. Chandler, (Rep., N. H.,) Chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, favorably reported a concurrent resolution providing that the two houses of Congress assemble in the hall of the House of Representatives on Wednesday, Feb. 13, at 1 P. M., for the purpose of counting the vote cast for President and Vice President of the United States. The resolution was adopted.

DELAY FOR THE SUBSIDY BILL.

Some Republicans Say It Cannot Be Passed at This Session.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The Subsidy bill was not so much as mentioned in the Senate to-day. The assurances of the subsidy press bureau are manifestly less confident than they have been, and begin to suggest the early official announcement of the postponement of the Subsidy bill.

At least half a dozen Republican Senators, who are still considered by the friends of the bill as friendly and ready to vote for it, in private conversation have admitted that it will be impossible to pass the bill at this session, and that to bring it up for discussion will be but to waste time that might better be devoted to measures that can and ought to be passed.

The Legislative Appropriation Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—During the sitting of the Senate in open session, the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation bill was completed, so far as the committee amendments were concerned. It is now subject to amendment by individual Senators.

Mr. Jones (Dem., Ark.,) offered an amendment authorizing the Attorney General to employ an assistant Attorney General to represent the Government before committees of Congress in cases involving claims against the United States. The proposed amendment aroused considerable opposition, Mr. Chandler (Rep., N. H.,) opposing it vigorously. It was still pending when the bill was laid aside for the day.

OFFICERS WANT PROMOTION.

President Is Asked Not to Give Miles the Lieutenant Generalship—Others After It.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—President McKinley has been appealed to already, before he has signed the Army Reorganization bill, to select as the Lieutenant General under that act some other officer than Gen. Miles, and the fact that recommendations have been made on behalf of Major Gen. Brooke and Major Gen. Otis, have given rise to the report that Gen. Miles will drop back from the nominal rank of Lieutenant General to that of Major General, and continue to be merely the senior Major General of the army.

The most plausible argument in behalf of Otis and Brooke is that if made Lieutenant General in turn before Gen. Miles, both would retire before Miles, thus giving all three the opportunity to wear the rank and enjoy on the retired list the increased compensation given to Lieutenant General. The President may select whom he chooses, but the personal advantages promising to accrue to Gen. Brooke and Otis do not strike those Senators who talked about it to-day as either dignified in the Administration, respectful to Gen. Miles, or creditable as an economical proposition.

Gen. Miles has been Lieutenant General only because, being the senior Major General and in command of the army, he has been entitled to enjoy the rank and pay of Lieutenant General. The moment the President signs the Reorganization bill he will cease to be Lieutenant General until so named and his nomination approved by the Senate.

The selection of four additional Major Generals and nine Brigadier Generals, to equip the additional force allowed by the bill, is interesting the friends of many officers who aspire to promotion, and will engage the attention of the President as soon as the act becomes law. Secretary Root being anxious to have the new army raised and ready for Philippine service as early as possible.

Transport Wright Sails.

The United States military transport Wright, which has been overhauled at Erie Basin, sailed for the Philippines yesterday. On her arrival at Manila she will be used as a dispatch boat by Gen. MacArthur, besides being utilized by the Quartermaster's department for other services for which she is adapted.

SENATOR SEWELL RE-ELECTED.

Returned in Both Houses of the New Jersey Legislature by Large Majority.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 22.—United States Senator William J. Sewell was to-day elected by the New Jersey Legislature in separate ballot to succeed himself as United States Senator.

Mr. Sewell received 45 votes in the House to 13 for ex-Congressman Alvah A. Clark, who was decided upon as the choice of the Democrats in their caucus this morning. In the Senate he received 17 votes to 4 for Mr. Clark.

The two Houses will meet to-morrow at noon in joint session, when these results will be formally announced and Gen. Sewell declared elected.

MORE OPPOSITION TO CLARK.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—There is a renewal in the Senate of the talk heard some time ago of an effort to keep W. A. Clark out of the Senate when he presents himself after March 3 to be sworn in. Mr. Chandler, to whom Mr. Clark was always disposed to attribute much of his ill-success in getting into the Senate, will then be no longer a Senator, but the traditions of the Senate will not follow him back to New Hampshire.

Without being stated officially, it is asserted by a Senator that when Mr. Clark presents himself on inauguration day to be sworn in a Republican will object to the administration of the oath, and in manner similar to that in the case of Brigham Roberts in the House will ask that he stand aside. The reason to be assigned will be, it is stated, that he "is not a fit person" to be allowed to occupy a seat in the Senate. That will send his case to the Committee on Privileges and Elections. There it will be discussed in connection with the unfinished resolution recounting the prior case, and the unanimous finding of the committee that his election was not valid because of the commission of the crime of bribery in Montana.

A canvass is said to have been made to show that the vote against Clark would be large enough, even with the friendly aid of Senators Elkins, Scott, Jones, Stewart, and Mason, to keep him in the committee. It is asserted of Mr. Gallinger of New Hampshire that, having been favorable to Clark while Chandler was in the Senate, he will change his position as soon as his colleague goes out and be opposed to Clark.

SALEM, Oregon, Jan., 22.—The first Senatorial ballot was taken in the Senate to-day. It resulted as follows: McBride, 10; Corbett, 8; scattering, 10; not voting, 1; absent, 1. The result of the ballot in the House was: Corbett, 20; McBride, 9; Hermann, 6; Smith, (Dem.,) 20; scattering, 4.

No Change in Montana.

HELENA, Mon., Jan. 22.—There was no change in the Senatorial situation to-day, except that the labor members voted for Pelletier of Silver Bow. The vote on joint ballot was: Mantle, 26; Pelletier, 13; Maginnis, 11; Frank, 10; Cooper, 9; Conrad, 7.

Warren Wins in Wyoming.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Jan. 22.—The two houses of the Legislature cast separate ballots for United States Senator to-day as follows: House—Francis E. Warren, (Rep.,) 34; John E. Osborne, (Dem.,) 2. Senate—Warren, 18; Osborne, 1.

MACARTHUR THANKS SOLDIERS.

MANILA, Jan. 22.—The Eleventh Cavalry has arrived here on the transport Meade from Camarines. They will sail for home on the same ship as the Thirty-sixth Infantry. The men who are to sail Saturday were reviewed and addressed this evening by Gen. MacArthur.

In addressing the Thirty-sixth Regiment Gen. MacArthur thanked the men enthusiastically for the part they ably bore in the history-making epoch in the Philippines. He said they had sustained the traditions of a hardy and soldierly race and merited the plaudits of their countrymen on their return home.

The Twenty-seventh Regiment will sail on Feb. 5 and the Thirtieth on the 15th.

FILIPINOS TAKE THE OATH.

MANILA, Jan. 22.—The oath of allegiance has been administered in a church at Vigan to over 1,000 persons, who acknowledged they had contributed to the insurgent cause. Chaplain Fitzgerald addressed the natives in Spanish. The parish priest translated his remarks into Ilocano and administered the oath.

About 400 persons in the vicinity of Malabon, assembled in the Church and on the Plaza, have also taken the oath.

LONGEST REIGN IN ENGLISH HISTORY

The Story of Victoria's Life and Queenhood.

GRIEF FOR HER HUSBAND

She Was at One Time Much Criticised for Living in Seclusion.

The Monarch Just Dead Witnessed the Growth of the British Empire to the Greatest in the World.

The reign of Queen Victoria, who came to the throne of her ancestors in 1837, was the longest in English history; indeed, it was one of the longest in the history of Europe, whether the ancient nations or the modern be considered. English reigns remarkable for length are those of Henry VI., 39 years; Henry VIII., 38; Elizabeth, 45; Edward III., 50; Henry III., 56, and George III., 60. It thus appears that the only reigns besides Victoria's that exceeded fifty years are those of Henry III. and George III. In the case of Henry, however, it is to be borne in mind that he ascended the throne when only a boy of ten, with Pembroke and others as Regents, while George III. during the last ten years of his life was a hopeless lunatic, and his son served as Regent until his death. Victoria's more than half century of reign began when she was a grown-up woman and legally of age. No Regent was necessary. At the time of her death also she was the oldest monarch that ever ruled Great Britain.

French history, however, supplies us with a reign considerably longer than hers, that of Louis XIV., who sat on the throne of France from 1643 until 1715, a period of seventy-two years, of which only nine belong to the Regency of Anne of Austria. But German history yields us no parallel. Neither the Carlovingian, the Hohenstaufen, the Hapsburg, nor the Austrian line affords a single reign that exceeded fifty years in length. Nor does the long line of Roman Emperors who ruled in Rome supply an instance of such length of regal days in power. The longest reign was that of Constantine the Great, 31 years; the next longest that of Valentinian III., 30 years, while reigns so celebrated in Roman annals as those of Tiberius, Claudius, Domitian, Trajan, and Diocletian extended over only 23, 13, 15, 19, and 21 years, respectively. If we include the later Eastern Empire, one reign of 56 years (Basil II., who had a colleague for seven years) is found and one of 48. (Constantine VII., who had several colleagues.) But this is the best Rome can show.

In another and greater sense, however, was this reign a memorable one in English history. Literary endeavor and the search for knowledge in no other single reign, save that of Elizabeth, made such splendid contributions to the stock of new facts and written words that men will not willingly let die. Science in this reign made such extraordinary additions to almost every department of knowledge and industry that there is no other reign to be mentioned in the same sentence. The scientific results achieved by the mind of man in the age of Victoria stand alone as at once the wonder and the blessing of mankind.

Many former reigns contributed their shares to the dominions over which Victoria ruled, but no former sovereign actually reigned over anything like so extensive an area as she. In her time vast areas were added to the British Empire in Africa, India, and the Pacific, so that it was never quite so true as in her time that the British Empire was one on which the sun never set. Never before could it have been said by Webster with the same truth, in that fine and famous sentence of his, that the British Empire was one "whose morning drum beat, following the sun and keeping company with the hours, circles the earth with one continuous and unbroken strain of the martial airs of England."

PARENTAGE AND CHILDHOOD.

Though the family name of Queen Victoria was Guelph, and though the royal house to which she belonged was that of Hanover, the blood that coursed through her veins was a mixture of blood that had furnished England with sovereigns before the time of the Norman William down through the eight hundred and more years that had elapsed with the death of George III. When the Saxon Matilda became the Queen of Henry I., the Saxon and Norman lines were united on the English throne, and it was a daughter of Matilda, married in France, who brought in the Plantagenet line. Through a marriage with Elizabeth of York, the Tudor family gained the Plantagenet blood, and by a marriage with the Princess Margaret, sister of Henry VIII. and daughter of Henry VII., the Scotch house of Stuart gained the blood of the Tudors.

From this house of Stuart, Victoria claimed her crown. Elizabeth, Queen of Bohemia, eldest daughter of James I., first of the Stuart Kings of England, had a daughter, Sophia, who became the wife of Ernest August of Hanover, and thus the mother of that son who became King George I. of England. Elizabeth of Bohemia was a devoted Protestant, though as a child she had been reared in Catholic surroundings. Her steadfast devotion to Protestantism cost her much. Her faith was sorely put to the test throughout many years, but Protestants in England got to regard her as a kind of martyr. She could little have believed, however, that such momentous results to her family were to ensue from that devotion. It was that vital point in England's Constitution which secures the crown to "heirs of the body, being Protestant," which made a descendant of hers two generations later King of England, and thus set up the Hanoverian line.

George III. was the father of a numerous family. Nine were sons, of whom two died young, and six were daughters. The eldest son, afterward George IV., was the only one child by his Queen, and this a daughter, who died childless soon after marriage. Frederick, the second son, having no children, died before his elder brother, thus making William, the third son, the successor after George IV. William was the father of two daughters, but both died in their infancy. Other children he had had, but they were illegitimate. Owing to the long Continental wars of the period and the Royal Marriage act, this son, William, and the next, Edward, Duke of Kent, had remained unmarried until they were middle-aged men. The death of George IV.'s daughter and only child had now made the question of succession very serious. These two sons and the seventh son, Adolphus, Duke of Cambridge, were accordingly instructed with their duty to find wives of princely birth, and all three in the same year espoused each a Princess. Two of them, William and Edward, were married on the same day. It was William's fortune, as already said, to lose the two daughters that came to his marriage with the Princess, but Edward, who was blessed with only one daughter, like Viola, she was "all the daughters of her father's house, and all the brothers, too,") not only did not lose the child, she lived to become the illustrious Victoria, Queen and Empress.

The bride whom the Duke of Kent had chosen was already a widow. Her first husband had been the Prince of Leiningen. She was a daughter of the house of Saxe-Coburg had had two children by her first marriage, and was now a little over thirty years of age and beautiful. The Duke of Kent, when he married her, was a tall and rather stoutish man of fifty-eight. For various reasons, one of them the want of means to live becomingly in England, they made their home in the Castle of Amorbach, in Bavaria, which was part of the inheritance of the Duchess's young son by her first husband.

In a short time there was promise of a child, and the Duke, anxious that the possible heir to the British throne should be born in England, concluded to go with his wife to London. They obtained apartments within the plain brick walls of Kensington Palace. So poor was he that the help of friends was required to make the change; none of these friends, however, were his brothers; the brothers were unfriendly to the Duke. In Kensington Palace the apartments assigned to them were those which had been added to the old palace by Sir Christopher Wren. Here, on the 24th of May, 1819, was born the future Queen of England.

From her mother the infant received the name of Victoria, and from the Emperor of Russia that of Alexandrina. For some years she was commonly known as the Princess Drina, the name Victoria being substituted later on in her girlhood. Considerable pomp attended the infant's baptism. The gold font which had long been in a state of disuse was brought from the Tower, and the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of London were in attendance to perform the ceremony. Among those present was Prince Leopold, brother of the child's mother, afterward King of the Belgians, and then the childless widower of that Princess Charlotte, who had been the only heir of George IV. Prince Leopold was a devoted brother and uncle. The future of the Duchess was not bright, and to this brother she became deeply indebted for practical assistance through many years. When the child was six months old she was taken by her parents to Sidmouth, on the Devonshire coast, and here in a cottage the Duke soon afterward met his death. He had come home one day with his feet wet, after a long walk, and had stopped to play with his daughter before changing his boots. A chill was the result, and a fatal attack of inflammation of the lungs ensued. Extremely odd was it that the father of Victoria should be a man who did not marry until he was fifty-eight, who should then have a child in a year, and should die seven months after the child was born.

This misfortune to the Duchess was attended by others. George III. died soon afterward, and as his successor had had an unfriendly feeling for his brother Edward, little help was to be expected now for Edward's widow and daughter, who had been deprived by Edward's death of all means of subsistence. It was in this emergency that Prince Leopold's brotherly generosity became of such value to the stricken family. Back to Kensington they went, and thence to Claremont, the house which belonged to Leopold, and where his short married life had been spent. Here he often received his sister and niece for long periods, and saw that their wants were supplied. Years afterward Victoria said the days she spent at Claremont were the happiest of her childhood. All creditable praise for the devotion of Prince Leopold when it is recalled that the child born to him, dead a few years before Victoria's birth, had it lived, would have been the direct heiress to the throne.

For many years after her birth, Victoria's position as heir apparent was doubtful. George IV. was still alive, hating his Queen, and might live to have another wife, and by her have children. Even so late as 1830, when that grossly-dissolute King ended his life, the life of William IV. stood between her and the throne. William, however, had no legitimate heir; he was nearly sixty-five and in rather poor health, and the likelihood that he would now have issue was extremely small. Victoria had not been brought up with any assurance that she was heir to the throne. Strict orders were in force that no one should speak to her on the subject. Economy in expenditures was found necessary by her mother. For a Princess, the life of the child was one of very straitened circumstances. Even when her income was only a child's pocket money, she was taught to limit her expenditures by the amount of money she possessed. Stories told to show the enforcement of this rule of her mother's easily explain those habits of economy and saving for which, as Queen, Victoria became a subject of captious criticism from English Radicals.

When William IV. became King, Victoria was twelve years old. Statesmen then saw as all but inevitable that this little girl was to be the future Queen, and a bill was brought into Parliament making the Duchess of Kent Regent in case her daughter, by the death of William ere she came of age, should be called upon to take the crown. Matters having gone this far, it was thought time for her to know her position as a Princess. The story told is that her governess contrived to convey the information by placing in one of her books a genealogical table showing the fact. Finding this table and examining it, the Princess one day said to the governess, "I never saw that before," to which answer was made: "It was not thought necessary you should, Princess." "I see I am nearer the throne than I thought," said she. "So it is, Madam." After a pause the Princess, lifting up the forefinger of her extended right hand, remarked: "How many a child would boast, but they don't know the difficulty. There is much splendor and there is much responsibility." At the coronation of William she had not been allowed to appear; nor was she brought forward into prominence in the Court circle. For this her mother was upbraided on one occasion by the King at his own table, and a scene of distress ensued, in which Queen Adelaide was put to confusion and the Princess brought to tears. From the atmosphere of the Court she was withheld so far as possible, and travel in England was made a and the tenure of its place to Parliament, and Parliament, in turn, owes its life to the people. Any Cabinet failing of a majority in the House of Commons ceases to be useful and retires; its successor is the creation, not of the Queen, but of Parliament, and hence indirectly of the people.

Apologists for monarchy as it exists today in England pretend for it only authority and influences of another sort. Walter Bagehot has said for it that it "retains the feelings by which the heroic Kings governed their rude age, and has added the feelings by which the Constitutions of later Greece ruled in more refined ages." He then proceeds to illustrate how a family on a throne is "an interesting idea," how the Government is "strengthened" with the strength of religion"; how the monarch is useful as the head of society and morality, and how a monarch without power enables the real rulers to change without heedless people knowing it. He thinks it well that the masses do not know how near they are to elective government in England; they are not fit for it, and did they realize the fact as it is they "would be surprised, and almost tremble."

Vast, then, as has been the change in the area and population of the British Empire since Elizabeth, the change in the authority of the sovereign is quite as impressive. It is certainly curious, and it is also an instructive commentary on the efficiency of popular government, that England's empire has expanded almost in exact proportion to the decay of the personal authority of her sovereigns.

No account of the life and reign of Victoria would be complete which failed to give due prominence to the influence of her personality all over the world and frequently in grave crises. Her example as a wife and mother and as a consistent adherer to the spirit as well as the tenets of Christianity in all her public acts has been generally recognized and admired. By her own people her assertion, in a public address, after the diamond jubilee in 1897, that she hoped to reign until the end of her life, was heartily welcomed.

ENGLAND'S VAST POSSESSIONS.

A detailed statement of England's colonies and dependencies is worth attention here. In Europe she has Gibraltar, Malta, and Gozo, with a total population of 184,879. In Asia her possessions consist of Aden, Brunei, Ceylon, Cyprus, Hongkong, India, the Indian Feudatory States, the Keeling Islands, the Kuria Muria Islands, Labuan, North Borneo, Perim, Sarawak, and the Straits Settlements. The total population of these lands is 291,501,000 souls, and the total area 1,903,800 square miles. This Asian population is more than twice as large as the population of all the lands ruled over by the Czar of Russia, and this Asian territory of England is very nearly as large as European Russia and two-thirds as large as the United States.

In Africa England possesses Ascension Island, Basutoland, Bechuanaland, Bechuanaland, Berbera, (1884,) Gold Coast, (1874,) Lagos, (1861,) Matabeleland, (1888,) Natal, (1828,) Niger Districts, (1885,) Socotra, (1875,) Zululand, (1886,) Cook Archipelago, (1888,) Kermadec Islands, (1886,) New Guinea, (1884,) New Zealand, (1841,) Queensland, (1859,) and South Australia, (1836.)

England's colonial possessions are of three classes. First come the Crown colonies, like Gibraltar and Hong-Kong, which are controlled entirely by the home Government; second, are those like Natal and Ceylon, which have representative government, in which the Crown retains only the right of veto on legislation and the home Government the control of public officers; and third those like Canada and Queensland, which possess responsible government, the home Government having no control over any public officer, though the Crown retains the right to veto on legislation. There are also protectorates, with Governments more or less organized, under Crown administration.

GREAT FACTS OF THE REIGN.

It is not in wars and mutinies, not in State pageants, with coronations, marriages, or funerals, not in acts of Parliament or the talk of Parliamentary leaders that the real glory of an enlightened monarch's reign will be found. The condition of the people, the advances they have made in material well-being and other means to happiness, the intellectual products of great minds made accessible to all—these and the like of these make for real glory and greatness. Above most things else was Victoria's reign a reign in which industrial affairs were transformed as never before. The story of what machinery and steam and electricity have done is, if properly looked at, a more moving story than any Crimean war or Indian mutiny aforetime. Their influence has pervaded every class in the British Empire, and they will still be exerting their influence when this century shall have long since rounded out its full hundred years.

Three inventions of great moment—the spinning jenny, the spinning machine, and rule-waves, it is true, all made in the course of the reign of George III.; they had in reality begun to prepare the way, as it were, for the commercial expansion which became an accomplished fact in the reign of Victoria. Before the age of Victoria, Watt also had made practical use of the power of steam, just as great progress had been made in the study of electricity. But it was in Victoria's time that the electric telegraph, the telephone, and the electric light came into the service of man, and in here that the vast improvements made in our methods of locomotion were accomplished. One or two short lines of railroad existed when she came to the throne, but they were so insignificant that the present system practically belongs in its creation and extension to the years of Victoria. There is no space to enlarge here upon the mighty transformation in the commercial, social, political, and physical world which has been brought about by this single fact in the English history.

Connected in a very practical way with it belongs another, dating almost from the first month of the reign. In the year 1837 Rowland Hill was advocating, with all the zeal and courage of a man who knew he was right, the establishment of a uniform system of penny postage, and early in 1840 he saw the system carried into effect. Early in 1890 occurred the jubilee anniversary of this event, and it was duly celebrated throughout England. In order to realize what was the change wrought by Rowland Hill, it is well to recall that the ordinary postal rates before his reform came into effect were these: For any place not exceeding 15 miles in distance, 8 cents; for any not exceeding 20 miles, 10 cents; not exceeding 30 miles, 12 cents; not exceeding 50 miles, 16 cents; not exceeding 100 miles, 18 cents; not exceeding 200 miles, 22 cents; not exceeding 300 miles, 24 cents, and so on, increasing 2 cents for every additional 100 miles. By this system a letter from London to Liverpool was charged 20 cents, and one from London to Edinburgh 24 cents. How the substitution for this system of a uniform penny rate, combined with regular and rapid railway mail trains, has operated for the advancement and happiness of mankind is obvious to any one. Had the reign of Victoria no other great achievements to record besides these of cheap postage and rapid travel by steam, it would still deserve to be ranked among the great epochs of English civilization. Later years, however, have seen the penny-postage system in some ways superseded by the telegraph—even a telegraph that connects continents otherwise divided by great oceans—and still later ones have seen the telephone disputing with the telegraph its claims to usefulness in the service of man.

With respect to the marine steam engine, the fact is not quite so impressive, it having been in use for some years before the locomotive had become familiar, but the reign has witnessed mighty advances over what had been previously done. Screw propellers were not in successful operation until the year of the Queen's ascension, and it was in the year 1838 that the Great Western startled most living men by steaming from Bristol to this city in eighteen days. Closely related to the growth of England's cotton industries has been this vast improvement in the methods of transporting the raw material. Instead of slow-sailing ships, there have been fast steamers; instead of weeks, voyages have become matters of days. Steam, moreover, as a stationary motive power has made such strides forward that the inventions of Arkwright, Hargreaves, and others have become powers of vaster meaning to the cotton and woolen industries than ever was dreamed of by the men of an earlier reign. Skilled labor to guide these machines has been superseded by mechanical contrivances propelled by steam, so that the total cost of attendance upon a pair of self-acting mules carrying 2,000 spindles has been reduced to about $15 a week.

Connected by a natural link with these inventions has also been the expansion of the iron industries of England. Railways called for iron, other machinery called for it, and the use of iron, instead of wood in shipbuilding and other kinds of building brought about colossal transformations. In 1837 the total yearly output of crude iron in England was only about 1,000,000 tons. Now it is over 8,000,000 tons. Twenty years after 1837 an invention was applied in iron manufactures which has wrought great changes in the world. This was Sir Henry Bessemer's process for making steel by blowing air into molten pig iron. This process, supplemented by the Gilchrist-Thomas process, has caused the price of steel to be greatly reduced, so that steel competes with iron now for many purposes of construction, notably in railroad rails and building beams and girders.

To these inventions, and their influence on the convenience with which the burdens of life are borne, must be attributed the growth in England's population. Until the opening of the century fewer than 11,000,000 souls lived in Great Britain; this number by 1841 had become nearly 19,000,000, and it is now somewhere about 41,000,000. No less than 22,000,000 souls, or more than the total for 1801, have been added in the time of Victoria. With this growth of population there came, as was inevitable, greater demands on existing means of subsistence, followed by want and distress that gave such peculiar force to the anti-corn law agitation, of which record is made elsewhere in this article. Besides its effect on the case with which men obtained their daily bread, probably the most momentous results of the repeal of the corn laws were political. By means of that law was shattered the political power of the old landed interests of England. Combined with the great reform bills by which household suffrage has finally been secured for counties and boroughs alike, it has wrought a revolution in the political texture and capacities of the English people, only the more marvelous because of the peaceful methods by which it was acquired.

VICTORIAN LITERATURE.

If we turn now to the literature of this reign a noble and lasting output will be found, and under this head may be included books produced by men of science, like Darwin, Lyell, and Spencer, who have given us books as epoch-making as any the mind of man ever produced. It is not for contemporaries to say if the verse of Tennyson and the prose of Macaulay, Carlyle, and Thackeray will live with the corresponding products of the mind made by Pope or Dryden, by Fielding or Hume, in previous reigns; but we may assume with some confidence that the chances are good for a reasonable degree of immortality. Some of the great writers of a former age still lived on when Victoria came into her royal possessions. For the most part they had done their best work, however, and they properly belong to the last of the Georges. Among these were Wordsworth, who did not die until 1850; Southey, who died in 1843; Landor, who lived on until 1864; Moore, who died in 1852, and Campbell, in 1844.

Macaulay was thirty-seven years old at Victoria's accession, but he had not published any collected series of his essays, he had not published his "Lays," and more than ten years were to elapse before the first volumes of his "History" were to see the light. Tennyson was twenty-seven years old in the year 1827, and had been before the public with "Poems by Two Brothers." "Poems, Chiefly Lyrical," and the volume of 1833. He had been criticised with severity, and notably so by "Christopher North." For the next nine years he was to remain silent, but when, in 1842, he came forth again it was to win very general recognition as a poet of the finest order. The poetry of Mrs. Browning almost exclusively belongs to this reign, as also does that of her husband, "Pauline" had previously appeared without Browning's name; in 1836 he first attracted real attention by his "Paracelsus." Matthew Arnold's first success, the poem on Cromwell, dates from 1843. Swinburne was born in the year of Victoria's accession. Dickens's first volume, "Sketches by Boz," came out in 1836, and a year later Thackeray, then ambitious to be an artist and not an author, was offering to Dickens to undertake the illustrations for "Pickwick." Ere the genius of George Eliot should become known twenty years were to elapse. Carlyle had written many of his essays, his "Schiller," his "Sartor," and was then in the midst of his "French Revolution," but still waiting for the day when literature should raise him above actual want. He had arrived in London from Craigenputtock three years before, and had made his home in a house in that "remnant of genuine old Dutch-looking Chelsea" in which he was to die, a lonely and broken-hearted old man, more than forty years afterward.

SUCCESSION TO THE THRONE.

No Interregnum Under the British Constitution—The Sovereign Never Dies.

Albert Edward, Prince of Wales for more than 59 years, is now "Edward VII., by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India." There is no such thing as an interregnum in the unwritten British Constitution, the force of which is by no means lessened by the fact that it exists as a "legal fiction."

In spite of the fact that from the moment of Queen Victoria's death the Prince of Wales became King, with all the powers and rights attached to the monarchy, the ceremony of coronation possesses in the British régime considerably more importance than in some monarchies. Queen Victoria succeeded to the throne on June 20, 1837, and was crowned on June 28, 1838. About the same interval of time will probably be allowed to intervene before Edward VII. is crowned.

The ceremony of coronation, in the case of the English Kings, grew out of the other ceremony of anointing the monarch, with which it is now combined. The most significant portion of the ceremony as it has existed in England for the last 200 years is the solemn "coronation oath." This is virtually a double pledge—a pledge by the King that he will preserve the established laws, and a pledge by the people, represented by some great functionary, that they will be faithful subjects.

The modern form of the coronation oath dates from the coronation of William and Mary, in 1689. In that year the oath was made at every point more precise and explicit than before, and in particular there was added an express engagement on the part of the sovereign to maintain "the laws of God, the true profession of the Gospel, and the Protestant reformed religion as it is established by law." It provides, further, that the King shall preserve to the Bishops and clergy, and the churches committed to their charge, all their actual and legal rights and privileges. The intention of this pledge is to restrain the King in his administrative, not his legislative, capacity. It binds him to preserve the established law, not to refuse his assent to any future modification of that law that may be made by Parliament.

The oath which is administered to the new monarch immediately after his succession is another form of the coronation oath.

It will thus be seen that, while the new King has succeeded to the throne, the coronation that must follow will set the seal on his accession. This state of things is different from the custom in many European countries, where the ceremony of coronation seems gradually to be dying out. Kaiser Wilhelm has never been crowned; neither have the rulers of Greece and Portugal.

The accession of the new ruler of the United Kingdom will be followed immediately by the "proclamation," when the King will appear, probably at Buckingham Palace, and a herald will announce that there is a new King. The Mayors of all cities will also announce the event. Certain oaths will be administered to Edward VII. at his first Privy Council, but the "coronation oath" can only be administered at the ceremony which gives it its name.

Although the succession to the Crown is automatic, this is not the case with the transference of the title of Prince of Wales. Therefore, that title belongs to the sovereign, having been founded by a historic act, which is too well known to need recapitulation. However, the title "Prince of Wales" has been taken by the eldest son of the sovereign for many hundreds of years, and there is not the slightest doubt that one of the first official acts of Edward VII. will be to confer it by royal letters patent upon the Duke of York.

In the few hours or days between Queen Victoria's death and his elevation to the Princedom of Wales, the true title of the heir apparent to the throne will be Duke of Cornwall. Unlike the princedom, this title passes automatically, and carries with it the income of £50,000 a year, one of the principal sources of revenue of the heir to the throne.

The new ruler of the United Kingdom was born on Nov. 9, 1841, and created Prince of Wales on Dec. 4 of the same year.

AMERICA'S DEBT TO VICTORIA.

The Queen Averted War Over the Mason-Slidell Incident of the Rebellion.

At one time Queen Victoria, acting on the advice of the Prince Consort, was virtually the sole means of preventing war between Great Britain and the United States.

Sympathy in Great Britain, at the opening of the civil war in this country, was decidedly with the South. When the first few months of hostilities showed a check to the Union forces, there were boasts that the rebels would win, and the British sympathizers were only awaiting an opportunity to show something more effective than sympathy.

It was at this time that serious cause for friction occurred between the Northern States and Great Britain. Mason and Slidell, the Confederate envoys, were taken from the British ship Trent on the high seas by the San Jacinto and held as prisoners. Secretary of the Navy Welles declared that the action of Capt. Wilkes of the San Jacinto had the "emphatic approval of the Navy Department," and the House of Representatives voted a resolution of thanks to Capt. Wilkes.

The action was taken in the United Kingdom as a deliberate violation of neutrality and an expression of hostility. The papers demanded war, and even the British public was roused to the extent of holding public meetings calling for revenge. Preparations for war were made, and to Earl Russell, the Foreign Secretary, was intrusted the task of formulating a virtual ultimatum.

His lordship prepared the demand, and wrote it in language so insulting that a tenth-rate power could hardly have acceded to it without losing all trace of self-respect. The demand had to be submitted to her Majesty, who had insisted from the time she began to reign on all her rights as sovereign, particularly in questions of international importance.

The Prince Consort was lying ill unto death. When the dispatch arrived, the Queen, worn out by nursing her husband, had gone out for a short drive. The demand to the United States, which called for the return of the Confederates within seven days, got into the hands of the Prince Consort. He took a pen, for the last time in his life. He changed the demand so that it could be complied with by this country without sacrifice of dignity. When the Queen returned she made up her mind instantly to consent to the dispatch of the demand only in the form to which it had been altered by Prince Albert. The arguments of Lord Russell were of no avail, and he had to give way.

What followed is a matter of history. A friendly answer was returned by the United States, and the two Confederate envoys were given up. What would have happened without the counsel of Albert and the firm stand of Victoria can only be surmised. The tone of Lord Russell's demand before it was modified may be judged by another dispatch to the British Minister to Washington, which was not submitted to the Queen:

"Should Mr. Seward ask for delay," wrote the Earl, "you will consent to a delay not exceeding seven days. If, at the end of that time, no answer is given, or if any other answer is given except that of compliance with the demands of her Majesty's Government, your lordship is instructed to leave Washington with all the members of your legation and to repair immediately to London. You will also communicate Mr. Seward's answer to Vice Admiral Milne (of the British Atlantic Squadron) and to the Governors of Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Jamaica, Bermuda, and such other of her Majesty's possessions as may be within your reach."

THE QUEEN'S WEALTH.

Few Persons Know Its Amount—Estimated at £6,000,000.

Only the confidential clerks at the famous old London banking house of Coutts & Co., with the Keeper of the Privy Purse and one or two unofficial friends of Queen Victoria, are aware of the extent of the fortune which is left by her Majesty. There is no doubt, however, that this fortune is a very large one, some estimates placing it as high as £6,000,000.

Until the later years of her life, after the death of the Prince Consort, the Queen was unable to save much. After her bereavement, the comparative retirement in which she lived made an enormous reduction in expenses possible, while her private estate was augmented from other sources. Her father, the Duke of Kent, left her nothing. Indeed, he was on the verge of bankruptcy during the greater portion of his life. From Prince Albert the Queen inherited the greater portion of his estate of £900,000, while a fortune of £500,000 came to her in an entirely unexpected manner. There was a certain private gentleman named John Camden Nield, the son of a goldsmith who had been employed by George III., who lived in a miserly fashion solely that he might leave his accumulated wealth to Queen Victoria. He bequeathed to her every penny he possessed, leaving his relatives unprovided for. This injustice the Queen did not tolerate. She accepted the gift, but provided that annuities be paid to Mr. Nield's relatives. It is said that the interest on the £500,000 has been allowed to accumulate, until the amount has been nearly doubled.

The allowance made by Parliament to the Queen has been £385,000 a year, of which amount nearly £70,000 was for personal expenses and unappropriated. The revenues from the Duchy of Lancaster brought her Majesty's income up to over £100,000 annually, the proportion of which that has been saved in the last thirty years can only be guessed at.

The value of the presents given to her Majesty on various occasions has been enormous. Especially valuable were the gifts she received at her two jubilees. Her private plate alone is said to be worth considerably over £400,000.

The disposition to be made of the Queen's estate is as much a mystery as the size of the estate itself. It is regarded as probable that little or nothing will go to the King, as he will be provided for by Parliament, which may also pay his debts, if they are of an extent calculated to embarrass him.

"MAYOR" STEINGUT INDIGNANT.

Accused by Bar Association Investigator of Posing as a Lawyer.

Simon Steingut, known among his clientele as the "Mayor of Second Avenue," and who also bears a reputation as a counselor at law along the portion of that thoroughfare near Houston Street, was haled before Magistrate Mayo in the Centre Street Court yesterday by a representative of the Bar Association, who questioned his right to hang out a shingle stating that the occupant of the office within was a law practitioner and claim collection. The "Mayor" was highly indignant over his summons to court.

William H. Smith of 48 Wall Street, a Bar Association investigator, claimed that Steingut represented himself to be a duly learned disciple of Blackstone, whereas the facts in the case did not bear out the representation.

Mr. Steingut drew himself up proudly, and addressing Magistrate Mayo said:

"May it please your Honor, I have been in the real estate business for thirty years. I have had honors showered on me. Everybody in this courtroom knows me. I refer your Honor to Mayor Connolly of Poverty Hollow, who will certify to my standing in my community. The Mayor is my closest and intimate friend. He will tell you that I never held myself out as a lawyer, and that I never appeared in any court as such. I am a notary, and as such draw legal papers strictly within my rights."

Deputy Assistant District Attorney Monks produced a diagram of the Mayor's office, showing signs setting forth that claims would be collected, and that the place was a law office. Steingut said that the signs belonged to a man named Hegeman who had formerly shared his office. Upon promise to remove the signs he was allowed to go.

Bicycle Dealer Shoots Himself.

Archie Clark, a bicycle dealer residing at 50 Franklyn Street, Jamaica, committed suicide yesterday by shooting himself with a revolver. Besides his bicycle business Clark was in the artificial palm business with his brother in Brooklyn. He had been in poor health for several weeks and had become despondent. He was an Odd Fellow, a Forester, and a member of the local fire company.

FLED WITH STRICKEN CHILD.

Mrs. Lenich, While Trying to Escape Health Officers, May Have Spread Smallpox in the Bronx.

Mrs. Emma Lenich of 103 Beach Avenue, Borough of the Bronx, made things interesting for a corps of Board of Health Inspectors yesterday. Incidentally, she may also have spread the smallpox extensively in the Bronx Borough. The possible contagion she spread depends a great deal upon the resisting power of a carful of passengers, who rode with her on Monday evening, when she was trying to flee from the dreaded attachés of the Board of Health, with her four-year-old son Frank in her arms, who was at the time a fit subject for North Brother Island.

Mrs. Lenich's little daughter, six years old, died of smallpox at North Brother Island several days ago. The woman imagined that had she kept the child at home it would have lived. When, therefore, her son was stricken with the same disease, she determined to run away with him.

The Inspectors, after a hard day's work yesterday, finally found the car on which Mrs. Lenich rode. They vaccinated the motorman and conductor, who, in spite of the danger of the disease to which they had been exposed, resisted the precautionary measure vigorously. The passengers who rode in the car are beyond the reach of the sanitary squad. Dr. Frederick H. Dillingham, Assistant Sanitary Superintendent, said last evening that a clue which would possibly lead to the whereabouts of Mrs. Lenich had been discovered, but that she had not yet been apprehended.

The incident caused Dr. Dillingham to speak of the recent smallpox epidemic. He said that it had not yet sufficiently subsided for people to stop being vaccinated. There have now been 138 cases of smallpox during the term of the recent prevalence of the disease, 13 of which have proved fatal. Up to the present time, 15,709 persons have been vaccinated. All should be, Dr. Dillingham insisted yesterday.

Frank Lenich, the husband of the woman, was arrested last night. He was held in $500 bail for trial by Magistrate Mott, in the Morrisania Court, for violating Section 107 of the Sanitary Code.

Dr. William Polley of the Board of Health stated during the afternoon that Mrs. Lenich disappeared with her child while an ambulance was hurrying to her home. She was seen crossing several vacant lots to take a Third Avenue car. Afterward she is known to have transferred to a car which took her and her child to Fifth Street, William's Bridge. During the day the Inspectors searched nearly every house in Wakefield and William's Bridge trying to locate the woman, but had not been successful at a late hour last night.

GRAND JURY INDICTS HERTZ.

Charges of Grand Larceny and Forgery Made Against the Absconder.

Sigmund Hertz, the defaulting confidential clerk of Stiefel, Sachs & Co. of 18 Walker Street, now in the custody of the London police awaiting the arrival of Detective Frazee of the Central Office with extradition papers, has been indicted by the Grand Jury for grand larceny and forgery.

Four separate charges are made against the absconder, one of larceny of property valued at $100, and three of forgery of checks given to tailors and shopkeepers amounting to several hundred dollars. Deputy Assistant District Attorney Gans is preparing the extradition papers, and they will be forwarded to the Governor for his signature to-day. It will be necessary to secure international extradition papers also, after which Hertz will be brought back to this country and placed on trial.

LAWYER ARRESTED FOR $1.

Charge of Larceny Against Him Dismissed by Magistrate.

Aaron Kahn, a lawyer, was arrested at his home, 1,726 Madison Avenue, yesterday, by Detective Feeney of the Centre Street Court squad, on a warrant charging him with the larceny of $1.

Albert H. New was the complainant. He told the Court that on Nov. 17 last he gave Kahn a dollar for a yearly subscription to a publication issued in Detroit. Never receiving the publication, he made complaint to Elmer M. Beach, one of the publishers. Beach came to New York and appeared in court against Kahn. He stated that numerous similar complaints had been made against the lawyer, who represented the publication, and that on Oct. 27 last Kahn was officially notified that his services would no longer be needed.

The latter admitted receiving the dollar, and stated that he had retained it in lieu of commissions due him. He denied having received the notice of dismissal, and showed letters subsequent to the date of the note of dismissal instructing him to continue in the work of soliciting subscriptions.

Magistrate Mayo held that Kahn had authority to make collections for the paper, and dismissed the charge against him.

CHIMNEY WAS KNOCKED DOWN.

In Consequence Two Women Who Were a Block Away Were Injured.

A big blast of powder used in knocking down a chimney of an old building at One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street and Railroad Avenue yesterday morning, not only knocked down the chimney, as was intended, but also sent a shower of bricks all over the district; and knocked down two women who were passing along the street a block away. Many residents seated in their houses in the neighborhood were panic stricken by having brickbats suddenly come through the windows and roll around parlors and kitchens. Several men passing through the streets several blocks distant had bricks whizzing about their heads, and pugnacious individuals were lurking about the neighborhood for several minutes, looking for supposed antagonists who had thrown bricks at them. Windows in nearly every house in the neighborhood were smashed either by bricks or the concussion.

Miss May Fink of 420 East One Hundred and Forty-eighth Street and Miss Louise Reinhardt of the same address were walking through Railroad Avenue when Miss Fink was hit by a brick and cut in the forehead and eye. Miss Reinhardt was hit by two bricks and cut in the forehead and on the body. They were attended by an ambulance surgeon, but refused to go to a hospital.

Foreman John Furcell, who set off the too-vigorous blast, was arrested, but was later discharged in the Harlem Police Court.

DAVIS IN THE TOMBS.

Mystery Surrounding the Death of Margaret Travis, Not Cleared Up.

The mystery surrounding the death of Margaret Travis, who was found dead in a room with her fiancé, Clarence M. Davis, on Sunday, was not cleared up yesterday. Davis was seemingly insane when he was found in the room beside the body of the dead girl, and the police say they are now more certain than ever that he was shamming.

When he was arraigned yesterday in the Harlem Police Court before Magistrate Zeller, Davis was perfectly rational. He declined to make any statements as to how the girl had died, and was remanded to the Coroner. Later Coroner Bausch sent him to the Tombs to await the result of the chemical analyses of the organs of the dead girl. Before the chemists have made their reports to the Coroner nothing further can be done to prove how the girl met her death.

Not to Join Washington Parade.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 22.—At a meeting of the Faculty last night it was decided not to accept the invitation to send a body of students to represent the university in the inaugural parade and ball at Washington, on the ground that it lies outside the functions of the university to send its students away at a very busy time of the year to participate in public parades and social festivities.

Strikers at Nixon's Shipyard Win.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Jan. 22.—The strike at Lewis Nixon's Elizabethport shipyard ended this morning. The men won. They demanded that the non-union ship carpenters employed in the yard should either join the union or be dismissed. The Grievance Committee, which submitted this proposition to Mr. Nixon, were ordered out of the office and discharged. This morning the non-union carpenters joined the union, while the members of the Grievance Committee were all reinstated. Then the 200 strikers marched into the shipyard in a body and resumed work.

DANCE HALL TEST CASE.

Argument to be Heard on the Legality of Opening Such Resorts on Sunday.

Lewis Waldron of Waldron Brothers, proprietors of the dance hall at 216 West One Hundred and Tenth Street, was arraigned in the West Side Police Court yesterday afternoon for a violation of Section 218 of the Penal Code, which forbids the opening of dance halls on Sunday. Waldron and his brother Edward were present in the police court on a subpoena obtained by Policeman James Haggerty of Inspector Grant's staff. A representative of Edward Austin, who operates the dance hall at the southwest corner of One Hundred and Tenth Street and Broadway, was also present. These places are in the district generally known as "Little Coney Island," against which the Riverside Drive and Morningside Heights Association has been proceeding for some time. Several members of the association were present in court, but took no active part in the proceedings.

The Waldrons were represented by Lawyer C. C. Levenson. Policeman Haggerty said that last Sunday night he entered the place of the Waldrons and found public dancing in progress in violation of the statute. He stated that he had the men summoned merely to give them notice that they were violating the law. Lawyer Levenson said the men had a right under many Supreme Court rulings and under the charter to have dancing at these places on Sunday night.

"These men are summoned here," said the Magistrate, "that they may be notified that they are violating the law. If they choose to take the warning, well and good. If they continue and the officers present evidence against them of further violation, then I will issue warrants for their arrest."

Mr. Levenson demanded that the matter should have a hearing on its merits. He said he could prove by recent rulings of the Supreme Court that dancing was a pastime and allowable. The Magistrate then caused a warrant to be issued for Lewis Waldron and he was paroled until Saturday, when Lawyer Levenson will file a brief and argue the case. The case is looked upon as the most important that has yet come up affecting the dance halls of the city.

"THE QUEEN, GOD BLESS HER."

That of which "the memory of man runneth not to the contrary" is literally "immemorial." But for the arts of writing and reading it would be so to all intents and purposes, as it still is to the inhabitants of savage countries, and the untaught inhabitants of civilized countries, who have nothing behind their own memories but vague and uncertain tradition. And in this sense the "record reign" of Queen VICTORIA is of immemorial antiquity. On the occasion of her diamond jubilee Sir WILLIAM HARCOURT said in the House of Commons that he was one of the few members of that House who were, unfortunately, old enough to remember the Queen's coronation. Practically the memory of no active servant of the Queen, political, diplomatic, naval, or military, "runneth to the contrary" of the time since she has been the Queen. No one of them recalls the time when a patriotic prayer for the safety, honor, and welfare of the British realms was not most readily expressed in the familiar toast, "The Queen. God bless her."

There is no head of a State left living of whom this can be said. There is none who in a like degree symbolizes and incarnates the sovereignty. To us, with our quadriennial change of the Chief Magistracy, the flag is the chosen and permanent symbol, which was before any of us and will be after all of us. And it was as the incarnate and immemorial Majesty of England that the Queen came more and more to be regarded, as her reign stretched beyond the precedents and her life beyond the allotted span of humankind. She stood, in the minds of her people, for all that they had achieved during the latter half of the nineteenth century, and a decade in addition of the former half. And so during her lifetime she grew to be not merely a historical figure, as she truly was, but a remote and mythical figure to the British imagination, and in her own person, as it were, to sum up the secular glories of the race. And this impression was deepened by the retirement she had imposed upon herself during almost forty years of widowhood, so that each of her rare public appearances became, for the British Nation, a kind of avatar.

There could be no more impressive reminder than this venerable figure of the continuity of British history. It was fortunate that her title to the throne should have been comparatively modern, a little more than a century and a half old at the time of her accession, a little less than two centuries and a quarter at the time of her death. And it was unquestionably popular. No treaty could have dared to plead the divine right of Kings in favor of a title so palpably wrenched from its lineal order as was that to the British throne by the Act of Settlement of 1680. There could be no better combination than this of a most ancient and royal pedigree, a lineage almost "lost in the twilight of fable," and of a recent and "Constitutional" title for the sovereignty of a people so conservative at once and so progressive as the British, so deeply rooted in the past and so widely spreading in the present, and for their sovereignty in times of political democratization, as well as of industrial and territorial expansion. The historian HALLAM makes an impressive statement of the facts in a passage written ten years before she came to the throne:

> According to the tenor and intention of the Act of Settlement, all prior claims of inheritance, save that of the issue of King WILLIAM and the Princess ANNE being set aside and annulled, the Princess SOPHIA became the source of a new royal line. The throne of England and Ireland, by virtue of the paramount will of Parliament, stands entailed upon the heirs of her body, being Protestants. In them the right is as truly hereditary as it ever was in the PLANTAGENETS or the TUDORS. But they derive it not from those ancient families. The blood, indeed, of CEDRIC and of the Conqueror flows in the veins of his present Majesty. Our EDWARDS and HENRYS illustrate the almost unrivaled splendor and antiquity of the House of BRUNSWICK. But they have transmitted no more right to the allegiance of England than BONIFACE of Este or HENRY the Lion. That rests wholly on the Act of Settlement, and resolves itself into the sovereignty of the Legislature.

The aged Queen and Empress lived to become one of the most noteworthy landmarks in the world. She was more than a landmark. How much more we may gather from obscure and irresponsible gossip, but we cannot certainly know until the documentary history of her reign comes to publication. But we do know that her direct influence upon British policy has been considerable, and her indirect, or social, influence enormous. One of the most interesting chapters of BAGEHOT'S "English Constitution" is that which sets forth what the titular sovereign still may do. And this was brought to all men's notice when Mr. GLADSTONE successfully invoked the royal prerogative to effect the abolition of purchase in the army after he had vainly endeavored to effect it by parliamentary legislation.

That the Queen's great influence has been for good nobody will be disposed to deny. Her own personal notions of the dignity of the monarchy were very high. They were, in truth, more North German than English. But the English loved her none the less for that. And they loved her all the more for the glimpses which she vouchsafed them, in her published journals, of the simplicity, what might be called the "bourgeoisie," of the royal "domestic circle," which was so clearly a home. These revelations were regarded at the time as indiscretions by political critics, who did not perceive that they were more effective than any more discreet and guarded disclosures could have been for the purpose of endearing her to the British public. And she had an equally happy inspiration of abdicating her royalty in time of trouble, and of speaking out of pure womanliness. Twice she had occasion to express most unofficial and most womanly sympathy with the widows of murdered Presidents of the United States, and both times she discharged that task so as to endear herself to all American women. Doubtless her sex was not merely an immunity for herself, but a safeguard for order, in more than one troublous season of British politics, insomuch that it became very clear that the Salic law had no application to modern and constitutional monarchies. But it was not merely the fact of her sex, but the tact of her sex that so often stood Great Britain in good stead. It was reserved for a visiting American to give expression to the personal qualities by which Queen VICTORIA enhanced the adventitious advantages of her position when, at a banquet in London, he praised "her queenliness as a woman and her womanliness as a Queen." So say we all of us!

THE KING OF ENGLAND.

"The Queen is dead; long live the King." It were idle to hope that human nature should abolish or suspend itself because the most beloved of titular sovereigns has departed this life. Already we may be sure that, even in the midst of a deep and prevailing grief, the British people are beginning to wonder "what difference it will make"; what manner of sovereign will be the mature man who has waited so many years for the sovereignty to which he was born heir apparent almost sixty years ago.

It would be almost grotesquely indecent to bear too hard upon the youthful indiscretions which may have been committed by the man who for these three-score years has been known as the Prince of WALES, and who is henceforth to be known as EDWARD the Seventh, King of Great Britain and Ireland, Emperor of India, Defender of the Faith, and so forth. It is always to be remembered that, as HALLAM says, Princes can have no private life. Their sowing of youthful wild oats must be carried on in the glare of "that fierce light which beats upon a throne," and which was never before so fierce or so unremitting as now. What a private person can do in silence becomes public intelligence when it is done by the heir to the British throne or indeed by "royalty" in any degree. And then, again, the social influence of royalty is so great that those who share it are not held to the ordinary standards of behavior. Add to these considerations those which have been so well stated by BAGEHOT, with the combined insight and circumspection that make his "English Constitution" so remarkable a book:

> Fourthly, we have come to regard the crown as the head of our morality. The virtues of Queen VICTORIA and the virtues of GEORGE III. have sunk deep into the popular heart. We have come to believe that it is natural to have a virtuous sovereign, and that the domestic virtues are as likely to be found on a throne as they are eminent when there. But a little experience and less thought show that royalty cannot take credit for domestic excellence. Neither GEORGE I. nor GEORGE II., nor WILLIAM IV. was a pattern of family merit; GEORGE IV. was a model of family demerit. The plain fact is that, to a disposition of all others most likely to go wrong, to an excitable disposition, the place of a constitutional King has greater temptations than almost any other, and fewer suitable occupations than almost any other. All the world and all the glory of it, whatever is most attractive, whatever is most seductive, has always been offered to the Prince of WALES of the day, and always will be. It is not rational to expect the best virtue where temptation is applied in the most trying form at the frailest time of human life. The occupations of a constitutional monarch are grave, formal, important, but never exciting; they have nothing to stir eager blood, awaken high imagination, work off wild thoughts. On men like GEORGE III., with a predominant taste for business occupations, the routine duties of constitutional royalty have doubtless a calming and chastening effect. The insanity with which he struggled, and in many instances struggled very successfully, during many years, would probably have burst out much oftener but for the sedative effect of sedulous employment. But how few Princes have ever felt the anomalous impulse for work; how uncommon is that impulse anywhere; how little are the circumstances of Princes calculated to foster it; how little it can be relied on as an ordinary breakwater to their habitual temptations! Grave and careful men may have domestic virtues on a constitutional throne, but even these fail sometimes, and to imagine that men of more eager temperament will commonly produce them is to expect grapes from thorns and figs from thistles.

It is highly unlikely that the Prince, now become King, ever read BAGEHOT'S book, or would have taken the least interest in it if he had. His younger brother LEOPOLD, who died sixteen years ago, may have taken in this and other like remarks concerning the whole duty of Princes, as inculcated by the literary world, from MACCHIAVELLI down. But it does not in the least follow that Prince LEOPOLD would have been a "more available candidate" for the throne than his less literate elder brother. Rather the contrary, even though BAGEHOT, in the same study from which we have quoted, eulogizes the late Prince Consort as a person who had in him the makings of the very best kind of Constitutional monarch. But that we may take leave to doubt. If, like wisdom, the Prince Consort is to be justified of his children, he is more likely to be justified of his first born than he would have been of the Duke of ALBANY, who so much more resembled himself. And it was a wise instinct that led the new King to announce, long before his accession, that he would take the style of "EDWARD," which has not been employed by the Majesty of England since the short-lived monarch of that name who is remembered chiefly by a prayer book upon which certain Ritualists of the Anglican Church rely, rather than to retain the name which would bring him into immediate and invidious comparison with "ALBERT the Good."

For, in fact, it is not a man of the closet but a man of the world that the English desire as the figurehead of their State. And it is eminently a man of the world that they are going to get. And in saying this we do not mean in the least to disparage the new elderly sovereign, but contrariwise to compliment him. If he were such an irrepressibly active-minded person as his nephew, the German Emperor, he would constitute a standing threat against the peace of his realm. If he were a dreamy scholar, such as has not sate upon the throne of England since JAMES the First, he would run the risk of bringing the monarchy as well as himself into contempt. Neither of these two types would do at all. There is no reason to doubt that the new King will do very well. It is to be borne in mind, in the first place, that the King of England must not have any political opinions. This prohibition applies still more strictly, if possible, to the heir to the throne. Those of us who do not ourselves remember, at any rate have read, what a scrape his father got himself into by uttering the apparently academic and, from the point of view of a German Prince, even platitudinous remark that "constitutional government was on its trial." The Prince of WALES, as we may be pardoned for continuing to call him, may or may not have enough political perception to have formulated that remark. But he would certainly have had enough political perception to have kept it to himself.

In fact, as Prince of WALES, he has had the social duties of the Queen to perform for almost forty years, or ever since her widowhood. And he has performed them with perfect efficiency. They demand regularity and industry. "Punctuality is the politeness of Princes." He has always displayed that princely virtue. They require also an unfailing tact. He has never failed in that. He may be trusted to do "decently and in order" whatever royal duties are to devolve upon him. If he had an ambition to do more, to impress his own personal stamp upon the great events of his reign, he would be likely to be a more mischievous and a less innocent and beneficent constitutional monarch than he may be fairly expected to prove.

BEATING THE BUSH.

"When night dogs run, all sorts of deer are chased." So when the tax man starts out with his beaters and crashes through the forest on a hunt for assessable personal property, the heavens are darkened by the innumerable multitude of wild fowl that are flushed by his uproar, but among them are seen strange, surprising shapes before which the most relentless hunter would lower his gun in wonder. The list published yesterday from the official record of personalty assessments levied this year by the Department of Taxes and Assessments probably was the cause of more innocent mirth in this community than the most gifted professional humorist could have occasioned by the launching of his best joke. In that list Mr. FEITNER truly pressed down the mighty and exalted the humble, for gentlemen with hardly a free dollar to their names found themselves thrust into the society of open and notorious millionaires whose fortunes had been suddenly apocopated to effect the unusual association.

But who can blame Mr. FEITNER? He is doing his best with the light given to him. Why shouldn't the tax assessor scurry about in pursuit of missing personalty when the Controller of the State of New York holds this discourse in his report to the Legislature, dated Jan. 9:

> The attention of your honorable body is again called to the great disparity between the assessed valuations of real and personal property, as appears from the returns of the Supervisors last year. The assessed valuation of real property was $4,811,563,059, while the assessed valuation of personal property was but $649,709,693.
>
> * * * Attention is specially called to the fact that while in 1870 personal property bore but 22 per cent. of the burden of taxation, seemingly a small proportion, in 1900 it bore but half as much, (11 per cent.,) which is certainly out of all proportion to the known increase of the vast amount of personal property in this State.

These statements are all true, but they inspire, and it is their purpose to inspire, tax assessors all over the State to redouble their exertions to get upon their lists all the personal property owned within their jurisdiction. Always and invariably the results of their zeal take the form of the list given out by Mr. FEITNER—a grotesque guesswork, a burlesque performance of the assessors' sworn duty. Yet it is doubtless the very best he can do, unless by adopting the suggestion that he should assess everybody at one million dollars and let justice be done in the swearing-off he might get at a sounder result.

But there is and in the nature of things can be no sound and just result in the assessment of personal property for taxation, because of the fact that it is in most cases susceptible of perfectly successful concealment, while by far the greater part of it is not property at all, but only evidence of property. The attempt to tax personal property has been a failure through all the ages. It has been a fountain of wrong, inequality, and injustice, and those who suffer most by it are the very persons who are least able to bear an undue share of the burden of taxation. Mr. FEITNER'S $3,000,000,000 of personal assessments in New York will shrink to about $500,000,000 in the swearing-off process, that is, to a sum that will include property in estates, in trust, or in other forms of which official cognition has already been taken, and such part of the possessions of living owners as they are willing to avow and have taxed. Of the vast amount that will escape some ought to pay and some ought not to pay taxes. There is no way to ascertain or get at either class.

This is, of course, as has been demonstrated hundreds of times, a most unsound and unscientific system of taxation. It has become worse than unjust—it has become ridiculous. The Legislature, however, refuses to see the light or listen to reason. It goes on year after year tinkering away at the old clumsy hulk of our tax laws, and trying to devise ways to accomplish the impossible. The present Legislature has before it the Chamber of Commerce bill, introduced by Senator ELSBERG, a short and simple measure that would be the beginning of reform if it could be passed. It provides a way for establishing local option in taxation, leaving the counties free to determine for themselves how and on what basis of assessment they would raise their State and local taxes. But somebody has introduced a bill taxing corporations one-tenth of 1¼ per cent. on their share capital, and we have no doubt that the legislators will, according to their notions, find such merit in that measure that they will give scant consideration to the Elsberg bill.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—In his message transmitting to the Legislature the report of the Charter Revision Commission, Gov. ODELL says that "What the people desire is fewer officers, lower taxes, and better government." This can hardly be regarded as a happy statement of the situation. The order in which the Governor places the objects of popular desire has beyond question the fault of placing them in an order exactly the reverse of that in which they exist in the public mind, and the yearning for better government is so vastly stronger than are those for lower taxes and fewer officers that it would take something more than the mere relegation of the latter to the end of the list adequately to express it. What the people desire is good government, and they are both able and willing to pay for it, even to the extent, if necessary, of contributing more taxes than are now collected and of increasing the number of officials. It is only because they know that the present taxes are expended neither honestly nor wisely that they rage over their size, and it is only because an appreciable fraction of the men now in office misuse their powers instead of earning their salaries that there is complaint about their number. Col. WARING increased instead of diminishing the cost of cleaning the city streets, and he added to, rather than subtracted from, the number of subordinates that was bequeathed to him by his predecessor—but he really cleaned the streets, and the people who had to pay the bills, far from complaining about the drain upon their pockets, vehemently declared their content with his administration while he was alive, and since his death have aureoled him as a sort of municipal saint. The Governor should certainly rearrange his list of what we want, and he will make no grave mistake if he shortens it to a single item—good government. That attained, the taxes cannot be too large or the number of officials excessive, since in either case the government would not be good.

—We are receiving so many and such vehement letters, accusing the occupants of theatre box offices of habitual and systematic insolence toward the amusement-seeking and ticket-buying public upon whose favor the bread and butter of those occupants and the very existence of the theatres they disserve depends, that it is evident the charges are well founded on facts, and not mere ebullitions of unreasonable impatience on the part of a few "cranks." The wild absurdity, from an economic point of view, of showing brutal discourtesy to generous patrons, who can cease to patronize without imposing upon themselves any other inconvenience than the very slight one of choosing some other form of amusement, is perfectly obvious, and the behavior of these particularly petty underlings, the best of whom could instantly be replaced by haphazard selection from any except the very lowest ranks in the army of the unemployed, is only to be explained on the theory that even their remote connection with the stage is close enough to infect them with that ludicrously exaggerated self-esteem which seems to be characteristic of "the profession." But, just as there are sanely modest actors, so there are courteous sellers of theatre tickets, and, as for those of them who are not, the way to mend their manners—or to secure their instant and deserved relegation to some such position as that of chambermaid in a livery stable—is to appeal from the haughty maltreatment of the man to the interested, but none the less sincere, politeness of his master; that is, of the manager who pays his salary. Letters to the newspapers are well enough in their way, but in this particular matter they can accomplish nothing except in so far as they call the attention of the theatre managers to the conduct of their unprofitable servants. And that were better done directly than indirectly. Clear evidence that a ticket-seller is acting in a way to decrease the sale of tickets will move any theatre manager to immediate action of the most effectual character. Whatever misapprehensions the managers may have as to their own importance, they are thoroughly awake to the true position of the man at the window, and, in their estimation, that man can commit no greater crime than to annoy or offend a potentially profitable public.

—Now that all prejudice against typewritten business letters has disappeared, and little of it is left even against personal communications put on paper in the same eye and labor saving way, it behooves every correspondent to perform the one task for which the antique pen is still always utilized—the signing of his name—with especial care. In the old days the reading of written proper names was always harder than that of the rest of a letter, where the context gave assistance, but one could usually puzzle them out, after a greater or less expenditure of time and temper, by comparing their hints at letters with similar signs in the known words that appeared above. In the case of the typewritten and hand-signed epistle resort to this expedient cannot be had, and the result is that oftener than now and then the recipient of a delightfully legible communication cannot even guess from whom it comes. This makes patience-wracking trouble, we know from experience, in newspaper offices, and doubtless it does the same thing in other places. The difficulty could be very easily remedied, even by those who are unable or unwilling to write their names plainly. All they need to do is to typewrite, or have typewritten, the signature in the proper place, and then to make under it for purposes of authentication the blind maze of lawless lines which suggests a name—if the reader knows what the name is. This is a little matter, but an important one, sometimes, and the considerate, that is the courteous, correspondent will bear it in mind, particularly as it imposes no extra labor on himself and takes a lot of it away from those to whom he writes.

—A hint as to the peculiarities that have endeared Mr. HUGH MCLAUGHLIN to the "plain people" of Brooklyn, and possibly an explanation of the extent and duration of his political power in that suburb which lies so near and yet so far from the metropolis, are supplied, we are inclined to believe, by a certain remark made by him this week when a reporter asked the aged statesman what opinion he held in regard to the movement so often and so inaccurately called Bishop POTTER'S anti-vice campaign. "I don't think about it," replied the auction-shop oracle. "When you have whisky for sale or beer on Sunday, and the Bishop sees it, it's vice, but when the beer and the whisky is champagne at the club in cut-glass decanters, the Bishop's got nothing to say." Reader speakers even than Bishop POTTER might well be stricken dumb on seeing, at the club or elsewhere, champagne in cut-glass decanters, but we have not quoted from the interview to bring out that point. The significant thing is that the mazing spectacle described was clearly visible to the mind's eye of the Wonder of Willoughby Street. That fact tells much, either about Mr. MCLAUGHLIN or about his associates, we hardly know which. Some might interpret it as demonstrating that both he and they are total abstainers, others that Brooklyn politicians have queer customs, and still others that said politicians consider it judicious to criticise, and even to condemn, people concerning whose habits and standards they have but the slightest and vaguest information.

THE ANTI-SPITTING CAMPAIGN.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Not long ago you printed a letter from me describing the behavior at variance with the clothes of a spitter in an elevated car, and my own flight from the doer and his doings. A few days later you printed another letter from a certain strong-minded J. M. W., reproaching me for "weakly retreating" from the expectorating dude, and holding up for my admiration and imitation the conduct of a "gentleman known to him" who always makes a point of calling the spitter's attention to the public regulations. Stricken to the lowest button of my conscience by this penetrating rebuke, and emulous of the noble example of J. M. W.'s gentleman friend, I seized the first opportunity to imitate his example, resulting in eloquent silence, uncomfortable wriggles, and temporary self-restraint on the part of the offender.

To-day (Sunday, Jan. 20), "A." states in THE TIMES that "no one seems to have the courage to make complaints except through the columns of some newspaper which is kind enough to print them." Your well-known acumen, Mr. Editor, will already have shown you the inference to be drawn from these apparently not very relevant facts, but, for the benefit of such of your readers as are less astute, I will point it out. "A." is mistaken. We are getting on, for we, the anti-spitters, are advancing from mere letter writing to action. Spurred by the noble example of J. M. W.'s gentleman friend, and by the consciousness of our own numbers as revealed by the letters in the papers, we are gathering courage to take a hand ourselves. Pretty soon we shall be numerous and confident enough to take a hand ourselves on all occasions, and, strong in the justice of our cause and the armor of public sentiment, to rout and overwhelm, and finally exterminate the public spitter. Let the good work go on. H. A. C.

Expectoration Nuisance in Cars.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The thanks of the public should be sent to Mr. Hardon for having Henry Nearman arrested for spitting on the floor of the car. For many months I repeatedly complained to conductors to tell men to stop spitting, but lately I have been obliged to stop doing so, as I was insulted by a man. It was only to-day that a man spat twice across a Broadway cable car, and no one remonstrated with him. I told the conductor to watch him, but I was afraid to do more. It seems that if men like Mr. Hardon would take up this anti-spitting crusade, and succeed in having each offender arrested and fined, some good might result from it. F.

Something to Think About.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial in Saturday's issue ought to give the friends of Grover Cleveland something to think about. The spokesman for the mutineers on Christopher Columbus's vessel the night before his memorable discovery of the New World, as you suggest, could well have used the language of Mr. Cleveland. And no doubt it would have had the same effect. The ship would have sailed right on; the discovery would have been made just the same.

Mr. Cleveland had his opportunity; he did not lack nerve on occasions. But his opportunity will not return. Most of our readers will be glad, I think, that it is so.

Another Property Holder's Protest.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letter in your paper of this date on "Rights of Property Holders," signed "A Sufferer," will be gladly noticed by many sufferers from the same grab game of the companies who trespass upon our property. I have had my chimneys and tin roof badly damaged by them, and there is no redress. Have we not a perfect right to cut their wires and throw them from our property? Let us have some information on this subject. ANOTHER SUFFERER.

TO THE QUEEN.

Revered, beloved—O you that hold
A nobler office upon earth
Than arms, or power of brain or birth
Could give the warrior Kings of old,

Victoria,—since your royal grace
To one of less desert allows
This laurel greener from the brows
Of him that uttered nothing base;

And should your greatness, and the care
That yokes with empire, yield you time
To make demand of modern rhyme
If aught of ancient worth be there;

Then—while a sweeter music wakes,
And thro' wild March the throstle calls,
Where all about your palace walls
The sun-lit almond blossom shakes—

Take, Madam, this poor book of song;
For tho' the faults were thick as dust
In vacant chambers, I could trust
Your kindness. May you rule us long,

And leave us rulers of your blood
As noble till the latest day!
May children of our children say,
"She wrought her people lasting good;

"Her Court was pure; her life serene;
God gave her peace; her land reposed;
A thousand claims to reverence closed
In her as Mother, Wife, and Queen;

"And statesmen at her council met
Who knew the seasons, when to take
Occasion by the hand, and make
The bounds of freedom wider yet

"By shaping some august decree,
Which kept her throne unshaken still,
Broad based upon her people's will,
And compassed by the inviolate sea."

SWEARING OFF TAXES

Office of the Department Crowded with Anxious People.

An Average of 400 Persons Every Day Ask to Have Personal Taxes Reduced.

The Department of Taxes and Assessments was crowded yesterday with people "swearing off" personal taxes. President Feitner and Commissioners Patterson, Salmon, and Sheehy, and many clerks were busy taking the oaths of people all day long as to personal holdings.

There is now an average each day at the Tax Department of 400 men and women who are anxious to be relieved from personal taxes or have them reduced. Chauncey M. Depew, Russell Sage, and a number of Tammany officials, nearly all of whom have been assessed for from $10,000 to $25,000, have been using their influence to have their assessments reduced. The same affidavits have to be made in every case and in nearly every instance the stereotyped questions are asked as to holdings in personal property. The original levy of about $3,000,000,000 will before May 1 be reduced to about $500,000,000. Last year individuals paid personal taxes on about $475,000,000 of property. The tax officials claim that this is very much less than the holdings in personal property of individuals in New York, but on account of the laws governing the taxation of personal property it is nearly impossible to make fair assessments.

The new bureau established by President Feitner for the purpose of ascertaining the personal wealth of New York's citizens and corporations has been at work for over six months trying to establish a fairer basis for the levying of personal assessments. The records of the county offices have been searched carefully, and "evidences of wealth" have been looked up.

President Feitner said yesterday:

"It is very difficult to find out what personality a man owns, for his apparent fortune may be offset by debts. Cornelius Vanderbilt, when he died, had $20,000,000 in debts, because he was able to borrow money at 4 per cent. and lend it at 7 per cent. You cannot tell whether the bulk of a man's property is of the untaxable kind. Nobody knows that any better than the experts of the Department of Taxes. Our experts was for fifteen years in the credit department of A. T. Stewart & Co., and he has made his valuations this year strictly according to the best information at hand."

The question as to what is personal property is now being discussed on every hand. Those assessed for personal taxes are in doubt whether certain holdings in stock of corporations are assessed. Probably the best definition of personal property taxable in New York is explained in a report of the Chamber of Commerce, as follows:

> The State of New York subjects to taxation all real property within the State, and all personal property situated or owned within the State, "unless exempt from taxation by law." The important exemptions are of seven kinds: Government property, property used exclusively for the public advantage, property employed in certain kinds of business, such as American registered vessels, savings banks deposits, the accumulation of domestic life insurance companies, accumulations of co-operative or assessment loan associations, and personal property in excess of $100,000 of any mutual life insurance company incorporated in New York before April 10, 1849; any demand belonging to a non-resident deposited in the State for collection, imported goods in original packages, United States bonds, and other exemptions which are made with a design to prevent the burden of taxation from being unduly heavy on those not able to bear it easily. This includes, among other things, school and other books not exceeding $50 in value; a specified number of certain domestic animals, necessary bedding, wearing apparel, kitchen and table ware, the tools of a mechanic not exceeding $25 in value; a householder's furniture, tools, teams, professional instruments, &c., not exceeding in value $250; the pay of a soldier, (except that of a commissioned officer,) pension money, &c. The real and personal property of an active or aged or invalid minister of the Gospel not exceeding $1,500 is also exempt.

An assessment of valuation of the personal property of a taxpayer for the purpose of taxation is substantially an assessment of the excess of the value of the taxpayer's personal property not exempt from taxation over the amount of his debts.

By statute, "the full value of all the taxable personal property owned by each person, respectively, after deducting the just debts owing to him," is the amount subject to taxation. Debt incurred for the purchase of shares of stock of corporations taxable on their capital can be offset, under a recent decision, against taxable personal property, but debts incurred for the purchase of imported goods in original packages cannot be used as an offset. The indebtedness available as an offset against the value of personal property is very large.

THE PITTSBURG ORCHESTRA.

Its First Concert at Carnegie Hall Last Night.

The Pittsburg Orchestra, which made its first visit to this city last Winter, found the experiment sufficiently encouraging to repeat this season, and accordingly the first of its two concerts took place last night in Carnegie Hall. The programme was as follows:

Overture, "Leonore," No. 3.....Beethoven
Aria, "Dove Sono".....Mozart
Symphony, "From the New World".....Dvorak
Symphonic poem, "Hero and Leander".....Herbert Songs—
"Mignon".....Liszt
"Serenade".....Strauss
Capriccio Espagnol.....Rimsky-Korsakoff

The singer was Mrs. Dorothy Harvey. The Pittsburg Orchestra is an interesting visitor. There may be some mild wonder in the city over against Coal Hill that we do not become more elated over its visits and its achievements, but this is a ponderous city, and the inertia of great masses is not easily overcome. Let it not be fancied, however, that we do not appreciate the value of the orchestra nor the abilities of its conductor. Victor Herbert is a well-schooled musician, a composer of talent, and he has shown conclusively that he possesses the qualifications of a conductor. While his orchestra is not composed of brilliant material in any department, and is a little weak in the wind choirs, (except the horns, which are excellent,) he has drilled it so that it plays very well. It is a great credit to the city from which it comes, a proof of its public spirit and its artistic taste, and in that city it must be a very important influence.

New York music lovers had last night a happy opportunity to study Mr. Herbert's conducting in the familiar Dvorak symphony. Let it be recorded with much pleasure that Mr. Herbert's reading was admirable. He has not forgotten the tempi, which he learned at first hand, and he has brought out the beauties of the work skillfully. Especially commendable is Mr. Herbert's control of the balance of tone. No significant melodic phrase in any part is ever covered, and there is always a fine clarity in his presentations. He has an excellent feeling for rhythm, and while he never exaggerates his accents he never blurs his outlines. A vigorous, masculine, temperamental reading was what he gave the symphony, and the few blemishes are not worth mentioning when the general results were so good.

Mr. Herbert's own symphonic poem, heard here for the first time, is thoroughly modern and well sustained in style. The opening passage, ingeniously scored, is intended to establish a picture, the moonlit, lonely sea, and the solitary figure of the expectant Hero. This passage might well be shortened; the flute figure becomes monotonous. Following a part devoted to a musical presentment of Hero's emotions come the arrival of Leander and a love scene, which, momentarily interrupted by a warning of fate, is developed with all the resources of the orchestra to a forcible tutti, designed to embody the throbbing passion of the lovers. Later come a storm and the drowning of Leander, after which the coda sets forth a sort of idealization of the love of the unhappy pair. While it cannot be said that the work gets at one's heart, for its thematic treatment is too fragmentary, it nevertheless establishes the proper moods and is very gorgeous in its instrumental color scheme. It was well played.

Mrs. Harvey disclosed a delightful quality of voice, but her attack is based on the stroke of the glottis and produces a very unsteady tone, at times almost a shake. Her tones might come a little further forward with advantage. She is as yet quite innocent of the Mozart style.

DE SOUZA AT THE CAPITAL.

The Titled Baritone Received with Enthusiasm—Miss Clemens's Debut.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—A large and fashionable audience, including many representatives of the Diplomatic Corps in Washington, this afternoon heard the Portuguese baritone singer, Marquis de Souza, in a concert at the Columbia Theatre, in which Miss Clara L. Clemens, daughter of Mark Twain, made her American début. Marquis de Souza justified his reputation as a phenomenal singer, displaying a voice of such prodigious volume and energy as to be scarcely comparable with that of any of the singers of the day.

He sang the prologue from "I Pagliacci," the ring of this toreador from "Carmen," and a brief monologue from Verdi's "Otello," besides some shorter selections, and was enthusiastically applauded. Miss Clemens, who is a slender and graceful brunette, with sufficient self-possession, met with a cordial reception, and her French and German songs were sung to the manifest satisfaction of the audience, which undoubtedly divided its interest between the new baritone and the new mezzo-soprano, Miss Mary Helen Howe.

Miss Ellison Van Hoose and Miss Marie Schale, the latter a Norwegian pianist of taste and skill, contributed to the success of the performance.

THE IRVING PLACE THEATRE.

There was a pretty little German Anna Held at the Irving Place Theatre last evening. She sang a chic little song, which was the real hit of the evening. Fräulein Gussie Fränkel was the young woman. She has been seen before in different plays, but always in minor rôles, which she has played with piquancy, vivacity, and naturalness. Last evening, with the song added to her small part, she was more heartily applauded than Herr von Seyffertitz in his song in the first act, which is saying a great deal. Fräulein Fränkel may be a little ahead of Miss Held in years and avoirdupois, but in one of the American theatres, with a French reputation back of her, she might run Miss Held a close second.

The play "Eine Karnevals-Posse" is one of the roaring farces which Herr Conried has affected this Winter. There was an imitation in the way of a song, and something very near a dance, in each act, which was heartily applauded. The play was excellent of its kind, but for the interminable third act. This was "die Klabriasparthie" in a Jewish coffee house. It had absolutely no excuse for being, except as a play by itself. Two plays in one is too much in even a very good play.

Another "Nell Gwynne."

Mr. Doremus's comedy called "Nell Gwynne," now current at the Murray Hill Theatre, and drawing great crowds there, though, for that matter, every play put forward there draws well, is in four acts and is full of reminders of other plays, of Jerrold's "Nell Gwynne" and Tom Taylor's "The Royal Favorite," especially. Mr. Doremus has borne the undying Samuel Pepys in mind, too, and made the great diarist one of her personages. One Lord Burchurst is her not too deadly villain, while the royal scapegrace, Hart the actor, Frances Stuart, Orange Moll, (represented as a pretty girl instead of a droll old woman, as in Jerrold's piece,) are among the other historical personages. Nell's cartwheel hat, in which tradition says she first charmed the King, is introduced.

The scene of the second act is the terrace in front of Nelly's house, and here the King and she have an imitation of Juliet and Romeo's balcony scene, as in Mr. Hazleton's play, produced by Miss Crosman. Dorothy Donnelly plays Nell, in dark curls, with agreeable vivacity, and Mr. Bramwell is, of course, the madcap sovereign, while the part of Pepys gives small opportunity to Walter Allen, and Laura Hope Crewes is vivacious and attractive as the orange girl.

Hope Booth's Husband Arraigned.

James E. B. Earll, the actor and husband of Hope Booth, who was arrested on Monday night by Detective Valley as he was about to leave Koster & Bial's, was arraigned yesterday before Magistrate Deuel in the Jefferson Market Court, charged with the larceny of $3,700 worth of jewelry from Cora Wilson on last Friday evening. Max Relce Meyer, who appeared for Mr. Earll, said that he had an income of $5,500 a year from an estate in Kinderhook, N. Y. He felt quite confident that his client had no occasion to commit the theft he is charged with, and asked the Court that he be paroled in his custody until to-day. The request was granted.

Reception at Terrace Garden.

The annual reception and entertainment tendered to Max Weber, Robert Stone, and Charles Fields will be held at Terrace Garden March 10. Although the affair is not yet fairly under way, there have been many offers of services from prominent people in the vaudeville profession, and the programme that will be offered will include an interesting aggregation of artists. After the entertainment there will be dancing.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Ex-President Grover Cleveland, accompanied by his wife, was the occupant of a box at William H. Crane's performance of "David Harum," at the Garrick Theatre last evening.

Edna May last night returned to the cast of "The Girl from Up There," at the Herald Square Theatre. Miss May has recovered from the cold from which she has been suffering.

The Frohman-Belasco production of Paul Mestayer's play, "Under Two Flags," will be made at the Garden Theatre on Monday, Feb. 4. The theatre will remain closed during the week of Jan. 28.

At the Broadway Theatre this evening Johann Strauss's operetta, "Vienna Life," (Wiener Blut,) will be presented for the first time in this country. The production will be under the management of Rudolph Aronson.

Elsie Wilton, who plays the part of Queen Margaret in "The Royal Family" at the Lyceum Theatre, has been taken with a severe attack of the grip and compelled to retire from the cast temporarily. Her rôle was filled by Ethel Sanford.

SPECTATOR HURT IN STAGE DUEL

Struck in the Face with Point of a Sword That Snapped in Actor McRae's Hand.

The historical play "When Knighthood Was in Flower," now being performed by Miss Julia Marlowe at the Criterion Theatre, seems to be fertile in mishaps.

It is only two weeks ago that Bruce McRae, who plays the part of Charles Brandon, was hurt during the fencing scene in the first act, which at the time of the production of the play the critics declared to be the fiercest fencing ever seen on the stage. A week later Miss Marlowe's hand was cut by a dagger. The third accident occurred last evening while Mr. McRae was fencing with Donald MacLaren, (Sir Edwin Caskoden.) At the fiercest passage Mr. McRae's foil broke in half and the end part flew over the footlights and hit a man sitting with a woman in the first row of the orchestra, cutting him severely under the eye.

The man, who refused to

ACTOR E. H. SOTHERN IN A BIG THEATRE FIRE

Grand Opera House at Cincinnati Completely Gutted.

AUDIENCE DOES NOT STAMPEDE

Hundreds Leave Building in Perfect Order—The Performers Lose Their Wardrobes.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 22.—The Grand Opera House is a total ruin except for its stanch outer walls. A display of coolness perhaps never witnessed under such trying circumstances prevented its loss from being attended by a fearful catastrophe.

The play set for the night was "Hamlet," by the E. H. Sothern company. The house was packed by a brilliant audience. Many ladies without escorts were present. The first act had been finished and in the second Mr. Sothern, acting the part of Hamlet, had spoken but a few lines, when a slight disturbance was observed in the fourth row of seats from the orchestra, near the centre aisle. It was caused by a slight issue of smoke at that point. An usher went down the aisle and quietly asked the people to be seated, saying there was nothing wrong.

Mr. Sothern at this point stepped to the front of the stage and also assured the audience that everything was right.

To further remove apprehension, Mr. Sothern resumed his part, but before he had spoken two lines the smoke issued in such volume that there was a spontaneous movement of the people in its vicinity. Without further order or suggestion or advice, one of the most remarkable scenes ever witnessed in a crowded audience took place. It was as though the whole situation had been revealed to every person in the house, and without a single shout or anything else indicating a leader, the dispersal of the audience began and was carried out with the utmost order and composure.

In the lower part of the house the abundant passage to Vine Street gave an easy egress to the greater part of the audience. A large number of persons seated near the orchestra were assisted by the actors and actresses to mount the stage and to make their exit by the stage door on Longworth Street. This assistance by the company was rendered at the cost of an entire neglect of their own personal property.

A gentleman who was seated in the fourth row from the orchestra, in describing the exit of the audience, said there were many women near him without escorts who exhibited the utmost composure and took the best and safest way to reach a place of safety. Nothing to indicate the possibility of a panic occurred.

The fire appears to have started from the furnace underneath the orchestra. It soon communicated to the stage, and to this fact is owing the greater portion of the property of the Sothern company. Mr. Sothern estimates his loss at $50,000. His company was compelled to reach the street clad in their costumes, and to lose the greater portion of their personal effects which were left in the theatre.

Fortunately the gallery, which has the least commodious means of exit, was not crowded, and those who were in that part of the theatre escaped with no serious accidents. Here and there some one stumbled on a steep stairway, but ready help was rendered, and there was no one trampled or hurt by any mad careening of panic-stricken men.

The same calmness marked the behavior of the people in the balconies, which were emptied as quickly and quietly as if the play had been ended.

Notwithstanding the combustible nature of the interior the fire was a long time in burning out. As late as 10 o'clock the upper part of the Vine Street front was still burning. This portion of the building was occupied by the Cincinnati Gymnasium, which had a costly equipment. Adjoining the rear of the opera house, separated by an alley, is the large Butler Building. The fire entered this at the upper stories and the roof, and the two upper floors of that building were practically destroyed. The upper portion of the Gifts Fire Engine House, which adjoins the Butler Building, was seriously damaged by the fire.

The present lessees of the Grand Opera House are Rainforth & Havlin. They are the successors of the late Robert E. J. Miles, one of the most widely known theatrical managers in his time in the country. The loss may be put at $200,000.

The lessees have an interest in the building representing their outlay in fitting it up amounting to $30,000 or $40,000, which is covered by insurance.

Michael Gavin, general manager of the stage part of the house, blamed the fire on the "supers," who, he said, were probably smoking down stairs.

Mr. Sothern spent some time, after taking his wife to the hotel, in the vicinity of the fire. He announced that he expected to meet his next engagement at Detroit as usual. Mrs. Sothern, (Virginia Harned,) who rendered heroic assistance to the ladies near the stage by helping them to escape in that way, completely collapsed after the excitement was over and had to be taken to her room.

IN JUSTICE BEEKMAN'S HONOR.

Services Held in the County Court House—Ex-Mayor Hewitt's Letter.

The services in memory of the late Supreme Court Justice Henry R. Beekman were held in Part IX. of the County Court House yesterday morning. Presiding Justice Van Brunt of the Appellate Division was in the chair, and nearly all the Justices of the Supreme Court and all prominent lawyers were present.

Ex Mayor Abram S. Hewitt was to have been present at the services, but was unable to be there on account of illness, so he sent a letter, which was read by David B. Ogden. After referring to the fact that the late Justice had acted as Mayor for the first two months after Mr. Hewitt had been elected, the letter went on to say:

> The condition of New York at the time we took office was not one of which its citizens could be proud. The ordinances were not enforced in a manner which was satisfactory to either the public or to the Mayor, who was charged under the charter with the duty of supervision over the several departments. In particular, the administration of the Police Department was very lax, and evil resorts were in evidence in many parts of the city, and in some of them life and property were not safe. The Board of Health was in a state of paralysis and the sanitary condition of the city was endangered by the approach of yellow fever, which required new provisions of quarantine against the invasion of the disease. The steps necessary to be taken at once were recommended by Judge Beekman and promptly approved by me. Finding it impossible to secure prompt action on the part of the police for the suppression of what were known as "dives," Judge Beekman devised a new remedy by injunction, which was found to be effective, and which was sustained by the courts. In less than two months, so far as outward appearances were concerned, New York became a decent city. The excise laws, which had been entirely disregarded, were enforced, and the Sabbath day became one of rest and quiet instead of disorder and debauch.

Justice Van Brunt, in calling the meeting to order, made some remarks as to the sudden death of Justice Beekman. He was followed by John B. Parsons, who presented a set of resolutions setting forth the legal career of the late Justice. Justice Francis M. Scott, L. L. Delafield, and others spoke on the late Justice's career, and then the meeting adjourned.

To Aid Brooklyn Charities.

The Brooklyn Bureau of Charities appeals for $20 to help pay the moving expenses of a family from Brooklyn to the South. The man received a serious injury, through no fault of his own, which has incapacitated him for his work in the city, and he has secured a place in the South.

The bureau renews its appeal for $100 for the care in the Adirondacks of a young man who has consumption; also for $80 for the admission of an old colored man to a home. All contributions should be sent to the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities, 69 Schermerhorn Street.

The bureau wishes to acknowledge the receipt of the following sums in answer to its appeals: D. C. McEwen, $1; J. C. Cremer, 5; Mrs. T. C. Van Pelt, $2; Anonymous, " cash for special $100," $1; H. W. Adams, $5; through Albert A. Day, $5; Fred A. Guild, $3; A. C. K., $1; M. J. Hulse, $5; Charles E. Losee, $8; Anonymous, $1; Thomas H. Buckler, through THE NEW YORK TIMES, $5.

A Dance for Charity.

A dance is to be given at Sherry's on Saturday evening, Feb. 23, by the Young Folks' League of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, the proceeds of which are to be turned over to the asylum. This league has meetings monthly at the Tuxedo and its membership is increasing.

FOUR NEW OCEAN LINERS.

Atlantic Transport Company Lets Contracts for Their Construction at Camden.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Jan. 22.—President Baker of the Atlantic Transport Company to-day awarded to the New York Shipbuilding Company of Camden, N. J., a contract for four large freight and passenger steamers to ply from New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore to London. This is the largest contract for merchant vessels ever awarded to a Delaware River firm at one time. A significant fact is that the Atlantic Transport Line has hitherto always owned only foreign-built steamers.

The four steamers contracted for are for freight and passenger service. Two of them are to be 600 feet long each, and the other two a few feet shorter. They will be among the finest and fastest vessels in the transatlantic trade.

Each of the two largest is to be of 12,000 tons carrying capacity and the four will cost about $5,000,000. Each vessel will have triple expansion engines and boilers of the Scotch type, capable of withstanding the highest steam pressure. All the vessels will be of steel throughout, and will be built to exceed all underwriters' requirements.

The Atlantic Transport Company, the stock of which is largely owned by the Pennsylvania Railroad stockholders, has its headquarters in Baltimore, and has for years operated steamer lines from New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore to London. Its vessels now running all fly the British flag, but the company is in all respects American.

CAPT. TOZIER AVERTS TROUBLE

Apologizes for Landing Japanese Laborers at Victoria.

Special to The New York Times.

VICTORIA, B. C., Jan. 22.—International unpleasantness, which seemed inevitable yesterday, has been obviated by the sensible action and forbearance of A. R. Milne, C. M. G., Collector of Customs of this port, and Capt. Tozier, commander of the United States Revenue cutter Grant. The Grant put into this port yesterday, having on board twenty-two Japanese, seized by an armed party of the cutter on Waldron Island. Capt. Tozier claimed that these Japanese had crossed to Waldron Island, which is in American territory, from Stevenston in British Columbia, and that they had therefore committed a breach of the law, as they admitted signing a contract to cut wood.

Not only were the Japanese seized, but also their employer, who took them over, and the sloop in which the journey was made was brought to Victoria and dumped ashore here. The authorities here refused to accept the unwelcome charges, although the Japanese Consul engaged a solicitor to look after their interests.

The Collector of Customs was preparing to lodge a formal protest with United States Consul Smith here, when Capt. Tozier and Immigration Officer Walker, at whose instance the Grant had been sent to Waldron, called on him. Mr. Milne pointed out that in landing the Japanese the cutter had foregone the privileges enjoyed as a man-of-war, and been guilty of a breach both of the quarantine and immigration laws in failing to report to him.

The officers of the cutter recognized the force of this contention, and made a full apology, promising not to offend similarly in the future. They further offered to take the Japanese to Waldron Island. Mr. Milne, however, met them half way, and offered to make an examination of the Japanese, and if he found them to be from Canada, accept them as such. The Grant's officers, on the other hand, offered to take any who failed to pass the examination back to Waldron Island, and the incident closed. It is agreed on all sides that the good sense shown on both sides avoided serious complications.

Fire on Cotton-Laden Steamer.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 22.—The British steamship Dromore, Capt. Jeffrey, cotton-laden, from Galveston for Antwerp, put into the Mississippi River to-day with fire burning fiercely in hold No. 2. Capt. Jeffrey, after filling the hatch with steam, cabled Elder, Dempster & Co., for instructions. They ordered the ship to this port. The Harbor Fire Department is awaiting her arrival. It is thought the damage will be heavy.

CHINA MUST SHOW GOOD FAITH.

Foreign Envoys Will Emphasize This Point in Reply to Imperial Plenipotentiaries.

PEKING, Jan. 22.—To-day the foreign envoys discussed the requests of the Chinese Plenipotentiaries, especially in the matter of punishments, and exempted Tsi Lien and Tol Wing, as being less guilty than the others. The reply to the Chinese note will be delivered Thursday.

It will emphasize the point that the signing of the agreement will be without value unless good faith is shown by acts, and that it will be absolutely useless to expect the removal of troops or concessions on the part of the allies until China has conclusively proved her good intentions.

Russia has almost completed the turning over of the railroad to the Germans. The Germans say they will keep the railroad temporarily as a military necessity. The British object to this course, and the matter will be referred to the home Governments.

Count von Waldersee expects to leave China early in April.

MAY BRING EMPEROR TO PEKING.

Talk of an International Force to Coerce the Ruler of China.

TIEN-TSIN, Jan. 22.—It is reported in German circles that, unless the peace negotiations are satisfactorily considered early next month, a strong international expedition will be organized to bring Emperor Kwang-Su and Prince Tuan to Peking.

A SWORD FOR GEN. DE WET.

Public of Hamburg Will Present One to the Boer Leader.

BERLIN, Jan. 22.—A public collection is being made in Hamburg with a view of presenting to Gen. De Wet a sword of honor and providing a fund for the relief of suffering Boer women and children.

Mr. Krueger at Utrecht.

UTRECHT, Jan. 22.—Mr. Krüger arrived here at midday. He was received by a committee at the railroad station, and was cheered warmly. As he drove to his hotel a choir sang patriotic songs. Mr. Krüger thanked the crowd outside and the people sang the Transvaal National Hymn. It is understood that he will remain here several weeks.

"The Mikado" for Charity.

The Orange Memorial Hospital Auxiliary is to give "The Mikado" for the benefit of the Hospital on the evenings of Feb. 6 and 7, at Orange Music Hall. The chorus of seventy-two voices is training twice a week under the direction of Louis Dressler of New York, and on Friday evening has its first rehearsal on the Music Hall stage. The cast is as follows:

Yum-Yum	Mrs. Douglas Brownlie
Peep Bo	Miss Jessie Lord
Pitti Sing	Miss Marion Sutherland
Katisha	Miss Florence Sutherland
Mikado	Dr. Elliott Johnson
Nanki Pooh	Raymond W. Smith
Ko-Ko	Marshall Leighton
Pooh Bah	Robert H. Stanley
Pish Tush	Henry Bright
Nee-Ban	Henry Wood

Colonia Country Club Officers.

At the annual election of the Colonia Country Club the following were elected Trustees for the ensuing year: Edward G. Cone, Edward K. Cone, Simeon A. Cruikshank, John Correja, Jr., J. Blanchard Edgar, Charles D. Freeman, Robert B. Macpherson, Frank A. Pattison, Benjamin King, Edward S. Savage, Charles B. Squier, Edwin M. Squier, and Mulford D. Valentine. At a subsequent meeting of the Trustees Edward S. Savage was elected President, Robert B. Macpherson Vice President, Charles D. Freeman Treasurer, and Edward K. Cone Secretary. The annual statement shows the club to be in a gratifying condition of prosperity.

MISS ANNIE WHEELER ILL IN A HOSPITAL

Operated on for Appendicitis, She Is Slowly Recovering.

A Daughter of Gen. Joseph Wheeler, She Served as a Red Cross Nurse in Cuba and Manila.

Miss Annie Early Wheeler, second daughter of Gen. Joseph Wheeler, who served as a Red Cross nurse in the Cuban and Philippine campaigns with her distinguished father, undermining her health in the fever-laden climates, is slowly recovering from a serious attack of appendicitis at the private sanitarium of Dr. John A. Wyeth, 19 West Thirty-fifth Street.

Miss Wheeler's condition was such on Saturday last that Dr. Wyeth deemed the time opportune for an operation, which when performed was entirely successful, Miss Wheeler improving steadily from that time. Dr. Wyeth served under Gen. Wheeler during the civil war in the Fourth Alabama Regiment, and has for years been his close personal friend.

At the outbreak of hostilities between the United States and Spain, when her father was appointed a Major General of Volunteers, Miss Annie made known her intention of accompanying the General, and the latter was too much a soldier to oppose her wishes. The family was already represented by two sons in the service, Joseph, Jr., instructor in mathematics at West Point at that time, and Thomas, a Midshipman on the Columbia. The latter was drowned later at Montauk.

Miss Annie proceeded to Tampa with the troops under her father's command, and there applied for service in the Red Cross Corps. She was accepted, and through the campaign before El Caney and Santiago nursed the sick and wounded in the hospitals and kept a watchful eye over her father, who, though well along in years, was as active as any man in his brigade.

When she returned to Washington at the cessation of hostilities a magnificent jewel casket, the gift of the ladies of Montgomery, Ala., was presented to her as a mark of esteem and in recognition of her kindness to the soldiers of her own State in the fever camps of Florida.

When Gen. Wheeler's desire to see service in the Philippines was gratified by his assignment to command the First Brigade of the Second Division, Miss Annie would not be deterred by her friends from her announced intention of following her father into danger. In Manila she cared for the sick and wounded for many months, and broke down her health to such an extent that several slight attacks of appendicitis were precipitated. These were not sufficient to keep her from her duties, however, and not until Gen. Wheeler was ordered to return to the United States did Miss Wheeler relinquish her work.

Returning by way of Europe, she spent some time in travel on the Continent with Mrs. Frank Gould and Mrs. George F. Shrady. In Washington some time ago the attacks of appendicitis returned with greater violence, and she was persuaded to come to this city for the medical attention of Dr. Wyeth.

Dr. Wyeth stated last night that his patient was in a fair way to recovery, and should be convalescent in a short while.

WOMAN AND BOY DISAPPEAR.

Mrs. Filter Last Heard from at Niagara Falls Dec. 29.

Special to The New York Times.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Jan. 22.—In December Mrs. Olive Amelia Filter left home near Batchelor, Mich., to visit a sister in Peruville, this State. She was accompanied by her eight-year-old son. She left her sister's on Dec. 27, and a few days later her husband received a letter dated Niagara Falls, Dec. 29, saying that she had lost her pocketbook. He sent a registered letter containing $40 to the general delivery here. He did not hear from her, and in response to a letter here he was told that the registered letter remained uncalled for.

The Rev. P. W. Bruce of Chesterville, Penn., father of the missing woman, was notified, and he arrived here to-day. He found the registered letter still in the Post Office. He asked the police to make a search, hoping to find some trace of the boy or woman. If she came here and lost her pocketbook it is considered a strange fact that none of the hotels or boarding houses have remembrance of her presence, and the mystery deepens when the registered letter is taken into consideration.

The police have no report of a lost pocketbook, and nothing has been found in the river bank. Her father remained here to-night, and to-morrow will extend the search to Buffalo.

LAUNCH OWNERS WARNED.

Circular Issued Against Bill Regulating the Use of Naphtha and Other Fluids.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Gen. Grosvenor has greatly excited the owners of steam launches all over the country, and he is hearing from them. On Dec. 14 he introduced a bill amending an act passed in 1897 providing for the regulation of the use of vessels propelled by gas, fluid, naphtha, or electric motors, and it was sent to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. The bill in its composition gave little idea of its broad application, as it simply provided for striking out of a former law the words " of above fifteen tons," and the word " vessels " in another place.

The act passed in 1897 at the suggestion of the Supervising Inspector General of Steam Vessels subjected all vessels of the sort described, being above fifteen tons, to the various rules as to inspection, lights, steering, signals, issued against larger vessels. The amendment offered by Gen. Grosvenor removes the exemptions in favor of vessels of less than fifteen tons, thus bringing all of them under the rules of the Supervising Inspector General's office.

A circular issued in New York has reached Gen. Grosvenor, calling upon launch owners to "beware," as the bill now made applicable only to vessels used for commercial purposes may soon apply to private users. It also says that the market price of boats will be cut in half, and appeals to launch owners to seek the aid of their representatives to defeat the measure. When Gen. Grosvenor was asked about this measure to-day, he promptly gave an explanation of his part in bringing the bill forward:

" I introduced the bill for the Treasury Department, upon the information that accidents to passengers on badly regulated vessels, propelled by power generated by gas or oil, were becoming too frequent, and also because there had been complaint that the masters of such vessels were indifferent to the sailing rules that govern other craft, and were getting in the way of steamboats and steamships with little care for the signals and regulations that restrain vessels under the supervision of the supervising Inspectors of steam vessels.

" The circular you refer to proceeds upon a mistaken assumption. The bill does not pretend to debar any private user of a launch, however propelled, being of less than fifteen tons, from choosing any way he may prefer to blow himself and his family to perdition. It simply says that all vessels propelled by power and carrying passengers for hire, shall be subject to rules found wise and necessary to control the use of other power-propelled vessels. That does not appear clearly in the act as I introduced it.

" To make it clear I have to-day introduced another bill, in which I have recited the act to be amended and then added the amendment. That is a rule in Ohio, and ought to be a rule here, the mere reference to a statute to be amended not conveying an intelligent idea to the reader of the act if he does not happen to be familiar with the statute referred to. The launch owners need not worry. Having introduced the corrected bill, it will be referred, but I shall not make any effort to secure its passage this session."

Edward Wassermann's New Residence.

Plans have been filed by Charles P. H. Gilbert, architect, for the new residence to be built at 33 West Fifty-sixth Street for Edward Wassermann. The building will be of the American basement plan, five stories high. The materials of the front will be white stone and light colored brick.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

Tuesday is always selected as a day for large dinners, and last evening there were any number of them. Mrs. Astor gave one of what are known as her state entertainments, Mrs. Pembroke Jones had a delightful affair for the debutantes, J. J. Van Alen, Mrs. Ogden Mills, Mrs. J. F. J. Lanier, and others gave similar functions, and with the fortnightly Dance at the Waldorf-Astoria, the meeting of the Bridge Clubs and the wedding of Miss Van Nest and J. Stewart Barney, the day certainly held its own in the annals of this very gay season.

***

This evening there is the small dance at the Gurnees, and to-morrow will take place the second Assembly at the Waldorf-Astoria. Worthington Whitehouse will lead the cotillion, dancing with the Marquise de Talleyrand-Périgord. This is the first time in years that the Marquise has assisted to lead a cotillion in New York. The decorations will be elaborate, and, as already announced, Mrs. Duncan Cryder, Mrs. William D. Sloane, Mrs. W. Bayard Cutting, and Mrs. Edmund L. Baylies will receive the guests.

***

Aiken is rapidly filling up, but the cottagers are arriving and leaving all the time, running back and forth from New York. Mrs. Duncan Elliot has been in town and will not return to Aiken for a few days. Mortimer Brooks has taken the Clinch Smith house for the season, Mr. and Mrs. Clinch Smith being abroad with Eugene Higgins. J. H. Lamar has rented Mrs. Lamar's Colleton Avenue house, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry McVickar are at the Smith house.

***

Miss "Libbie" Lawrence, one of the most popular of the fashionable young women in Boston, has just concluded a visit to New York. She was the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Derby, and was at a number of the dances and entertainments of the last fortnight, notably those given by Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. H. McK. Twombly, Mrs. Lucius K. Wilmerding, and Mrs. William D. Sloane.

***

The wedding of Miss Paul, the daughter of Col. Paul, United States Army, to Henry A. Barclay, Jr., will take place on Thursday, April 18, at the Church of the Heavenly Rest. The ceremony will be followed by a small reception at Sherry's. Col. Paul, who has been in Manila for some time, has just returned.

***

Among the passengers who sail to-day for England on the Majestic is W. Bayard Cutting, Jr., who is attached to the Embassy at the Court of St. James's. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Bayard Cutting, and he has been in New York on leave of absence, for the Christmas holidays.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Hillhouse have taken a cottage at Newport for next Summer. They have just leased the Thomas Janney place, known as Dellmain, in Narragansett Avenue. Mrs. Hillhouse was Miss Georgie Remsen.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Newton Stokes and Miss Lily Oelrichs have been in New Haven, attending the Yalé "prom. week" festivities. Miss Oelrichs will return for the Assembly. F. W. Rhinelander and F. W. Rhinelander, Jr., are at Palm Beach. Mr. and Mrs. E. Parmelee Prentice are passing their honeymoon at Jekyl Island.

***

The death of Queen Victoria will have some influence on much of the social life in town. There are many English people in New York this Winter who for the present will refuse all invitations. Mrs. Arthur Paget and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Ismay, who are to arrive to-day, will be among those who will wear some mourning. Mrs. Paget has been an intimate friend of several of the royalties. The Duke of Newcastle, who is in Florida, has declined all invitations and announces that he may start for England any day. All entertainments, of course, at the Pauncefotes' in Washington are off. Gen. and Mrs. Herbert Eaton are to return to England at once. The death of the Queen also signifies that there will be no Drawing Rooms held in London, and that the Court will be in mourning for six months, which will include the Summer season. Plans had already been made among New Yorkers for taking houses in London for the season, which will be abandoned. The death of the Queen will seriously affect the season at Cannes and on the Riviera. It will bring many English people to America, and New Yorkers generally will remain on this side of the water except for a little trip for the purpose of purchasing clothes.

***

Mrs. Astor gave a dinner at her residence last evening. The table was decorated with bridesmaids' roses, and her guests included Mr. and Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry, Col. William Jay and Mrs. Jay, Mr. and Mrs. George B. De Forest, Mr. and Mrs. H. McK. Twombly, Mr. and Mrs. M. Orme Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Lanfear Norrie, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Oakley Rhinelander, Mr. and Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, Mrs. Richard Irvin, Mrs. Livingston, Miss Blight, Lispenard Stewart, Frederick T. Martin, D. O. Mills, and several others.

***

Mrs. Pembroke Jones's dinner last evening in honor of Miss Eleanor Jay was a handsome affair. The table was decorated with white Spring flowers, daisies, narcissus, lilies of the valley, &c., and ferns. The guests included, besides Miss Jay, Mrs. Harry Havemeyer, (Miss Charlotte Whiting,) Mies Ruthierford, Miss Nathalie Schenk, Natalie Wells, Kathleen Neilson, Miss Larghorne, Townsend Burden, Jr., Count Gheradesca, Ashbel Barney, Ralph Pulitzer, Murray Young, and a number of other girls and men. There was informal dancing after the dinner.

***

Amadee De Pau Moran gave the second of two dinner dances last night for his two daughters, the Misses Marie and Rosalie Moran, the former a débutante of last season, the latter of this. The dance was preceded by a dinner, and several other young people came in after it for the cotillion, which was danced in the drawing room, and led by Munson Morris, who also led the previous one. Worthington Whitehouse, who led at the Twombly and Sloane dances, was to have been the leader last night, but was ill. The cotillion was a small one, about twenty-five couples, and there were four favor figures, the favors for which were golf markers, golf score books, pipes of various sorts, sticks with bells attached, rose baubles, cornucopiæ of flowers, ash trays, fans in bags, pencils, &c. After the cotillion a supper was served. The guests included the Misses Florence Twombly, Fredericka V. Webb, Claire Bryce, Evelyn Parsons, Nora Iselin, Pauline Robinson, Mary Harriman, Natalie Wells, Therese Iselin, the Misses Olin, Arthur Street, Alonzo Potter, William Whitehouse, Barclay Kountze, and Messrs. Rhinicut, Francklyn, Robbins, and others.

***

Mrs. Nicholas Fish gave a luncheon at her residence yesterday for her daughter, Mrs. Robert Burnside Potter, and after the luncheon there was music, rendered by M. Le Comte. Mrs. Berkeley Mostyn gave the third of her Tuesdays in January, and Miss Stevens and Miss Dorothy Hinckley assisted in receiving.

***

The Fortnightlies had last night their fourth meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria, and the cotillion was led by Frederick S. Woodruff. The guests were received by Mrs. L. L. Delafield, Mrs. Shaw, and several other of the patronesses. The favors were hat pins, headed by metal bettles, &c.; artificial chrysanthemums and roses in mauve, yellow, red, white, and other colors; pins, &c. The guests of the evening included Miss Margaret Betts, Miss Pauline D. Foss, the Misses Wainwright, Wetherell, Coleman, Stanwood, Edith Burke, Roberta Whipple, Mrs. Oddie, Mrs. Cole, and Robert De F. Kelley. Among the new members of this class are the Misses Edith Slater Mills, Daisy Tyler, Mary Wagstaff, Ethel Du Bois, Charlotte Prime, Katharine Pratt, Katharine Hancox, Gertrude Herrick, Hunter Brookinridge, Walter Cole Cabell, Jeremiah Beall, Benjamin C. Fincke, George H. Glover, Morris Graves, Edwin C. Moller, Walter H. Merriam, T. B. Peck, Acton Poulet, Herbert B. Smith, Henry W. St. John, Tito Tuscani, and James Westervelt.

***

Another of the five dances gotten up by Mrs. James Wilson Clark and others was held at Dodworth's last night. F. Raymond Lefferts led the cotillion. Among the dancers at these affairs are the Misses Catharine M. Clark, Caroline Eldlitz, Lucille Bacon, Elsie Ladd, Julia Vietor, Anna Mead, the Misses Hickox, Swift, Benedict, Tilton, Boardman, Plummer, and the Messrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Henry M. Brookfield, Thatcher M. Adams, George Redington, C. E. Locke, Newcomb Cole, Prescott Slade, John Pratt, H. T. Leggett, Arthur Wiley, Herbert Thompson, Charles Hickox, and others.

***

On account of a funeral in the family on Jan. 24, Mrs. Edward Winslow of 27 West Fifty-third Street will receive on Jan. 31 and Feb. 7, and not on Jan. 24.

The National Society of New England Women will celebrate the sixth anniversary of its organization at Delmonico's to-morrow evening.

To Increase Newport Taxes.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Jan. 22.—The cottage taxpayers will be surprised to learn that quite a stir is being made to have the City Council increase the ratio of taxes from the present figures of $1.10 on each hundred dollars' worth of property. The revenues of the city are insufficient to meet the running expenses of the place. That a readjustment of the taxes will be made is now a foregone conclusion.

W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Rents a Villa.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Jan. 22.—William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., has rented for occupancy next Summer the new villa of Alfred M. Coats, on Wickham Road, Beacon Hill District. Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt left Newport for New York this afternoon.

WEDDINGS OF A DAY.

Barney—Van Nest.

The wedding of John Stewart Barney and Miss Mary Alice Van Nest, daughter of Mrs. Alexander T. Van Nest, was celebrated at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon in Trinity Chapel. The bride walked up the aisle on the arm of her cousin, G. Willett Van Nest. Her gown was of cream ivory satin with a long square train, the bodice formed of broad crossing folds and the transparent yoke and sleeves were of point lace. A short lace veil was arranged over her face as she went up the aisle, but as she passed down on the bridegroom's arm after the ceremony her face was uncovered. The wedding veil proper was of point lace, fastened to the coiffure with a diadem effect of diamonds and flowers. She also wore a collar formed of numerous rows of pearls. Knots of orange blossoms were on the corsage, and from the waist line in front two falls of lace widening toward the bottom formed the trimming of the skirt. She carried no bouquet, but a Prayer Book instead. The only attendant, the maid of honor, was Miss Helen Storer of Boston, a cousin of the bride. She wore pink panne velvet, the skirt extremely full in the back, and trimmed with a frill of cream lace about the bottom. The bodice was fitted by fine lengthwise tucks, and there was a lace collar, deep and round, and a cream girdle and lace on the sleeves. Her hat was white panne with a knot of pink panne in the front, and a black ostrich plume was laid under the brim on the left side. Her bouquet was of Bridesmaid's roses, with a big bunch of lilies of the valley on one side, and a very full shower of narrow pink ribbon with lilies tied at the ends.

When the bride reached the steps leading to the altar the Rev. Dr. Huntington of Grace Church came forward and read the marriage service. Mrs. Van Nest gave her daughter away. Bishop Potter pronounced the benediction. Mr. Barney's best man was James De Wolfe Cutting, and the ushers were Phoenix Ingraham, W. Rhinelander Stewart, Henry Otis Chapman, William M. V. Hoffman, James Henry Smith, and Norman Walker.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Van Nest, wore a trained gown of black panne, the front and sides covered with heavy cream lace appliqued on and outlined with gold, and a small black bonnet. Mrs. Richard Gambrill, an aunt of the bride, wore black satin, the bodice a mass of jet and steel spangles, and a small black velvet bonnet trimmed with two black ostrich tips in aigrette fashion. A small reception for relatives and intimate friends only was held at the residence of Mrs. Van Nest, 31 West Thirty-seventh Street, after the ceremony. The church decgrations were simple. In the niches at the side of the chapel there were hemlock trees, and the big arch midway up the main aisle, and the lattice work arch at the chancel were of greens in which were placed clusters of large white lilies, vases of the same flowers being placed on the altar. The house decorations were simple. Scallen placed large vases of American Beauty roses here and there through the rooms. Among the guests invited to the church were:

Danforth—Williamson.

Miss Elizabeth Williamson, the daughter of J. Aymar Williamson of Wyoming, N. J., and Mr. George Henry Danforth, son of the late George H. Danforth, were married yesterday evening at the Church of St. Stephen, Millburn, N. J. A special car attached to the 6:30 o'clock train from Hoboken brought the wedding guests from town. The church was very prettily decorated with greens and white flowers. The bride wore a gown of white crêpe de chine, trimmed with point lace. Her veil of tulle was fastened with a pearl crescent, the gift of the bridegroom, and a large diamond cluster. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and white violets. The maid of honor was Miss Isabel Forsyth Emerson of Brooklyn, who wore pale lavender crêpe de chine. Two flower girls, Miss Mildred Constantine and Miss Esther Cornwall, headed the bridal cortège. They were white organdie gowns, with lavender sashes, and carried large bunches of white marguerites. The best man was Francis J. Danforth, and the ushers were G. Danforth Williamson, brother of the bride; Nicholas Danforth, Henry Opdyke, and Louis S. Haslam.

Webster—Sutton.

Miss Marian Kimberley Sutton, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tufts Sutton, 156 West Seventy-fourth Street, and George Bruce-Bruce Webster were married yesterday at noon by the Rev. Dr. William R. Huntington at Grace Church Chantry. The bride wore a gown of white chiffon over satin, with trimmings of lace. Her tulle veil was fastened with orange blossoms. Miss Nanette Widdleton was maid of honor. Charles J. Steedman was best man, and the ushers were Capt. French Sisden and Mr. John G. Stevens. There was a wedding breakfast for the bridal party following the reception.

DEATH OF MRS. R. C. MINOR.

Wife of the Famous Painter of "The Close of the Day"—Their Struggles While He Was Studying.

Mrs. Robert C. Minor, the wife of the well-known American painter, died at the Sherwood Studios, 58 West Fifty-seventh Street, on Sunday, Jan. 13. She had been ill but a few days. An attack of grip developed into pneumonia, to which her death was due.

Those who attended the Evans sale of paintings, at Chickering Hall, on the night of Jan. 31, 1900, will recall the fact that that occasion was a triumph for Mr. Minor, his picture "The Close of the Day" being bought for $3,050. It was a pinnacle price for a work by the American painter, and the occasion was made particularly dramatic by the evident excitement of Mrs. Minor during the bidding and her happiness at its culmination. But it

WELCH WON PIGEON SHOOT

In Match with Harold Money at Carteret Gun Club.

WINNER KILLED 88 BIRDS

Garden City Organization Formally Adopts Resolution Restricting Privileges of Its Members.

In an interesting and closely contested pigeon shooting match on the grounds of the Carteret Gun Club at Garden City, L. I., yesterday between two of the most noted trapshooters in the East—Robert A. Welch of New York and Harold Money—Welch achieved a well-earned victory by killing 88 birds of the 100 released for each man. The race was the direct outcome of the 100-bird match the same sportsmen engaged in last December, when, with only one bird between them to the last pigeon released, the gunners finished in a tie, each with 89 kills.

It may have been to the disadvantage of young Money that his father, who advised him in the arrangement of the competition, was unable to be present, but at that the New Jersey shooter displayed rare steadiness and completed the contest in form that was very close to his best.

The weather was perfectly suited to trap shooting, for the sky was clear, the light good, and the northwest wind through the greater part of the competition just stiff enough to help the birds to good and strong flight. The pigeons released were without doubt the best and fastest that have been provided at any shoot this season.

Walker Breese Smith acted as referee, and at 1:25 o'clock in the afternoon the shooting began, Welch leading off. The terms of the match were $500 a side, at 100 live birds, both gunners to stand at the 30-yard mark.

In the first quarter of the match when 25 birds had been released for each gunner, Money had a slight advantage, he making 21 kills, while Welch had brought down 20 birds. They retained their relative positions through the second 25 birds, Money still leading by one bird. At this point the breeze died away, leaving the air almost still. In the third quarter of the match Money fell away a bit, and lost 8 birds, while Welch, with only 4 misses, took the lead. From that time on Welch retained his advantage, and increasing it a little at the end, won with a total score of 88, while Money carried 81 kills. Both men did much pretty and effective shooting, and the skill they showed in the use of second barrels caused much admiring comment. Welch's best kills were his thirteenth bird, a fast towerer, brought down with the second barrel; his twentieth and twenty-sixth, both right quarterers; his fifty-fifth, which, after being hard hit, was killed with the second barrel while trying to escape from the retriever, and his eighty-first, a right quarterer. Money made about an equal number of good kills, beginning with his first, a rapid right quarterer. His second barrel saved him many pigeons, the most brilliant shots with it being kills of his nineteenth, twenty-ninth, thirty-ninth, fortieth, and ninetieth, the latter, hit with both barrels, being stopped just against the boundary fence. The birds lost by both men were all uncommonly difficult ones, being twisting, zigzagging dodgers, or else driving away so swiftly as to give the shot a hot chase to reach them. The scores in detail follow:

*Dead out of bounds.

Copies of a resolution defining the attitude of the Carteret Gun Club toward professional pigeon shooters have been distributed among the members. This is signed by Walter H. Mead, Secretary, for the Board of Governors. Its rigid provisions, one of which calls for the resignation of any member who shall shoot against professionals in a competition for prizes has caused much comment among pigeon shooters. If it is enforced, it will keep out of the Grand American Handicap all the Carteret Club shooters who wish to retain their membership with that club. Several members who had contemplated entering in the Grand American were questioned about the course they will pursue, but all declined to talk. It is intimated, however, that some of these will enter in the Grand American, preferring to give up membership in the Carteret Club rather than remain out of the big event. The resolution is as follows:

Resolved, That the action of the Board of Governors, taken at their meeting of Dec. 27, 1900, in regard to shooting with professionals, and the resolution then adopted on that subject are hereby confirmed, and that a copy of such resolution be sent to each member. Said resolution, as entered in the minutes of that meeting, is as follows:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that the following rules in regard to professional pigeon shooters should be adopted by the club:

1. Professional pigeon shooters are ineligible to membership in the Carteret Gun Club.

2. Any member of this club who enters a pigeon shooting match for money or prizes in connection with professional pigeon shooters shall be requested to resign from the club, the request to be signed by six Governors after proof to their satisfaction has been furnished to them that the member had rendered himself liable to such request.

3. A professional pigeon shooter is one who as a principal or principal shoots in the interest of any dealer in guns, ammunition, or shooting sportsmen's supplies of any kind, or who shoots for the purpose of advertising such wares, or who makes a business or practice of shooting public matches for money or prizes or any purpose whatsoever.

Any question arising under this definition shall be decided by a majority vote of the Governors.

Medicus Gun Club's Shoot.

The annual live-bird shoot of the Medicus Gun Club, composed chiefly of physicians of New York, was held on the Inter-State Park shooting grounds yesterday. The noted woman pigeon shooter, Annie Oakley, was the club's guest, and took part in the handicap trophy shoot. The event next in importance to the handicap was a match at fifty birds between W. H. Sanders, standing at thirty yards, and W. Cashon, at twenty-seven yards, the former winning with twenty-eight kills. A number of other matches were shot, Van Allen, Webber, and Thompson winning most of these. The score of the club shoot follows:

GOLF ASSOCIATION OFFICERS.

R. H. Robertson Selected for the New President—Election on Feb. 28.

Robert H. Robertson of the St. Andrew's, Garden City, and Shinnecock Golf Clubs, besides many other clubs, will be elected President of the United States Golf Association at the coming annual meeting, to be held at Delmonico's Thursday evening, Feb. 28. This interesting item of golf news was given out yesterday by the Secretary of the Golf Association, Robert B. Kerr, at 20 Broad Street, together with the rest of the report of the Nominating Committee. He is Vice President of the St. Andrew's Golf Club, and as the coming head of the United States Golf Association, he will appear as representing that club.

Mr Robertson is also the President of the Metropolitan Golf Association, having been elected to that office last year.

The other officers selected for the United States Golf Association during the coming year are: First Vice President—John Reid, St. Andrew's; Second Vice President—Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, Onwentsia, Chicago; Secretary—Robert B. Kerr, Lakewood; Treasurer—Samuel Y. Heebner, Philadelphia Country; additional members of the Executive Committee—James A. Stillman, Newport, and G. H. Windeler, Brookline Country Club, near Boston.

The last two names are new, the present committee members being Horace Russell of Garden City and A. M. Coats of Newport. The other officers are renominations. The Nominating Committee making the report consisted of Charles B. Macdonald, Oliver W. Bird, and Rodman E. Griscom.

Mr Macdonald said that Mr. Kerr, who has been Secretary for nearly four years, only consented to serve another term after the utmost persuasion. Mr. Kerr has repeatedly said that his business would not allow him to continue in the office, but he understands the details of the Golf Association so thoroughly that the committee prevailed upon him to remain. He did so with the understanding that this would be his last term.

The report of the committee has to be sent to all the clubs in the association thirty days previous to the annual meeting, and so that all might receive it on time, the Executive Committee fixed upon Feb. 28 as the date for the meeting. W. B. Thomas, the retiring President, who declined to serve a third term, is now in Egypt with his family.

HAMBURG REACHES NEW YORK.

Famous Horse Arrives with Stallions from Daly's Montana Farm.

On a special train of seven palace horse cars, the stallions, headed by the famous racehorse Hamburg, from Bitter Root Stud Farm, Hamilton, Montana, the property of Marcus Daly's estate, arrived at Morris Park yesterday, and were unloaded and quartered in the stables on the hilltop back of the water tower, at the head of the stretch. There they will rest until the date set for the opening of the dispersal sale, Jan. 30, in Madison Square Garden, by the Fasig-Tipton Company. With the stallions came ten three-year-olds and sixty-two two-year-olds in training, which, with the mares that arrived a month ago, will be offered at public auction. The horses left Bitter Root Farm last Thursday, and were four days and a half on the road to New York, having been delayed en route by the severe Winter weather and snow blockades. In spite of the long trip of nearly 3,000 miles, they landed in fine condition, the grooms attending them saying that there was no sickness among the horses.

Hamburg attracted much attention, and a crowd of turfmen wintering at Morris Park, with a large number of visitors from the city, surrounded the car in which he traveled and waited patiently to catch a glimpse of the famous horse, who left New York nearly three years ago, when at the height of his fame, through having won the two great races, the Realization and the Brighton Cup. The expectant sightseers were disappointed, however, as Hamburg was moved into a stall, heavily clothed, only the outlines of his frame being visible, and then only for a few seconds. All that could be seen of him was that, big as he was when retired from the turf, he has grown to be a still larger horse all over. He seemed, too, in high spirits and inclined to be playful. After once being shut in a loose box no visitor was permitted to see him. It is probable, however, that the public will get a fair view of him to-day. The other stallions in the collection were Bathampton, Bute, Inverness, Isidor, Ogden, Tammany, and The Pepper.

Trotters and Pacers.

Elmer Stevens, the well-known trainer, has a green trotter that can beat 2:29 and a pacer that can step a 2:10 gait.

George Wallace, the Speedway pacer, with a mark of 2:17½, was out on the road yesterday, driven by his owner, Louis Kahn, who says the animal has never been faster or in better condition.

Theodore T. Maxfield has announced his intention of disposing of his team of pacers, Aladdin, 2:14½, and Monopole, 2:08¾, which met with such success on the Speedway last Fall.

Dr. H. H. Kane, President of the Road Drivers' Association of New York, will sell all his pacing stock at the Madison Square Garden sale on Feb. 13-16. Among those to be sold are the two Speedway favorites, Durlet (2:07½) and Little Gem, (2:15¼.) Dr. Kane will give his entire attention to trotters.

There is every prospect of the unsettled race between the two rival trotters Alice Barnes, 2:11¾, owned by E. E. Smathers, and The Monk, 2:08¾, owned by Fred Gerken, being trotted this Spring for big stakes. There was much dissatisfaction and some hard feeling over the race on the Speedway last month, as the judge at the finish declared that the final or third heat should be trotted over again, Mr. Smathers claiming a foul.

There were a number of drivers out with their fast horses on Seventh and St. Nicholas Avenues yesterday afternoon, but few if any of them ventured on the Speedway, which was very heavy. One glance at the popular speeding ground was enough to discourage the most enthusiastic reinsman until the roadbed dries out or the snow comes to cover it there is likely to be no more sport with the harness horses. Everybody who owns a fast stepper is anxiously awaiting a fall of snow that will even give them a chance for getting their cutters out.

A petition is being circulated among the road drivers and freely signed which provides for the maintenance of St. Nicholas Avenue by the Commissioner of Parks. It reads as follows:

"We, the undersigned, having had frequent occasion to use St. Nicholas Avenue for pleasure driving and having noted its condition and need of improvement, do respectfully request: That legislation be adopted whereby the care and maintenance of the roadway of St. Nicholas Avenue above One Hundred and Twenty-second Street and St. Nicholas Place shall hereafter be under the control of the Commissioner of Parks of the Borough of Manhattan and Richmond, St. Nicholas Avenue and St. Nicholas Place, with a part of One Hundred and Twenty-second Street form a connecting link between the Speedway and Riverside Drive and through Morningside Avenue, with the Central Park Drives. They also form an entrance to the Speedway, and as such they are used only by many drivers of fast horses and by pleasure vehicles. If improved in connection with the other driveways under the supervision of the Park Department they will be more popular and more useful for driving purposes than ever before. We therefore urge the enactment of legislation to that end."

Site for Columbia's Boathouse.

The site selected by the new rowing club of Columbia University for a house on the Harlem River is between Madison and Lexington Avenues.

Manager Erdal of the crew has reported that only sixty members have been elected to the club out of a total of 250 who must join in order to assure sufficient financial support for the crew. Unless more members are secured for the club before Feb. 1 it is probable that the crew will stop training temporarily. The cost of running the crew is approximately $8,000. The graduates have agreed to contribute $3,000 and to build a new boathouse, on condition that the undergraduates raise the remaining $5,000.

It has been decided that the proposed race with Annapolis is impossible this year, as the date submitted by the cadets is too early in the season.

New Specials for the Dog Show.

A meeting of the American Kennel Association was held yesterday afternoon at 55 Liberty Street, preliminary to the annual meeting of the organization, which will be held in the week of the Westminster Kennel Club's Dog Show in Madison Square Garden, beginning Feb. 19. For the dog show a number of new special classes have been opened. Among these Mrs. Hayward Brown offers two cups for ruby spaniels, Mrs. E. S. Avis two pieces of plate for American-bred Pomeranians, Mrs. Clarence H. Mackey a champion challenge cup for the best dog of any breed exhibited by a member of the Ladies' Kennel Association, Mrs. D. W. Evans a silver cup for the best field spaniel, and the Ladies' Kennel Association of Massachusetts a cup for the best dog under conditions similar to Mrs. Mackey's gift. Other new special classes, with prizes of plate, are for Chesapeake dogs, Griffons, old English sheep dog puppies, and blue Pomeranian puppies.

POGGENBURG LOSES AGAIN

More Surprises in Billiards at the Hanover Club.

KEENEY NOW LEADING MAN

He Has an Unbroken Record of Three Victories for the Association Championship.

Ferdinand Poggenburg encountered another defeat last night at the Hanover Club in the championship billiard tournament of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players. Arthur Townsend, the billiard champion of the Hanover Club, vanquished the veteran in the fourteen-inch balkline by 300 points to 223. It was another surprise for the billiard experts, but they had been prepared for it from Poggenburg's defeat on the previous evening.

Poggenburg was far below his usual high-class form. He started poorly and for thirteen innings found it impossible to get the balls running, his average being only 2. He made 14 in the fourteenth inning, his first respectable run, but he did not advance above that figure until the twenty-third inning, when he made 24, and followed it up with 37 in the next, giving a momentary exhibition of his old-time skill. He passed the 100 mark in the twenty-fourth inning, his total at the close being 135 points.

Townsend's game, on the contrary, was in marked contrast to Poggenburg's doleful innings. In the fourth inning Townsend got right down to work on long runs, making 19, following with 24 in the next inning, and 38 in the eighth inning, the last being chiefly made by a series of delicate cue shots with nursed balls. These big runs brought Townsend above the hundred mark in the tenth inning.

Townsend practically finished the match by his highest run, 45, in the fortieth inning, and in the next he got the final six necessary for his 300 points. The winner made the excellent average of a fraction over 7 for the forty-one innings. The scores were:

Arthur Townsend—3 0 1 19 24 8 0 38 1 7 3 0 6 7 14 3 5 10 8 2 0 0 2 0 1 1 0 5 2 7 19 5 12 7 23 2 0 3 1 45 6. Total, 300. Average, 7 13-41. High runs, 45, 38, 24, 23, 19, 19, 14, 12, 10.

Ferdinand Poggenburg—0 2 1 1 1 3 0 2 4 1 0 9 2 14 3 1 1 2 10 0 1 4 3 24 3 7 0 0 2 3 28 4 0 17 0 21 0 0 9 0 3 1 0. Total, 223. Average, 5 18-41. High runs, 37, 28, 24, 21, 17, 14, 11, 10.

This game was immediately followed by the second match of the evening, Frank Gardiner, the Crescent Athletic Club champion, and Frank A. Keeney of the Oxford Club, Brooklyn, being the players. Keeney had previously beaten Townsend and Stark, and was in the unique position of being the only one of the six contestants who had not met with a defeat. He maintained this honor, and by defeating Gardner in 300 points to 221 he has three victories to his credit, standing the best chance at present for the championship.

The game was remarkable for its close competition in twenty-three innings, in this respect being the best of the series for even scoring during so long a period. Gardner started off with the advantage, which he held by slight margins for twenty-two innings. Some idea of the close play may be had from the fact that Keeney had an even 100 points at the close of the sixteenth inning, while Gardner's run of 15 in the seventeenth inning gave him the narrow lead, with 107 points. The scores were:

Frank A. Keeney—3 1 1 0 4 2 2 3 5 10 8 21 1 0 6 0 16 0 15 0 2 1 0 1 27 4 7 11 1 0 22 0 0 0 0 7 0 13 0 20 4 5 10 14 15 2 9 3. Total, 300. Average, 6 24-46. High runs, 27 24 23 22 21 20 15 15 14 13 11 10 10.

Frank Gardner—0 1 4 2 7 0 21 2 5 21 0 16 0 0 4 0 13 0 0 4 0 2 20 1 7 1 0 0 0 1 0 0 0 1 12 0 1 9 18 17 5 4 5 21 3. Total, 221. Average, 4 21-46. High runs, 27 21 20 18 17 16 12 12 12.

Two games will be played to-day. Edward Gardner and Townsend will meet in the first and Poggenburg and Stark in the second.

Baseball Grounds in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 22.—"Connie" Mack, representing the Philadelphia club of the new American Baseball League, to-day leased, for a period of ten years the plot of ground situated between Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth Streets and Columbia Avenue and Oxford Street. This ground is admirably adapted for baseball purposes, being easily accessible by electric street cars from all sections of the city and by the Pennsylvania Railroad, whose station at Engleside is but a two-minute walk to the park. The site is within a few blocks of the former ground of the Philadelphia League Club, at Twenty-fourth and Columbia Avenue, and also near the old Athletic American Association ground at Twenty-seventh and Jefferson Streets.

The contract for the erection of the pavilion and bleachers has been awarded to James Foster, and he will begin work on Monday next, and is bonded to have all the improvements concluded within two months. The stand, which will be a single decker, will be an imposing affair, capable of seating 4,000 persons. The right and left field bleachers will have a seating capacity of proximate $35,000.

HORSE KILLING STOPPED.

Long Island Board of Health Refuses to Grant Permits.

HEMPSTEAD, Jan. 22.—At the meeting of the Board of Health yesterday all the men who have been engaged in the horse slaughtering industry at Elmont, Franklin Square, and Valley Stream were present, and asked for permits from the board to resume business.

L. J. Memmesheimer and Ferdinand Peihl were represented by counsel, and presented petitions signed by a number of the residents of Franklin Square and Valley Stream. Other well-known residents of the town, including Dr. Louis N. Lanehart, were present, and opposed the granting of any permits.

Justice Jay offered a resolution that no permits be granted to any of the men engaged in the horse killing industry. The resolution was unanimously carried.

The action of the Town Board of Health permanently puts a stop to the horse killing industry in this section of Long Island, and is greatly commended.

NO SCORE IN HOCKEY GAME.

St. Nicholas and New York Clubs Play Without Advantage to Either Side.

A dull hockey contest, the only feature of which was its rough work, was that between the hockey teams of the St. Nicholas Skating Club and the Hockey Club of New York at the St. Nicholas Skating Rink last evening. Both sevens tried desperately to score during the full forty minutes of play, but when time was up neither team had been able to get the puck in their opponents' net, and the tally stood 0-0. An effort was made to continue the game until one team scored, but the management would not allow the game to be prolonged.

St. Nicholas manifested its usual absolute lack of team work, and only twice in the whole game did the puck reach Ellison, who easily checked it. The St. Nicholas forwards all worked hard, but they could accomplish nothing against the effective defense of the Hockey Club. The Hockey Club failed to score on account of Hayward's splendid work at goal. Line-up:

St. Nicholas S. C.	Position.	Hockey Club, N.Y.
Hayward	Goal	Ellison
Mortimer	Point	Cunningham
G. Campbell	Cover point	Newberry
G. Conway	Forward	Forrest
D. Gordon	Forward	Russell
K. Gordon	Forward	De Casanova
Wylie	Forward	Huntington

Referee—Mr. Howard, New York Athletic Club. Time of game—Twenty-minute halves.

Poultry Show Opens To-day.

There was a crowd of fowls, a rattling of wire cages, and busy exhibitors and handlers of poultry were, up to midnight, putting the poultry show in order at the Madison Square Garden for the opening this morning. The birds have been arriving for two days, and have been taken care of in the basement of the Garden, and by the opening time this morning everything will be in order. Of the club meetings to be held during the week, the American Waterfowl Club of America, at 6 P. M. to-night, is the first scheduled.

$2,250,000 Stock
BRUNSWICK HOTEL COMPANY OF NEW YORK.

The Brunswick Hotel Company of New York proposes to purchase the old Brunswick property and adjacent estates on the corner of Fifth Avenue and Madison Square, New York, consisting of the entire frontage on Fifth Avenue and 130 feet deep on both 26th and 27th Streets, containing about 26,000 square feet, and construct thereon a first-class fire-proof, eighteen-story, 900-room, modern hotel, according to plans prepared by Henry Ives Cobb, Architect.

A lease of the property will be arranged for ninety-nine years at an annual rental of $285,000 and taxes, insurance, and repairs.

FINANCIAL PLAN.

Total investment, land, buildings, &c		$4,750,000
Mortgage	$2,500,000
22,500 shares at $100 each	2,250,000
		4,750,000
Rental		$285,000
4 per cent. interest on $2,500,000 mortgage	$100,000
5 per cent interest on $2,250,000 stock	112,500
		$212,500
Surplus		$72,500

Or, the Directors may, if in their judgment it seems advisable, make a mortgage for $3,000,000 at 4 1-2 per cent., in which case the plan will be as follows:

Total investment, land, buildings, &c.		$4,750,000
Mortgage, $3,000,000 at 4 1-2 per cent.
Stock, 1,750,000
Net rental		$285,000
Interest on mortgage	$135,000
Interest on stock, 5 per cent	87,500
	$222,500	222,500
Surplus		$62,500

Inasmuch as the tenant pays all expenses except the administration of the Company, the net surplus can be applied to a sinking fund that will probably retire the mortgage in less than twenty years, according to the first financial plan, and a few years longer by the second plan.

Meetings and Elections.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL R. R. CO.

Public notice is hereby given that a special meeting of the stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad Company will be held at the Company's office in Chicago, Illinois, on Saturday, January 26, 1901, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, for the purpose of acting on these five propositions and transacting such other business as may, in connection therewith, come before the meeting.

FIRST—That in order to provide necessary moneys for the purchase of additional cars and locomotive engines needed for the accommodation of the growing traffic on the Company's lines of railway; the construction of additional second tracks, side tracks, and station and terminal facilities; the reduction of grades; the elimination of grade crossings at different places along said railway lines, and other improvements of a permanent character, some of which purchases, additions and improvements have already been undertaken, and for other corporate purposes, the capital stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company be increased by an issue of 60,000 new shares of $100 each, from 700,000 shares to 760,000 shares of $100 each, thus making the whole capital stock of the Company $86,000,000.

SECOND—That each shareholder shall have the privilege of subscribing at par on or before March 4, 1901, for one share of such new stock, for every ten shares of stock registered in his name on the transfer books of the Company at the close of business on December 20, 1900, and for fractions of shares in like proportion—payment for the new stock to be made in full at the Company's office in the City of New York, on or before Monday, March 4, 1901.

THIRD—That stockholders entitled to subscribe for fractions of shares shall, upon payment therefor, receive scrip convertible into full paid stock when presented in sums of $100 or multiples thereof, but such scrip shall not draw dividends.

FOURTH—That the shares, or fractions of shares, of the new issue, if any, not subscribed and paid for on or before March 4, 1901, may be disposed of by the Board of Directors at such price, or prices, not less than par, as may be approved by them.

FIFTH—That the new shares shall be entitled to participate in all dividends which may be declared payable after March 4, 1901.

For the purposes of this meeting, the stock transfer books will be closed at 3 P. M. on Thursday, December 20, 1900, and remain closed until the morning of Monday, January 7, 1901.

By order of the Board of Directors.
A. G. HACKSTAFF, Secretary.

FINANCIAL.

and that sooner or later it will apparently have to be taken in, leads the Street to believe that much of the present buying is for control.

***

The nearness of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit meeting, to be held on Friday, and the continued talk of changes to be made in the board, were primarily responsible for the strength of that issue yesterday, in which the other local railway stocks shared. There were evidences, however, of not a little manipulation in the Brooklyn stock.

***

There was heavy buying of Southern Pacific all day, many blocks of 1,000 or more shares coming out, and all the talk was that the long-deferred upward movement in the security was at last at hand. Coincident with the rise came a revival of the old stories of a dividend on the stock, and of new interests in the property. Of both these stories officials of the road say they have heard nothing.

***

Inside interests in Amalgamated Copper were apparently rather disturbed by the statement that they were the principal buyers of the stock at the low figure, and several brokers claiming to act for these gentlemen were industrious in putting out reports to the effect that the insiders had never sold and therefore did not need to buy back stock. But the fact remains that there had been inside selling at the high figures preceding the decline, and that at the low figures inside buying appeared.

***

Western houses were purchasers of the Atchisons and Rock Island, while Boston was once more in evidence as a buyer of its favorite, Burlington. It is said that a prominent steel operator, who has been short of the Atchisons, took advantage of the recent break to cover—and even then at a price above the figure at which the stocks were put out.

***

The rise in the Vanderbilt stocks, notably the Nickel Plate issues and New York Central, was accompanied by the report that the Vanderbilt plans of development and unification had progressed to such stage that an official announcement may be expected shortly. Disappointment over the failure of certain expected developments in Nickel Plate led to some selling of those stocks about a week ago by outsiders, but there has been steady buying of the securities ever since by Vanderbilt brokers.

***

Notwithstanding the announcement of an engagement of gold for export on Thursday, there was no change in the money market, both call and time rates continuing as easy as on recent days, most of the call loans being made at 2 per cent. A feature of the market is the continued large offering of Western money. The banks are still gaining from the Sub-Treasury and interior.

***

Contrary to general expectations, London was a buyer in this market yesterday, taking in all probably 50,000 shares on balance. The general impression here is that the Queen's death was discounted by the break on Saturday and in the early dealings of Monday, and that London prices will to-day be little influenced, unless, indeed, extraordinary and altogether unexpected developments should appear. Yesterday the London market had closed before the Queen's death.

SAXON LOAN OVERSUBSCRIBED.

Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne stated yesterday that they have received cable advices announcing that subscriptions opened by their Leipsic branch to the 40,000,000 mark 3½ per cent. Government annuity bonds of the Kingdom of Saxony were closed at noon, European time. The loan, it is added, was several times oversubscribed. The bonds are quoted at 84.25 and interest. Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne have received several large subscriptions and many small ones in this country. The basis of allotments will be made known later.

DISTILLING COMPANY'S BONDS.

Official announcement is made by the Mercantile Trust Company that the subscriptions for the $5,000,000 5 per cent. ten-year collateral trust gold bonds of the Distilling Company of America have closed. The subscriptions are reported to be satisfactory, and the plan for the bond issue will now become operative.

Prudential Insurance Co.'s Report.

The twenty-fifth annual statement of the Prudential Insurance Company of America, just issued, shows that during 1900 the company paid out over $7,000,000 to beneficiaries, which makes a grand total of over $40,000,000 paid to its policy holders since the company's organization in 1875. The company's assets at the end of 1900 were over $10,000,000, and its surplus over $6,000,000. Its premium income was over $24,000,000 for 1900.

A Year of Insurance Business.

The Liverpool and London and Globe Insurance Company has published the fifty-third annual statement of its United States branch, ending Dec. 31, 1900. It shows total assets to be $6,804,902, and the net surplus $4,704,728, both an increase over the figures of last year. Among its assets there are $2,330,835 in United States 4 per cent. Government bonds; $1,911,248 in real estate, and $3,194,350 in bond and mortgage loans. Henry W. Eaton is the resident manager of the company in New York.

WALL STREET TOPICS.

Official announcement that the subscriptions for the $5,000,000 5 per cent. ten-year collateral trust gold bonds of the Distilling Company of America were satisfactory and the plan for the bond issue will become operative.

Shipments of 564,000 ounces of silver to Europe by to-day's steamer.

Project on foot to consolidate the gas and electric light companies of Louisville, Ky.

Sharp break in Quincy Mining stock in the Boston market.

Increase of $213,080 in exports of general merchandise from the Port of New York for the week, as compared with the previous week, and increase of $219,922 as compared with the corresponding week last year.

An official of the Pressed Steel Car Company quoted from Chicago as saying that the capacity of the company is sold ahead beyond next July and orders continue to come in rapidly.

First full day of less than 1,000,000 shares since Dec. 13 last.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call, 2@2½ per cent., closing at 2½ per cent.

Time money, 3½ per cent. for thirty days to four months, 3½@4 per cent. for five to six months. Mercantile paper, 3½@4 per cent. for sixty to ninety days' indorsements, 3¾@4¼ per cent. for choice four to six months' single names, and 5@5½ per cent. for others.

Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $315,012,212; balances, $8,928,652; Sub-Treasury debit balance, $1,800,862.

Money on call in London, 2½@3 per cent. Rate of discount in the open market, 4 per cent. for short and 4@4⅛ per cent. for three months' bills.

Foreign exchange was easier. Nominal rates were $4.81 for sixty days and $4.88 for demand. Rates for actual business closed as follows: Sixty days, $4.82⅝@$4.83⅛; demand, $4.87⅛@$4.87½; cables, $4.88@$4.88⅛; commercial bills, $4.82⅛@$4.82¾.

Continental exchange was quoted as follows: Francs, 5.17½ less 1-16@5.18⅛ and 5.15 less 1-16@5.15⅜; reichsmarks at 94⅞@ 94 11-16 and 95⅛@95 5-16, and guilders, 40⅛@40⅜.

Exchange on New York at domestic centres: Chicago—10c premium. Boston—Par @5c premium. New Orleans—Commercial, 25c premium; bank, $1 premium. San Francisco—Sight, 17½c premium; telegraphic, 22½c premium. Charleston—Buying, par; selling, 1-10c premium. Savannah—Buying, ⅛c discount; selling, par. Cincinnati—Between banks, 14½@15c premium; over counter, 50c premium.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Money was in fair demand to-day in connection with the payment of nearly three-quarters of a million on local loans and stock. Discounts were harder.

Business on the Stock Exchange was virtually at a standstill, being overshadowed by the illness of the Queen. Business opened quietly, but with a rather better tone. Consols rallied, on the idea that a new loan was imminent.

Americans improved to about parity. The feature was a sharp rise in Wabash, Grand Trunks were higher. Kaffirs were unsteady.

Consols for money, 96 5-16; consols for the account, 96 7-16; Atchison, 45½; Canadian, 91¼; St. Paul, 152; Illinois Central, 133¾; Louisville, 80¾; Union Pacific preferred, 84⅝; New York Central, 144½; Erie, 28½; Pennsylvania, 74½; Reading, 16⅝; Erie first preferred, 64½; Northern Pacific preferred, 78; Grand Trunk, 7; Anaconda, 8⅝; Rand Mines, 3⅝.

Bar silver quiet at 28 15-16d per ounce.

Money, 2½@3 per cent. Rate of discount in the open market for short bills, 4 per cent., and for three months' bills, 4@4⅛ per cent.

Spanish 4s, 71¾.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Buenos Ayres, 132.20; Madrid, 36.62; Lisbon, 41; Rome, 5.80.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—Business on the Bourse to-day was calm and transactions were restricted, in view of the condition of Queen Victoria, but the general disposition was more favorable. Internationals were firm. Rio Tintos recovered with the advance in copper.

Three per cent. rentes, 101f 92½c for the account. Exchange on London, 25f 12½c for checks.

Spanish 4s closed at 71.95.

BERLIN, Jan. 22.—Americans and Canadian Pacifics were harder on the Boerse to-day on New York and London advices. Internationals were favorable, especially Spanish 4s, on Paris advices. Locals improved on bear covering.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 40¼ pfennigs for checks. Discount rates: Short bills, 2½ per cent.; three months' bills, 3½ per cent.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 22.—American Telephone was the strong feature in the Boston market, rising 5, to 162½, on continued good buying. Business was of fair volume in Sugar, Federal Steel, National Tube, and Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, with Quincy mining the weak spot in home specialties. Quincy fell from 165 to 152, rallying to 160, against 180 a few days ago. Other mining stocks were steady without noteworthy changes in prices, although Old Dominion ran up to 30⅝ and fell back to 29⅞, later to 30¼. Montana receded from 315 to 310, rallying to 314; Franklin rights sold freely at 12½@c 15c; Père Marquette common rose 3, to 44, later 43; Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham stock was in good request at 39 and 40. Fort Scott and Memphis selling at 50½, and Birmingham incomes at 81; Gas and Coke was ½ better, at 12, and the fives were up 1½, at 67; Parrot jumped 2½ to 19 at the close; Copper Range rose 1¼ to 57¾.

Money was offered at the Clearing House at 2½ per cent., but no loans were reported. New York funds sold at par and 5c premium.

Money on call ranges from 3 to 4 per cent. National banks quote 3½ per cent. as the minimum and report quite a volume of loans outstanding at 4 per cent. Time money is easy, the way from 3¾ to 4 per cent. from sixty days to six months, according to the character of the collateral. Year money is 4 and 4½ per cent.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—Conditions on the Exchange were unchanged to-day. Biscuit common continued to be the only thing on the list that attracted much attention, and trading in that apparently was of an entirely professional nature. The stock opened at 37⅜ and sold to 37¼, closing at 37½. Diamond Match opened at 135, but went off ¼, and closed at 134⅝. Union Traction was slightly lower, the common selling at 12 and the preferred at 49. Metropolitan Elevated common opened off half a point at 27½ and closed at the same figure; the preferred brought 107@108. Strawboard was steady at 33½. Linseed common touched 6, the lowest price for this stock.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 22.—There was little trading in the Philadelphia market until the last half hour to-day. Then the rise in securities in New York stimulated the market, and it showed strength and activity. There was a persistent demand for Lehigh Valley, and it rose to 62¾. Asphalt 5s showed decided improvement, said to be based upon reassuring advices from Venezuela. United Gas Improvement stock improved slightly, but little of this stock is now marketed. Lehigh Navigation rose 2 points, to 65, on small transactions, while there was no decided show of interest. The Readings, Philadelphia Electric, Cambria Steel, and Pennsylvania all scored advances. The Choctaws were unaccountably draggy, considering the company's good earnings. Warwick Iron and Steel fell below 7 on the continued rumor that the company is planning to raise capital for improvements.

The close was strong at the following bid and asked prices:

SECURITIES AT AUCTION.

Richard V. Harnett & Co. sold the following securities yesterday at the Real Estate Salesroom, 111 Broadway:

100 shares National Butchers and Drovers' $25, 90¼ per cent.

100 shares National Butchers and Drovers' $25, 08½ per cent.

28 shares Louisville, Henderson and St. Louis Railway Company preferred, $100 each, (State Trust Company receipts,) 21⅝ per cent.

$57.15 Scrip Louisville, Hendersonville and St. Louis Railway Company preferred, 20 per cent.

20 shares Ann Arbor Railroad Company preferred, $100 each, 54⅜ per cent.

500 shares Inter-State Oil Company, $50 each, $1 per share.

1 share New York Law Institute, $135.

Mr. Youngs Leaves Oyster Bay Bank.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., Jan. 22.—William J. Youngs, who was private secretary to Gov. Roosevelt, and who is to be closely affiliated with the Vice President-elect after the latter enters upon his duties at Washington, has resigned as a Director of the Oyster Bay Bank. Mr. Youngs, who has always been identified with public affairs in Oyster Bay, says other duties will prevent him from longer serving as a bank Director.

FINANCIAL ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The Yarick Bank, which opened for business yesterday, received deposits of over $90,000.

Details will be found in another column of a dividend declared by the Omaha Water Company.

Coupons on certain bonds of the Mexican Mineral Railway Company are to be paid on and after Feb. 1.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

A little more life appeared in the outside market yesterday, but in few stocks did the trading amount to much more than the recent averages. Prices, however, were better and several substantial recoveries resulted from the day's operations. There was a little better demand for the copper stocks, and this group showed more activity than it did on Monday. One or two industrials which had been rather weak succeeded in establishing higher prices.

***

DISTILLING OF AMERICA continued weak, notwithstanding the announcement that the offer of bonds for the purpose of increasing working capital had met with favorable response. The preferred stock sold as low as 25½, the lowest point reached for some time back. A slight improvement showed in the common stock, which closed at 5½ bid. It is expected that the future operations of the company will be very materially assisted by the money which has been secured through the sale of the $5,000,000 of bonds, the subscription to which has just closed. The recent decline in the stock is attributed to the fact that the benefits likely to accrue to the company were to a certain extent discounted by the advance in the stock which occurred before the announcement of the bond issue.

***

AMERICAN BICYCLE bonds were very dull. They were offered at 71½, with practically no demand for them. It was announced that the company has retired $500,000 of its bonds, thus reducing the amount of bonds outstanding by about 5 per cent.

***

BRITISH COLUMBIA COPPER, which for several days had been steadily declining, recovered sharply, and soon after the opening sold as high as 19. There was fairly active trading in the stock between 18½ and 19, and it closed at 18⅝ bid, a net gain of 1 point.

***

UNION COPPER, which on Monday had sold down to 4¼, recovered to 4½, but trading in the stock was very light.

***

AMERICAN BRIDGE common was traded in to the extent of about 500 shares, all of which sold at 42. The preferred stock sold at 91, but the transactions in this issue were even more limited than in the common. The other steel stocks were entirely neglected.

***

NEW ENGLAND GAS AND COKE bonds recovered partially from the decline which they suffered recently, but in this market only one or two transactions were reported. They sold at 86⅛ and closed at 66 bid.

***

NASSAU ELECTRIC 4s were again in demand, and advanced to 96 on the purchase of $24,000 of the bonds. They were in demand at this price at the close.

***

RUBBER GOODS common shared in the recovery in prices, and sold as high as 27⅞. It closed at 27¾ bid, a net gain of three-quarters of a point. The preferred stock was dull and unchanged.

***

STANDARD OIL sold just at the close at 700, and remained offered at that price. It showed a net loss of 7 points.

***

UNITED RAILWAYS OF ST. LOUIS 4s were traded in to the extent of about $50,000, which sold between 80½ and 80. They closed with a fractional net loss at 80 bid. The preferred stock was traded in to some slight extent, but St. Louis Transit was neglected.

A NEW THIEVING DODGE.

Police Believe that They Have Made a Discovery in Hirschberg's Case.

Nathan Herman of 294½ Grand Street, a jeweler, was standing in his shop last night when a well-dressed young man entered and asked to be shown some diamond rings for women. A tray of rings was taken out of the case. The customer asked for some lockets, and when Herman got them he found that a ring was missing. He said as much to his customer.

"You accuse me of stealing it?" the customer replied, indignantly. "I demand that you call a policeman and search me." A little boy happened just then to loiter in front of the place.

"Here, little boy, take this nickle and call a policeman," said the customer, handing the boy something. The boy said "Thank you," and disappeared. The customer and Herman waited for some time and finally the latter himself called in Detectives Delaney and Walsh of the Eldridge Street Station. They searched the customer who all the time insisted that they make their search thorough enough to vindicate him. They did so, and noticed that his coat collar was unduly thick. Turning it up they found it filled with little pockets in which were a woman's locket, some pawn tickets for another locket, a diamond ring, &c., all worth about $200. The missing ring was not found. The detectives say the boy worked in collusion with the alleged thief, and that the latter gave the stolen ring to him when he pretended to hand him the five-cent piece.

The prisoner said he was Hirsch Hirschberg, thirty-eight years old, of Montvale, N. J., and his vocation a teacher of modern languages. He declined to volunteer any explanation of the peculiar coat collar arrangement. He was locked up on a charge of larceny and being a suspicious person.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Apartment Houses on Central Park West and Columbus Avenue Sold—Harlem River Water Front at Auction.

John M. Thompson & Co. have sold for Alonzo B. Kight to Isidore M. Bon of Brooklyn for $230,000 the eight-story apartment house, known as the Pamlico, 97 and 99 Central Park West, between Sixty-ninth and Seventieth Streets, 50 by 100.

L. J. Phillips & Co. have sold for William H. Scott to an investor for about $120,000, the five-story apartment house at the southwest corner of Columbus Avenue and Eighty-eighth Street, 50.8½ by 100.

John N. Golding has sold for W. W. & T. M. Hall the lot 2 East Sixty-seventh Street, 50 by 100.5, formerly the site of Wallace C. Andrews's residence, to H. T. Vertheim, who will erect thereon a residence costing about $200,000. Mr. Golding has also sold for D. E. Seybel, to a prominent Wall Street broker, two lots on the west side of Park Avenue, between Seventy-sixth and Seventy-seventh Streets, 51 by 80. The broker will build there a private stable.

It is reported that Jacob Bookman has sold the plot on the south side of Ninety-sixth Street, 150 feet east of Fifth Avenue, 125 by 100.8.

Rushby & Babcock have sold for Gustavus L. Lawrence to a client for occupancy the three-story dwelling 20 Hamilton Terrace, 16 by 78 by 100.

Greene & Taylor have sold the four-story brick dwelling 515 West End Avenue, 20 by 64.

The purchase of the block front on the east side of Broadway, between Fifty-sixth and Fifty-seventh Streets, from the various owners by the Central Realty, Bond and Trust Company has been completed. Brokers in the deal were William M. Ryan, John N. Golding, and S. Osgood Pell & Co. The plot has frontages of 214.4 feet on Broadway, 175.5 feet on Fifty-sixth Street, and 196.5 feet on Fifty-seventh Street. Pell & Co. were also the brokers in the sale of the Hotel Virginia property for the Central Realty, Bond and Trust Company.

J. Edgar Leaycraft & Co. and Howard G. Bagley have sold the two four-story two-flat houses 530 and 532 West One Hundred and Thirteenth Street, each 18.9 by 100.11.

Oscar L. Foley has sold for Elias Kempner for $57,000 the new six-story tenement 21 Leroy Street, 25 by 90.

Charles B. Farnolo & Co. have sold for Fuld Brothers to Hollis McAllister of Baltimore for $27,500 the five-story tenements 124 and 126 East Houston Street.

Schmeidler & Bachrach are the purchasers of 221 East Eighty-third Street, the sale of which was recently reported.

John B. Davidson has sold for M. C. Baum to a Mrs. Wetherbee for $17,500 the five-story double flat 114 Bradhurst Avenue, 25 by 75.

R. C. & F. T. Barry have sold for Mrs. Feldenburg the twenty-one-foot private dwelling 31 East Seventieth Street to a Mr. Whittel, on private terms.

The Auction Room.

An important offering at auction yesterday was that of the entire block bounded by Third and Lincoln Avenues, the Southern Boulevard, and the Harlem River, including considerable land under water and valuable water-front rights. The property was sold by order of the executors of the estate of the late Bryan Lawrence. Additional interest was given to yesterday's sale through the fact that in April, 1898, the same parcel was offered at auction and was struck down to Flake & Dowling on a bid of $213,000. This purchase, however, was never completed.

The first bid yesterday was $125,000. Competition was confined to two bidders, and dragged along until the price had reached $181,500, at which figure the property was sold by Auctioneer Wells to Henry W. De Forest. The buyer, it is understood, will retain his purchase as an investment. The frontages of the block are 241 feet on Third Avenue, 333.2 feet on the Southern Boulevard, 430 feet on Lincoln Avenue, and 518.3 feet along the bulkhead line of the Harlem River.

Other offerings at auction yesterday resulted as follows:

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

In the following list "mtg" stands for mortgage and "R S" for revenue stamps. The war revenue law provides that stamps shall be placed on all conveyances at the rate of 50 cents for each $500 of consideration. This "consideration" has been held to mean only the equity above the mortgage, except in the rare cases where the purchaser assumes payment of the mortgage. The amount of the mortgage plus 1,000 times the value of the revenue stamps on the conveyances should therefore show the true consideration:

OWNERS OF PROPERTY

in the Bedford-Stuyvesant district will confer a favor by letting me know early in the Spring their offerings for rent.

The renting inquiry begins on Lincoln's Birthday, (February 12th,) and is fairly under way by Washington's Birthday.

This activity lasts until about March 15th, falling off rapidly thereafter.

Don't wait till the market is over before asking your tenants their intentions. Have it settled with them all the first week of February—or before if you can.

The best business people are early in the field for homes. That's the kind you want for tenants, and will see if you follow my advice.

CONFUSION ON THE BRIDGE

Changes at the Manhattan Terminal Cause Great Trouble.

Passengers on Through Trains Restricted to a Certain Space and Compelled to Use the Forward Car.

The patrons of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, who are never, it seems, entirely at peace with that corporation, feel that the company is going in a bit too heavy for the mystic maze idea in operating its lines. Having passed many sleepless nights in futile efforts to solve the mysterious intricacies of the locally famous "loop" at East New York, Brooklynites now find themselves confronted with another problem in the shape of the new traffic arrangement on the bridge. What is known as the "razzle dazzle" at the loop affected only travelers from the outlying sections of Brooklyn, but the new maze at the Manhattan end of the bridge is a trouble with which the down-town dwellers in Brooklyn appear to be chiefly concerned.

The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, in inaugurating a through elevated railroad train service to Park Row made a number of changes at the Manhattan terminal of the bridge, which have caused a great deal of confusion there, particularly during what are known as "rush" hours. The confusion results from the new arrangements for transporting local bridge passengers from Manhattan to Brooklyn. These passengers are allowed to ride only in the forward car of each through train which crosses the bridge. A restricted space is provided for their accommodation on the station platform, to reach which they are obliged to walk to the extreme easterly stairway of the terminal, where is situated the only booth where they may buy bridge tickets. The greater part of the space on the platform, as well as nearly all the ticket booths, are devoted to the through traffic.

It is claimed that in providing for their accommodation, the company miscalculated the number of passengers who use only the local bridge railroad each day. In the middle of the day the local bridge passengers do not appear to be inconvenienced by the new arrangement, although at first it caused them some confusion, but during the busy hours the accommodations provided for them appear to be wholly inadequate, and great crowding on the station platform and the cars results.

Many complaints against the new arrangement have already been made by patrons of the road, but the officials of the company claim that everything is being done that is possible to accommodate passengers. The railroad people say that it is impossible to separate the local from the through passengers in any other way than to carry the bridge passengers in the forward cars of the trains, the local passengers paying only 2½ cents' fare, while the through passengers pay 5 cents. The company claims that the one car on each train set apart for the bridge passengers is ample for this traffic, despite the complaints to the contrary. The officials of the road also declare that it was necessary to place the ticket booths for bridge passengers at the extreme easterly end of the terminal, in order to successfully separate them from the through passengers.

Big Verdict Against Railroad Company.

Mrs. Anne Reilly of 160 Patchen Avenue, Brooklyn, obtained a verdict of $15,000 yesterday in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, against the Brooklyn Heights Railroad Company in a suit brought by her to recover $30,000 for the death of her husband, Patrick Reilly. Reilly was employed as a coachman by John H. Rowland of 406 De Kalb Avenue. He was killed in a collision between his coach and a car of the defendant company at Fulton Street and Clermont Avenue in September last.

MAGISTRATE CRANE'S REVENGE

Heaps Coals of Fire on the Head of the Man Who Cheated Him Fifteen Years Ago.

Magistrate Leroy B. Crane, sitting in the Yorkville Court yesterday had before him a man who had cheated him fifteen years ago. James C. Watkinson, sixty-three years old, giving his occupation as a broker and his residence as the Mills Hotel No. 1, was arraigned in court on suspicion of check kiting. He had been arrested the night before in the corridor of the Broadway Central Hotel by Central Office detectives. In his possession was found a check for $25 on the Knickerbocker Trust Company with the purported signature of Robert C. Williamson.

When Watkinson was arraigned at the bar the Magistrate looked at him for a few minutes and then said:

"Don't you remember me?"

"I do not," said the prisoner.

"I am Leroy B. Crane. I did some work for you about fifteen years ago when I was practicing law. You never paid me. I'll treat you with more consideration now."

"I don't remember that," said the prisoner.

"You were engaged in the real estate business, and had a suit about a skating rink in Harlem, and I won it for you. You fleeced me out of my fee. You are in my power now. I will return good for evil."

The detectives said Watkinson was an old offender, and had just finished a term in prison. His picture is in the Rogues' Gallery.

"Don't be too hard on him," said the Magistrate.

The detectives said they expected to have a number of complainants against the prisoner this morning, and the Magistrate held him for a further hearing.

HE HELD THE BURGLAR.

Fialkoff Only Let Go After He Had Been Dragged Out of a Second-Story Window and Badly Hurt.

Struggling desperately to hold a burglar who had invaded his apartments early yesterday morning, Philip Fialkoff, a cap-maker of 58 Orchard Street, was dragged out of a second-story window and fell to the yard below, still clinging to the burglar. Fialkoff fell underneath, and was seriously hurt, while the burglar, landing on top of his assailant, got up uninjured and ran away, but was subsequently captured by a policeman after another desperate struggle.

Fialkoff, who lived with his wife and two brothers in the rear of the second floor of the tenement at the address given, was awakened shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday morning by the sound of the window at the rear of the bedroom being opened and a moment later a broad-shouldered man entered through the window.

Fialkoff leaped from his bed and grappled with the intruder, while Mrs. Fialkoff shouted for help. The capmaker's brothers, who were awakened by the uproar, ran to the assistance of their brother, but the burglar was more than a match in strength for all three. He succeeded again and again in throwing off two of the men, but the capmaker, who had secured a grip around the intruder's legs, hung on like grim death.

The burglar finally managed to get a tight hold of Fialkoff, and moving toward the window jumped out. Fialkoff hung on desperately, and both went out of the window together. Fialkoff's scalp was cut, his arms and legs were contused, and he received internal injuries. The shock of the fall released his hold on the burglar, who administered a parting kick to the prostrate man, and then climbed a twenty-foot wall separating the rear yard of the house from the rear of the houses on Grand Street.

Meantime another of the Fialkoff brothers ran to the Eldridge Street Police Station and gave the alarm. A number of policemen ran to the place, but before they arrived Patrolman Murphy had responded to the calls for help. He summoned Policeman Ammon and ran to the yard. They found the injured man groaning on the pavement. Leaving Ammon to care for Fialkoff, Murphy scaled the same wall that the burglar went over, and finally found his man hiding on the rear extension of the Grand Street buildings. The policeman and the housebreaker had a desperate struggle on the roof of the extension, the burglar trying to throw the officer into the yard. He was finally subdued with a night stick and taken to the station house, where he described himself as Thomas Fitzgerald of 35 Division Street. It is believed that he is an old offender. Fialkoff was taken to Gouverneur Hospital in a dangerous condition.

TEN-YEAR-OLD HERO.

Lying in the Hospital His First Concern Was for His Mother.

Victor McCarthy, ten years old, of 713 Cortlandt Street, West Hoboken, yesterday won the hearts of the Sisters at St. Mary's Hospital in Hoboken by his concern for his mother. He was picking coal on the Erie Railroad tracks when he was struck by a train. His right arm was broken and mangled.

"Please don't send word to my mother," said the little fellow, regardless of the pain he was suffering. "She loves me very much, and it will break her heart to know that I am hurt."

The Sisters explained that it would be necessary to notify his mother lest his unexplained absence should cause her greater anxiety than the knowledge of his injury. This satisfied him, and Mrs. McCarthy was summoned to the hospital. An affecting meeting between mother and son followed.

DIDN'T WANT TO GO TO EUROPE.

Little Miss Harper Threw Her Doll Away, Ran Down Liner's Gangplank, and Appealed to Policeman.

"Please, Mr. Policeman, don't let them take me with them; I don't want to go to Europe."

The speaker was a pretty girl ten or eleven years old, the scene was the Hamburg-American steamship pier at Hoboken, and the person addressed was Policeman Hammond. Before he could demand an explanation of the child's appeal she was joined by a well-dressed couple who had followed her down the gangplank of the steamship Columbus, just about to sail.

The man said he was John Harper of Newburg, N. Y. He was accompanied by his second wife, and they were about to sail by the Columbus, intending to spend the rest of the Winter in Egypt. The child, Mr. Harper said, was his daughter by his first wife. Her name was Annie. Mr. and Mrs. Harper wished to take the child with them, but she preferred to remain at home with her sisters. It was not until they were on board the steamer that she was told of their intention to take her with them despite her objections. When she was told of this decision she threw away a big doll she carried, ran down the gangplank to the pier, and appealed to Policeman Hammond.

Mr. and Mrs. Harper consulted with several friends who had accompanied them and concluded to send the child back home. Then Mrs. Harper's maid, who is greatly attached to the child, announced that she preferred to return to Newburg with Annie. The upshot of the affair was that the maid and the child had their way and Mrs. Harper sailed on the Columbus with her husband, but minus the maid.

"You see," said Annie, with womanly wisdom to the policeman, as she bade him good-bye, "I don't want to go to Europe, because I have already been there twice and I don't like the country."

NO WATER IN BEDFORD PARK.

Delegation Complains to Mayor Van Wyck, Who Advises Them to Vote.

A delegation of residents of Bedford Park called on Mayor Van Wyck yesterday and complained that they had "no water, to make bread with or to wash in." Alderman Geiger introduced the delegation to Mayor Van Wyck. After a short discussion Mayor Van Wyck said:

"You people better go to the Municipal Assembly for relief. You have as much influence with it as I have. If it will not give you relief, vote against the members who oppose your wishes at the polls and drive them out of office."

The members of the delegation complained that they had no water for any purpose. One of them said:

"There is no water to put out a fire. We have no water to wash, and I am telling you the truth, Mr. Mayor, when I say that we have no water to make bread with."

"Yes, that is the reason why we curse the city officials," said one of the delegation.

"The Municipal Assembly is responsible," said Mayor Van Wyck.

"That is the reason why we curse it," said another resident of Bedford Park.

The delegation left the Mayor's office without forming any plan of action.

ATTACKED BY CAT IN CELLAR.

Saloon Keeper Killed the Animal with a Blow with a Hatchet.

Luke Healey, who keeps a saloon at Grove and Ninth Streets, Jersey City, had an exciting ten minutes in the cellar under his saloon yesterday. He went down stairs to open a barrel. Scarcely had he reached the cellar when a big gray and white cat sprang on his breast and tried to tear him with its claws.

He happened to have a hatchet in his hand. With this he dealt the cat a blow and succeeded in dislodging it. Then he struck a second blow that put an end to all the cat's nine lives at once.

The dead cat proved to be a fine specimen of its kind, and Mr. Healey will have it stuffed and mounted as an ornament for his bar.

LEGAL NOTES.

MECHANIC'S LIEN LAW.—The question when an owner's interest in real property may be subjected to liability for improvements made upon such realty by a lessee was the subject of a recent decision by the Court of Appeals. Mrs. Annie W. Gould, in July, 1892, leased premises in Twenty-second Street to Joseph H. Simpson for twelve years. The lessee, who agreed at his own expense to make specified changes and improvements, afterward organized the firm of Simpsons', which continued in possession till October, 1896, when it was dispossessed by the lessor. Benjamin F. De Klyn, as assignee of Peter T. Brennan, brought an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien, for a balance of $14,300 claimed to be due for improvements, which added $40,000 to the value of the property. The referee before whom the action was tried found in favor of the plaintiff. A reversal of that decision by the Appellate Division, in this city, has been unanimously affirmed by the Court of Appeals in an opinion by Judge Landon. The referee found that while the work on the premises was in progress, Mrs. Gould and her husband were frequently in the street and saw the work getting on, and Mr. Gould was aware of the nature of the work in progress, and mentioned the matter to Mrs. Gould. Judge Landon says that the mere knowledge on the part of the owner that improvements were being made on his premises by the lessee, beyond those called for in the lease, which the lessee was to make at his own expense, was not alone sufficient to subject the owner's interest to a lien in behalf of a contractor. The consent of the owner, which the statute provides shall render him personally liable, could not be implied in the absence of some affirmative act on his part tending to mislead the lessee or contractor. The provision of the mechanics' lien law, that a failure to state in the notice filed the name of the true owner or lessee against whose interest a lien is claimed, shall not impair its validity, will not authorize a lienor, who has inserted the name of the lessee as the person against whose interest he claimed a lien, to afterward proceed, contrary to his original intention, against the interest of the owner.

FALLING ON ICE ON A CITY SIDEWALK.—Susan S. Morris sued the Village of Saratoga Springs for damages for personal injuries she sustained by falling upon ice which had formed on the sidewalk adjacent to the Town Hall, on Dec. 16, 1898. The evidence given on the trial tended to show that the sidewalk, in the main, was free from ice, but that for ten days prior to the accident, during all of which period the temperature was below the freezing point, the village had permitted to remain on the sidewalk a sheet of ice which began in a ridge from one to three inches in thickness, three feet from the building, and extended two or three feet toward the curbstone. This ice was formed by water dripping from the eaves of the building and through the cracks in the cornice. Such dripping had continued for three or four years prior to the accident, and for a year there had been a hole in the conductor leading from the gutter; and at the time of the accident ice had formed in the conductor. The Trial Justice dismissed the complaint, but the Appellate Division, at Albany, held that this was an error, and, in an opinion by Justice Edwards, said that the question of the defendant's negligence and the plaintiff's freedom from contributory negligence should have been submitted to the jury.

ROGERS, PEET & CO.:

Gentlemen:—

Bought a suit of you in the early summer. Wore it on ocean steamers, channel steamers, and fishing smacks in Holland. Climbed Swiss mountains on all fours. Went up Vesuvius with its sulphurous dust. Tramped Paris with its "wearing shew" and London with its fogs; and here in the dear dirty streets of home, I'm wearing it still, as good as ever, and no Ananias about it either.

No wonder we had to mark some of our best $25, $22 and $20 suits down to $15.

TUNNEL ROUTE "HELD UP"

Council Refers Changes in Rapid Transit to Committee.

Board of Aldermen Has Adopted the Recommendations Which Will Save the City $75,000.

The Municipal Assembly has been "holding up" certain plans and changes in the rapid transit tunnel route which the Commissioners and Contractor McDonald are anxious to have passed.

On June 21, 1900, the Rapid Transit Commission passed a resolution amending the original route as follows:

Beginning at the point under Eleventh Avenue on the centre line thereof produced above named—namely, 1,105 feet north of the centre line of One Hundred and Ninetieth Street, and running thence under and over Eleventh Avenue and private property to Naegle Avenue; thence along and over Naegle Avenue to Amsterdam Avenue; thence along and over Amsterdam Avenue to the said point at or near its intersection with King's Bridge Avenue or Broadway, and south of Riverdale Avenue as aforesaid.

On one pretext and another this matter has been "held up" in the Municipal Council. At the meeting held last week the Board of Aldermen passed the authorization, and the matter came before the meeting of the Council yesterday.

Alderman Wise moved that the Rapid Transit Commissioners be given authority to change the route as proposed.

"This is a matter which should receive very careful consideration," said Councilman Cassidy of Queens, who has been active in holding up many ordinances.

"The facts of this matter are well known," said Councilman Wise. "If we pass this resolution there will be a saving to the city of from $50,000 to $75,000. The present plan calls for construction in the shape of an "S" over this part of the route. The change is to make a straight line of the route in this section. The property owners are all anxious to have this matter acted on at once."

Councilman Cassidy insisted that the matter should be referred to the Railroad Committee. This resolution prevailed. The report of the Board of Aldermen adopting the recommendations of the Rapid Transit Commissioners is as follows:

That, having examined the subject, they find that by the adoption of the proposed plan there will be a saving to the city of from $50,000 to $75,000, and that the proposed change will not only straighten the line, doing away with a bad curve, but will shorten the distance about a quarter of a mile, and thus facilitate transit. The reason given by the Rapid Transit Commissioners for this route not being chosen in the first place is that at the time of the approval of the original plans, i. e., namely, in 1897, there was no street laid out where the proposed change is contemplated, and as this part of the road is to be elevated, it was essential that it follow the line of some thoroughfare; consequently the curve in the original plan was adopted. The proposed change is to be along the line of streets since laid out. There is absolutely no objection to this modification of plan by the property-holders in the neighborhood.

How long this matter will be "held up" in the Municipal Council is problematical. There are very few meetings of committees of this board.

The failure of the Municipal Council to approve the change in the route will cause no monetary loss to Contractor McDonald. The extra expense of about $75,000 will be placed on the taxpayers.

There was talk yesterday that the Rapid Transit Commissioners would seek a mandamus to compel the Council to take action on the matter. No application has as yet been made to the courts.

The Board of Aldermen yesterday defeated an ordinance to appropriate $60,000 to save the trees on the Boulevard from destruction because of the building of the rapid transit tunnel. Contractor McDonald and the residents of the district have used every effort to save the trees. It was arranged with a tree-planting association to dig up the trees and replant them after the tunnel was completed at a cost of $30,000, on a guarantee that the trees would thrive.

Alderman McInnes of Brooklyn opposed the appropriation yesterday, and it was defeated.

In a few months other rapid transit matters will come before the Municipal Assembly. The route of the rapid transit tunnel to Brooklyn will have to be fixed, and there are several other proposed changes in the route of the tunnel in Harlem which are being talked over.

CUSTOMS OFFICIALS REMOVED.

Undervalued Linen Which Later Was Seized at the Brevoort House.

Following an investigation into alleged irregularities in the appraisement of certain imports, Appraiser Wilbur F. Wakeman of this port yesterday received a letter from the Treasury Department approving his recommendation for the removal of George H. Laughlin, an examiner in the Appraiser's Stores, and adding that the removal take effect at the date of his suspension some time ago.

Laughlin was the official who examined a number of trunks containing fine table linen seized at the Brevoort House some time ago. A special agent of the Treasury Department suspected that something was wrong about this examination, investigated, and finally seized the trunks. The goods had been appraised at $348, and the duty paid was $174. It was learned after the seizure that the goods were worth between $1,600 and $1,700.

John F. Mooney, a customs Inspector, who was involved in the same case with Examiner Laughlin, has also been removed from the service.

Policeman at Fifth Avenue and 34th St.

President Guggenheimer of the Municipal Council has succeeded in his efforts to have a policeman stationed at the corner of Fifth Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street to protect pedestrians who desire to cross the street. Several serious accidents have occurred at this point, and President Guggenheimer appealed to Chief Devery to give the people protection while passing through the crowd of vehicles. Chief Devery took no action, and President Guggenheimer appealed to Mayor Van Wyck, with the result that a policeman has been ordered on duty at the crossing.

MILES McDONNELL ARRAIGNED.

Asks that Courtney Be Examined—Lawyer Levy Withdraws.

Miles McDonnell, the gambler, who is under $7,000 bonds in connection with the death of George Price and the injuries received by Edward Courtney a month ago in a shooting affray in the Onawa Café, at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street and Park Avenue, was arraigned in the Harlem Police Court yesterday for examination. This arraignment was on the charge of felonious assault in the shooting of Courtney.

Abraham Levy, who has represented McDonnell all through the prosecution arising out of the shooting, announced to the Court that he was about to withdraw from the case and asked that his name no longer be attached to the records of it.

Detective Meehan then notified Magistrate Zeller that Courtney was at his home paralyzed from the knees down from the effects of his wound, and was unable to be present in court. McDonnell asked the Court to appoint a physician to examine Courtney. The Magistrate agreed to do so and adjourned the case until Jan. 28.

It was said in court that the reason Mr. Levy withdrew from the case was that McDonnell believes that he has plain sailing ahead and objects to paying a lawyer's fee, preferring to manage his own case.

WANT A CHANGE OF VENUE.

Action of Counsel for the Bellevue Nurses Accused of Killing Hilliard.

The motion for a change of venue to be made by counsel for Nurses Dean, Marshall, and Davis, indicted for the killing of Louis Hilliard in the Bellevue Insane Pavilion, before Justice Beach, in the Supreme Court, to-day will be opposed by Assistant District Attorney Le Barbier.

Counsel for the nurses, in the event of the denial of their motion, will ask that the case be transferred from the Court of General Sessions, where it is on Judge Newburger's calendar, to the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, where Justice Edgar L. Fursman is presiding.

Mr. Le Barbier will oppose this motion also, on the ground that the calendar of the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court is already filled with important cases, which will take up the court's time for some weeks to come. Among these is the case of Dr. Samuel J. Kennedy, charged with the murder of Dollie Reynolds.

Loyal Legion Badge Case Dismissed.

Judge Foster in General Sessions Monday dismissed the indictment against David Proskey, coin and curio dealer, procured at the instance of ex-District Attorney Gardiner, alleging the receipt of a Loyal Legion badge stolen from Dr. Stephen Cook of 111 West Twelfth Street. Dr. Cook lost his pin at a Loyal Legion dinner in 1898. The badge was noticed by a member of the order in Proskey's show window, and Dr. Cook called and identified his property. Mr. Proskey stated that he had bought it from another dealer and would return it for $11. Dr. Cook offered $3, which was refused. Judge Foster says there is no evidence that Proskey knew the pin was stolen.

GREAT FIRE IN MONTREAL

Loss of Over $2,500,000 in the Business District.

Board of Trade Building Among the Many Destroyed — Firemen Unable to Cope with Flames for Many Hours.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Jan. 24.—One of the most disastrous fires from which this city has ever suffered began at 8 o'clock last night, and notwithstanding the heroic efforts of the entire fire department, the progress of the flames was not checked until 1 o'clock this morning.

At that hour the fire had destroyed property valued at between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000, and was still burning, though the appearance was that the firemen have at last got it under control.

Included in the property burned is the splendid Board of Trade Building, which cost over half a million dollars, with over a hundred tenants and half a dozen large firms and two score of smaller concerns. The weather was cold and the firemen were greatly hampered in this respect. Outside of the Board of Trade Building there was not a modern structure in those burned.

The narrow streets, antiquated buildings, and the inflammable nature of the stocks they contained, made a combination which the department was powerless to overcome. The fire practically burned until it came to open space, which gave the firemen an opportunity for effective work. For a time it looked as if the flames would spread along Commissioners Street to the Grand Office Building in the course of erection there.

Numerous crowds of people jammed the narrow streets, greatly impeding the work of the firemen. The police could not control them. Women fainted and some were slightly injured in rushes for safety.

The following are estimates of the principal losses: Board of Trade, $600,000; insurance, $400,000; tenants, $100,000; M. Saxe & Co., wholesale clothiers, $75,000; H. A. Nelson & Sons' Company, fancy goods, $150,000; Beardmore & Co., tanners, $100,000; Silverman, Boulter & Co., hats, caps, furs, $75,000; Coristine & Co., furs, $300,000; C. Seybold Sons & Co., $80,000; Redmond, Greenlees & Co., hats and furs, $50,000; H. Lev woolens, &c., $60,000; C. A. Chouillau & Co., commission merchants, $25,000; B. Levin & Co., furs, $50,000; Gilmour Brothers & Co., commission merchants, $50,000; Laporte, Martin & Co., $50,000; J. Cohen & Co., wholesale clothiers, $40,000.

The first fire started at 8:05 o'clock last night in the premises of M. Saxe & Sons, wholesale clothiers, on the corner of Lemoine and St. Peter Streets. The streets in the locality were deserted at the time, and the fire apparently had a good headway before the first alarm was sent in. The firemen on arrival found the building a three-story stone structure, a solid mass of flames, the fire having apparently started in the basement and rushed up the elevator shaft in the rear of the store.

Second and third alarms were sent in immediately on the arrival of the Division Chief, but before the nearest reinforcements reached the scene the flames had leaped across St. Peter Street, which is very narrow at this point, and attacked the big five-story stone building occupied by H. A. Nelson & Sons' Company, fancy goods. Here it spread as rapidly as it had in the Saxe Building. In almost an instant it seemed as if the entire building was a roaring furnace.

When the rear wall of this building fell it was seen that the Board of Trade Building would have to go too. Solid sheets of flame sprang out and up and seized hold of the big building in a dozen different places, driving the firemen back.

The newer and more modern structure burned more slowly than those which already had fallen prey to the flames, but the firemen were apparently paralyzed and could not stay the march of the devouring element. By this time every piece of fire-fighting apparatus the city possesses was in use. Two water powers, which had failed to keep the blaze out of the Board of Trade Building, were shifted around to St. Paul Street, but here again they were too late.

From the north side of St. Paul Street the flames leaped across the street and destroyed the premises of Thomas Davidson & Co., H. Levi, dry goods, and half a dozen other smaller concerns.

On Lemoine Street the extensive wholesale grocery of the firm of Laporte, Martin & Co. took fire. After the firemen had abandoned al hope of saving the Board of Trade Building, they concentrated their efforts mainly on this building, for the spread of the flames in this district would mean the loss of the entire wholesale dry goods section.

COLOR LINE IN WOMEN'S CLUBS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—By the decisive vote of 175 to 33 the Chicago Woman's Club today expressed itself as favoring the admission of colored women to the General Federation. The resolution adopted expressed regret for the exclusion of Mrs. Josephine St. Pierre Ruffin, the colored representative from the Woman's Era Club of Medford, Mass., to the National Convention of Women's Clubs held at Milwaukee last year. The minority report decried the effort to force upon the Southern clubs a condition that they were struggling to avert. It read:

"Resolved, That the Chicago Woman's Club deprecates at this time any attempt to impose by Northern votes upon Southern women's clubs a semi-social equality with the negro such as must exist in the General Federation, since its constitution states its chief purpose is not philanthropic, but for social, literary, artistic, and scientific culture."

Chicagoan Bequeaths $50,000 to Yale.

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—Among the bequests contained in the will of Albert Emmett Kent, which was filed for probate to-day, is one devising $50,000 for the purpose of completing the Kent Laboratory at Yale College. The gift is conditioned on the provision that the building be finished without any change of the present designs. The will disposes of an estate valued at $1,256,000, of which $1,146,000 is in realty. Three-fourths of the estate is bequeathed to the widow, the residue being set apart for the decedent's son, William Kent.

THE GOVERNOR'S FIRST VETO.

Disapproves Bill to Improve Water Supply of Goshen, in Orange, His Home County.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 24.—Gov. Odell sent his first veto message to the Legislature today. It was in disapproval of the bill introduced by Assemblyman Bedell, and passed by the House and Senate, empowering the President and the Trustees of the village of Goshen to borrow and issue bonds for $10,000 to improve the present water supply of Goshen, and further empowering them to borrow and issue bonds for an amount not to exceed $2,000 in any one year for the purpose of extending the water system of the town. The Governor's veto was based upon the law relating to villages, which says that when village Trustees wish to borrow a sum greater than $2,000 for local improvements the proposition must first be submitted to a vote of the people and receive their approval.

The veto message had a good deal of significance, and there was considerable comment made upon it, as Goshen is the county seat of Orange County, which is the county in which Gov. Odell resides. Assemblyman Bedell, who introduced the bill, is one of the Governor's close friends. It has been the custom of Republican Governors for some years past to send in as few veto messages as possible. When a bill came to them which they could not approve the man who introduced it was generally sent for and informed of Chief Executive's views. Usually, in such cases, the objectionable bill was then withdrawn for amendment, as it was stated. That was the last heard of it. The circumstances of the Goshen bill were such as to furnish good reasons for Gov. Odell following precedent. He chose not to do so. He decided to veto the bill.

His veto was put out as a warning that enactments by the Legislature, the purpose of which is to usurp the authority properly resting in the community affected, except in a case where some unusual exigency exists, will not be countenanced by his administration. The Governor thought his position on this question would be emphasized by the veto of a measure affecting the county seat of his own county.

FIVE-CENT FARE BILL.

Proposed Measure Fixes Uniform Rate Between Brooklyn and Manhattan for Continuous Ride.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—Senator Wagner today introduced a bill providing for a uniform five-cent fare between all points in Brooklyn and New York. The bill provides as follows:

"Any passenger upon the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Cars, the Brooklyn Heights Railroad Company cars, and the cars of the Elevated roads of Brooklyn, who has paid five cents for a passage from any point on the said railways shall be entitled to a continuous passage without change of cars on any of the said roads to the terminus within Brooklyn or the City of New York; or in any case where a connection is made to another road, to the terminus of said road without additional fare."

It shall be the duty of companies operating the elevated railroads to run trains on a headway of not less than five minutes between 6 A. M. and 9 A. M., and between 5 P. M. and 8 P. M., and not less than ten minutes the balance of the time each day, excepting the time between 11 P. M. and 5 A. M., when the headway shall be twenty minutes.

OPPOSITION TO THE OIL TRUST.

Independent Well Owners in Texas May Combine to Shut the Standard Out of the State.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 23.—The recent "bringing in" of the great oil gusher near Beaumont and the demonstration that that oil field promises to soon rival any in the United States in point of production, together with the further evidence that the Corsicana district is growing rapidly in the production of the product, has caused a movement by the several private individuals and indepdendent companies who have producing oil wells in Texas toward organizing a combine with a view of shutting the Standard Oil Company out of Texas entirely.

Immediately upon the discovery of the great oil well near Beaumont, there was a rush of representatives of the Standard Oil Company to that region, but they found that all the prospective oil lands within twenty miles of the gusher had already been leased to representatives of independent companies.

It is asserted that the owners of the Lucas gusher propose to operate independently of the Standard Oil Company, and that it was with that view that the pipe line company was recently organized for the purpose of conducting the oil to Port Arthur, where the product will be loaded on tank boats ready for the markets of the world. An independent company also proposes to build a large oil refinery at Beaumont. The refinery at Corsicana, as well as the pipe lines in the Corsicana district, is owned by the Standard Oil Company, but it is proposed if the present movement looking to consolidation is successful, to also erect a rival refinery in that field.

TRUST BUYS OUT COMPETITORS.

Standard Oil Company Now Alone in the Indiana Field.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD CITY, Ind., Jan. 23.—The Standard Oil Company has purchased the holdings of both the Manhattan and Cudahy Oil Companies, its only pipe-line opposition in the Indiana and Ohio fields. The property was taken possession of yesterday at Montpelier and consists of wells, leases, and a production of 20,000 barrels of oil a month. The property does not include the pipe lines owned by these concerns. The consideration is said to have been $1,000,000.

While the Manhattan will continue to buy oil, it will find its way to the Standard tanks. The Manhattan will continue to operate its pump station, which is south of Montpelier, and force its product through its pipe lines to Kankakee and Chicago. Most of the Manhattan's holdings are in this county, while those of the Cudahy Company are in Watts County, northeast of Montpelier. To-day all the books and leases were transferred to the Standard's office at Montpelier. With these two concerns out of the way, the Standard will have absolute control in the Indiana field.

J. E. GIBSON UNDER ARREST.

Special to The New York Times.

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 23.—J. E. Gibson, the Evansville (Ind.) building contractor, who is charged with having attempted to bribe the Governor to secure his aid in obtaining the million-dollar State House contract recently let and who jumped his bond last Monday, was arrested to-day in Detroit.

Gibson came to Jackson last November with $15,000 in his pocket. He held a conference with the Governor, and immediately thereafter the Chief Executive swore out a warrant against him charging attempted bribery. Gibson was unable to secure voluntary bondsmen and had to put up $5,000 in cash to secure a bond from the First National Bank officers, which has been forfeited. He also, it is said, paid C. H. Alexander, his attorney, a fee of $1,000. He is therefore out $8,000 on his Mississippi experience in going after contracts.

There is little disposition being shown to lynch on his return by the authorities, as they feel that the State has come out well ahead of the game, but Gov. Longino entertains strong views on the subject.

CURRENCY LAW CHANGES.

Bills Providing for an Interchangeable Currency May Be Reported To-day or To-morrow.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—It begins to look as if the currency law will be amended at this session of the Congress, after all. At the beginning of the session Representative Overstreet, (Rep., Ind.,) the proposer of the act of last session, said that a bill to remedy the chief defect of the law, the neglect to provide for an interchangeable currency, would be introduced and offered for discussion, but owing to the expectation of a great pressure of other business it might not be forced to a passage until next Winter. Mr. Overstreet did not at once introduce a bill, but he brought one to notice yesterday that had been referred to the Banking and Currency Committee, and a sub-committee to-day reported it favorably to the whole committee, which will consider it at a meeting to be held on Saturday.

This afternoon a call for a meeting of the Coinage, Weights and Measures Committee was issued, to be held to-morrow, for the special consideration of the bills introduced by Representatives Levy (Dem., N. Y.,) and Hill, (Rep., Conn.,) the latter a member of the Coinage Committee and also of the Banking Committee. The notice for this meeting advises members that it is important to be present. No one appreciates this better than Mr. Levy. He has been urging that something be done since he introduced a bill on Dec. 20 for the redemption at the Treasury of all demands for exchange by the payment of gold coin, and providing also for the maintenance of the gold reserve.

Mr. Hill soon after introduced another measure for a like purpose, but in different phraseology. Both of these bills went to the Coinage Committee, as they dealt chiefly with a question of coinage. Mr. Overstreet introduced a bill on Jan. 8 providing that "all gold and silver coins of the United States, except subsidiary coins, shall be exchangeable for each other at par at the Treasury of the United States at the demand of the holder."

The latter proposition is substantially the matter that the Senate dropped out of the Currency act, and the dropping of which compelled Mr. Overstreet to express regret in the House when the Currency bill was about to be passed. As the Banking Committee was for the whole bill when it was reported, and has not changed its opinion since, it readily took hold of the attempt to perfect its work. The action of the subcommittee to-day is evidence of its readiness to stand by its former action.

Meantime the Coinage Committee has been inviting hearings and discussion, the last undertaking being the invitation of the Chairman, at the instance of Representative Shafroth, (Sil., Col.,) to have William J. Bryan called as a witness. Right upon what seemed to be desultory work in the Coinage Committee tending to academic discussion merely, the Banking Committee has indicated its determination to report a bill on Saturday. That has changed the feeling in the Coinage Committee, and it may conclude to try and get along without the advice of Mr. Bryan, and perhaps get a bill into the House to-morrow or Friday—possibly a day ahead of the Banking Committee.

This is altogether gratifying to Mr. Levy, who sees that the Republicans are determined to have a bill, and that neither they nor his Democratic brethren are likely to give him any credit for helping on the cause of sound money. Mr. Hill's bill will accomplish just about what Mr. Levy wants to achieve, and its proposer has the advantage of being one of the dominant party.

Mr. Overstreet said to-night that he had changed his belief since the opening of Congress, and is now of the opinion that a bill to amend the Currency act can and will be passed before adjournment. He further said that the men who were afraid, when the bill was passed, to go further and provide an absolutely interchangeable currency were now convinced that it would have been safe then and is perfectly safe now, and there would be no opposition from any one who favored the Currency act to the proposition now about to be reported.

CHICAGO MARRIAGE TANGLE.

Woman Discovers She Is a Bigamist—Victim of Bogus Divorce Decree.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—Mrs. Dollie Brunstrom began proceedings to-day in the Superior Court to have her second marriage set aside. This accomplished, she intends to procure a genuine divorce from her first husband and marry her second over again.

According to the bill filed, Mrs. Brunstrom was swindled by an attorney into believing that she had secured a divorce from her first husband. She was married in Ohio to George Palmerton during the year 1880. Their family relations were not pleasant and she began divorce proceedings. She was informed by her attorney Sept. 4, 1895, that a decree had been granted by the court. She says that he also presented her with what purported to be a certified copy of the decree.

Later she met Charles Brunstrom. She says: "I told him the history of my previous life, showed him the copy of the decree which I had received, and which led me to believe that I was single. Believing that I was free to contract marriage, he requested my hand and was accepted."

They were married and lived together until a fortnight ago. At that time they were informed that the document which they supposed was a certified copy of a decree of divorce was a forgery.

TRIED HARD TO GET MARRIED.

Two Brooklynites, Both Divorced, Succeed After Several Attempts.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Jan. 23.—Charles G. Smith, aged forty, and Alice N. Philip, aged twenty-four, both of Brooklyn, were married here to-night in the parsonage of the First Methodist Church by the rector, after several set-backs in their attempt to be made one. Smith came to Stamford yesterday morning and took out a wedding license in the Town Clerk's office. The license revealed the fact that both he and his intended bride were divorced. He sought out the Rev. Charles Morris Addison, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, and endeavored to arrange an hour for their marriage. When the rector learned that both were divorced, he absolutely refused to marry them in the absence of any witnesses.

From St. John's Mr. Smith went to the Presbyterian parsonage, but Dr. Vail, the rector, was out. He thereupon abandoned the attempt and returned to Brooklyn. The couple came to Stamford to-night on the 6:50 o'clock train and went to the Methodist parsonage. The groom handed his license to the pastor, but made no explanation of their divorce. The pastor did not scrutinize the license, and it was not until the couple had departed that he learned they were divorced persons. The marriage was witnessed by a Mr. Miller of Brooklyn. The couple went to the Hotel Rockland.

OHIO MILLIONAIRE DROPS DEAD.

Apoplexy Kills John H. Thomas, the Springfield Manufacturer.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, Jan. 23.—John H. Thomas, aged seventy-four, the millionaire manufacturer of this city, who became famous through his contest with the late Calvin Brice for a seat in the United States Senate, dropped dead this afternoon at his home from apoplexy. Mr. Thomas had been in good health and felt better than usual this afternoon, as he himself expressed it. He took lunch, following which he started to an adjoining room, when he fell on the floor dead.

The deceased was one of the pioneers of this city. He started with comparatively nothing, and through energy, thrift, and industry amassed a large fortune. His son, W. S. Thomas, was until recently Chairman of the Democratic Central Committee and is now mentioned for the nomination for Governor.

THE QUEEN LIES IN STATE

Her Servants at Osborne File Past the Body.

Arrangements for the Funeral to Be Made To-Day—Many Royalties Will Attend It.

COWES, Isle of Wight, Jan. 24.—At 11 o'clock this morning the members of the royal family will gather around the body of the Queen. It lies in a simple coffin in the dining room, which has been transformed into a Chapelle Ardente, festooned with red and white hangings. The Bishop of Winchester, standing before an altar removed for the occasion from the private chapel, will read a portion of the service for the dead.

The coffin rests upon a specially erected platform draped with royal purple, the feet lying to the east. All about are exquisite flowers. The head faces the simple altar. Over the features is a thin veil. The Queen is attired in black and her arms are folded. A beautiful gold cross lies on her breast.

Death has softened the Queen's face, and the thin veil conceals no terrible defects. The hand of the Mighty Leveler has dealt with her lovingly.

Outside the room two officers are always on guard. Within two Indian attendants and some of the ladies in waiting keep constant watch. Six candelabra have been sent to Osborne from St. Paul's Cathedral.

For a few hours after the conclusion of to-day's service the public will be admitted to the room and allowed to view the body of the sovereign who so long reigned over them.

The honor of first seeing the body of the Queen was conferred on her personal retinue, and such a simple, pathetic scene as marked yesterday afternoon could hardly have occurred in any other monarchy. All the servants and tenants were admitted. The footmen, housemaids, coachmen, stable lads, and policemen, dressed in their Sunday clothes, filed through the room for four hours. There were no formalities. It might have been the body of any country lady, whose tenants were bidding her a last farewell. Bent old men, children, and families who had grown up on the estate, who regarded Queen Victoria as a friend and patron rather than as a sovereign, took their turn, and their grief was the sorrow of those who had lost a friend.

In the meantime many residents of Cowes and neighboring towns and some prominent people applied at the porter's lodge for admission; but they were told to come to-day.

Nothing has been decided at Osborne regarding the funeral arrangements or the removal of Queen Victoria's body, and nothing will be decided until after the arrival of the King to-day.

It is now thought improbable that the body will be removed before Sunday. It will, unless the King orders otherwise, be taken on board the royal yacht Alberta, for conveyance to Windsor. The coffin will be placed on the main deck, athwartships, just in front of the structure known as the "Queen's canopy," in which her Majesty was in the habit of sitting during her trips on the yacht. The coffin will be placed on a spot marked on the deck with a brass cross, where the coffin of Prince Henry of Battenberg also rested.

Herr Fuchs, the German sculptor, has arrived to take a cast of the dead Queen's face.

It is reported that Emperor William will remain in the Isle of Wight until the removal of the body, even if this should be postponed for a fortnight.

The Kaiser has ordered in London two magnificent wreaths, with broad ribbons bearing the initials of himself and the Empress, which he will personally place on the Queen's coffin at to-day's service.

It is learned that the cause of the Queen's death as officially given is "senile decay." The doctors have adopted this expression as most suitable and truthful. They attribute the paralysis which attacked her Majesty as secondary to the general weakness of her condition, nor is it considered advisable for reasons of State to intimate that her intellect was dimmed by this particular form of the disease.

Details of the dying hours were not obtainable until late last evening. It appears that the Queen was moved on Sunday from her big bed into a small cot specially built with springs, which was surrounded by a screen. This was to enable the doctors to reach the patient easily on both sides, which was impossible when she lay in a bed six feet wide. In this small bed she passed away.

When Emperor William arrived he rushed without taking off his overcoat to the Queen's bedside, and the first words he said were words of regret that his mother was unable to come. "Yes," murmured the Queen, "I wish 'Vicky' could be here," using a pet name of her eldest daughter.

On Tuesday afternoon all the members of the family were in readiness for the end. At 4 o'clock the Prince of Wales was summoned. Half an hour later he was joined by the other members of the family. At 5 o'clock the Duchess of York arrived, and the Queen kissed her, saying, "I am glad you have come."

The Bishop of Winchester began to pray. The Queen slowly sank into unconsciousness. At 6:15 P. M. the end was thought to have come. The Prince of Wales and several others walked out of the room.

But the vitality of the Queen was not yet extinguished. For another fifteen minutes, with only the Princess of Wales and a few others present, the feeble spark of life was maintained. At 6:30, with Emperor William, the Prince of Wales and the others absent, death actually came.

On Tuesday night neither the King nor his wife would allow their entourage to address them by their correct titles.

The large force of detectives present from London is a precaution against any Anarchist attempt upon the life of Emperor William, and not on account of the new King.

Messages of condolence do not cease to pour in from all quarters of the world. President McKinley's early cablegram created a most favorably impression. It was handed around among the royal personages at breakfast yesterday morning, with the general comment that American sympathy was fitly the first to be received.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—It is understood that the King will return to Osborne this morning to direct the arrangements for the funeral of Queen Victoria.

These were discussed at a meeting of the authorities of the royal household at Buckingham Palace last evening. At the College of Arms it was said that the date of the funeral could not be settled until it was known when the European royalties or their representatives could arrive, but that the function would be held at the earliest possible date, for the convenience of Emperor William.

Buckingham Palace is being made ready for the royal persons who are about to arrive, and Windsor Castle is also being prepared for the reception of many guests. Representatives of all the royal families in Europe will probably be present at the funeral, including the Kings of Italy, Portugal, Belgium, and Greece. The Crown Princes of Germany and Sweden, and Archduke Francis Ferdinand of Austria. All the European Courts will go into mourning for various periods.

Regarding the cause of the Queen's death The Lancet says:

"Death was due to cerebral failure. Transient but recurring symptoms of apathy and torpor, with aphasic indications, gave great uneasiness to the physicians a few days before the final illness. From Saturday these symptoms grew steadily graver, but the heart's action was maintained throughout and the temperature was normal."

BERLIN, Jan. 23.—The imperial yacht Hohenzollern, the cruiser Nymphe, and the tender Sleipner have started for England, taking by order of Emperor William the First Division of Marines and band.

Col. von Rauch and other officers of the First Dragoons will proceed to England.

It is understood that Crown Prince Frederick William will attend Queen Victoria's funeral.

LISBON, Jan. 23.—King Charles intends to attend the funeral of Queen Victoria personally. Court mourning for a month has been ordered.

BUCHAREST, Jan. 23.—Crown Prince Ferdinand will attend the funeral of Queen Victoria, representing the King of Roumania.

UNIVERSAL GRIEF SHOWN.

British Exchanges Closed—London in Mourning Garb.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—All London has donned a garb of mourning. Throughout the West End drawn blinds are seen everywhere, while all the Embassies, Government offices, and public buildings are draped in black, and the flags are half-masted. The members of the Stock Exchanges and all the Produce and Metal Exchanges here throughout the country only assembled yesterday to disperse immediately after the presiding officers had addressed to them a few words of tribute to the dead Queen.

The sorrow felt throughout the empire is described in a constant succession of telegrams arriving from every important town in the colonies, all telling of the suspension of business, the closing of theatres, the display of mourning emblems, and arrangements for memorial services. All the Governors have sent, on behalf of their respective colonies, telegrams of condolence to King Edward and Mr. Chamberlain, Secretary of State for the Colonies.

The Marquis of Lansdowne, Minister of Foreign Affairs, has received from the German Ambassador a letter on behalf of the Diplomatic Corps in London expressing its sympathy and condolence. The communication says:

"This sad event not only fills the hearts of her late subjects with profound sorrow, but will arouse beyond the limits of the British Empire the regret of those whom her Majesty was known to inspire with respect and admiration. Such sentiments are shared most sincerely by the members of the Diplomatic Corps, who, having had the honor of being received at Court and approaching her Majesty, have also had the opportunity of appreciating those rare and incomparable qualities by which that august sovereign captivated the hearts of all who entered her presence."

The morning papers publish a long tribute from the Poet Laureate, Alfred Austin, to the dead Queen.

The Gazette orders the Court to go into mourning until July 24, and into half mourning until Jan. 24, 1902. Lord Roberts has ordered the army to adopt mourning until March 1.

Memorial services will be held in St. Paul's Cathedral morning and evening daily until the burial. At the first of these, held after the regular evening service yesterday, some 5,000 persons were present. Bishop Barry read the burial service, and the "Dead March" in "Saul" and other funeral music was rendered.

There were exceptionally large congregations yesterday in the churches in all parts of the country. At St. Paul's the prayers for the royal family were altered to read: "For our Sovereign Lord the King and the Queen Consort."

CONTINENTAL SYMPATHY.

Furled Flags Over Paris Public Buildings—The Kaiser's Rescript.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—Furled craped flags were hoisted on the Elysée and all the public offices yesterday as a tribute to the memory of Queen Victoria.

The President has countermanded a dinner which was to be given at the Elysée on Jan. 31 in honor of the new Bureaus of the Chamber and Senate, and gave up his intention to be present at functions yesterday and to-day.

A craped standard is fixed over the gateway of the British Embassy, and the register there is filling with the best-known names in France and those of the various Ambassadors. Gen. Dubois and Major Chabaud called at the embassy yesterday and conveyed President Loubet's condolences.

BERLIN, Jan. 23.—The Official Gazette contains the following imperial rescript:

Osborne, Jan. 23.

The death of my beloved, highly honored, and never to be forgotten grandmother, Victoria, has plunged me and my house into deepest mourning. I know my army sincerely shares in the grievous loss I have sustained, and I hereby declare that all officers of my army shall wear mourning for fourteen days.

The First Dragoon Guard Regiment of the Queen shall go into mourning for three weeks.

Flags on all military and public buildings shall be haf-masted. WILHELM, R. I.

The Imperial Chancellor, Count von Bülow, addressing the Reichstag to-day, said that during the long reign of Queen Victoria she had always directed her efforts to the cultivation of peaceful and friendly relations between Germany and Great Britain. He added:

"Not only the near kinship of our imperial house to the English royal family, but also the manifold economic and political interests which bind Germany and England, induce us to share sincerely in the mourning of the British for their venerable ruler. I am certain that it is in consonance with the feelings of the house when I express this sympathy."

The members listened standing.

The President of the House followed in a similar strain, and a resolution was adopted authorizing the President to convey to the Emperor and Dowager Empress Frederick the sympathy of the Reichstag.

All the more important social functions of Berlin official society, including Count von Bülow's dinner in honor of Emperor William's birthday, as well as entertainments planned by other Ministers, have been canceled, and the birthday will be celebrated quietly with a few dinners in military circles.

The Saxon Court will go into mourning for three weeks, and the Court of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha for six weeks.

Orders have been issued that the flags on all warships in domestic waters shall be half-masted until after the funeral.

VIENNA, Jan. 23.—Emperor Francis Joseph went to the British Embassy this morning and personally expressed his sympathy to Lord and Lady Plunkett. He remained there half an hour.

The Duke of Cumberland called at the Embassy, and many of the nobility and Court dignitaries inscribed their names.

LISBON, Jan. 23.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day the President of the Chamber proposed adoption of a resolution of sympathy with Great Britain. The proposal was seconded by the Minister of Foreign Affairs in the name of the Government and the whole Portuguese people, who, he said, shared in the grief of an allied nation. The resolution was adopted unanimously.

Signs of mourning can be seen on all sides in Lisbon. Representatives of the Portuguese royal family and the members of the Diplomatic Corps inscribed their names this morning at the British Legation.

The Cabinet has presented its condolences to the King upon the death of the sovereign of an allied nation.

BRITISH COLONIES MOURN.

Remarkable Manifestation of Sorrow Among the Hindus.

BOMBAY, Jan. 23.—All public functions here have been canceled, the public offices have been closed, and business has been suspended.

The genuine sorrow of the natives over the death of the Queen is extraordinarily marked, even the poorest and most ignorant expressing the utmost regret and profound sorrow. It is a remarkable revelation of sincere loyalty. Special services have been arranged to take place in the native places of worship.

ADELAIDE, South Australia, Jan. 23.—Intense grief is felt everywhere here at the death of the Queen. The Government and other offices are closed and the stores are hung with crape.

MELBOURNE, Victoria, Jan. 23.—Business is entirely suspended here as a result of the death of Queen Victoria, and the deepest grief is manifested. There are signs of mourning everywhere.

KING EDWARD VII.'S ACCESSION SPEECH

He Addresses the Privy Council at St. James's.

PROMISE TO THE NATION

Says He Is Determined to be a Constitutional Sovereign.

ASKS PARLIAMENT'S SUPPORT

Why He Takes the Name of Edward—He Wishes His Father's Name, Albert, to Stand Alone.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—King Edward VII. came to London yesterday, and, at a meeting of the Privy Council, took his accession oath, received the oaths of allegiance of the Privy Councilors, and addressed them.

The official form of the King's speech appears in an extraordinary number of The Gazette issued to-day. It is as follows:

"Your Royal Highnesses, My Lords and Gentlemen:

"This is the most painful occasion on which I shall ever be called upon to address you.

"My first and melancholy duty is to announce to you the death of my beloved mother, the Queen; and I know how deeply you and the whole nation, and, I think I may say, the whole world, sympathize with me in the irreparable loss we have all sustained.

"I need hardly say that my constant endeavor will be always to walk in her footsteps.

"In undertaking the heavy load which now devolves upon me, I am fully determined to be a constitutional sovereign in the strictest sense of the word, and, so long as there is breath in my body, to work for the good and amelioration of my people.

"I have resolved to be known by the name of Edward, which has been borne by six of my ancestors.

"In doing so I do not undervalue the name of Albert, which I inherit from my ever-to-be-lamented, great, and wise father, who by universal consent is, I think, deservedly known by the name of Albert the Good, and I desire that his name should stand alone.

"In conclusion, I trust to Parliament and the nation to support me in the arduous duties which now devolve upon me by inheritance, and to which I am determined to devote my whole strength during the remainder of my life."

The Gazette of this morning appears with black borders. It announces the death of Queen Victoria, adding:

"The event has caused one universal feeling of regret and sorrow to her late Majesty's faithful subjects, to whom she was endeared by the deep interest in their welfare which she invariably manifested, as well as by the many signal virtues which marked and adorned her character."

Then follows the proclamation of Edward VII., the acknowledgment of allegiance by the Privy Council and the King's speech at his accession.

After giving a list of those who attended the Council, The Gazette announces that the King subscribed the oath relating to the security of the Church of Scotland.

It concludes with the King's formal proclamation, ordering all officers and persons in authority throughout his dominions to continue to exercise their offices during the royal pleasure and exhorting his subjects to aid and assist such officers in the performance and execution of their duties.

BIG CROWDS GREET THE KING.

Loudly Cheered After the Council Meeting—Details of the Ceremony.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The King entered his capital at 12:55 P. M. yesterday, and proceeded to Marlborough House. Dense crowds, beginning at St. James's Street, had lined the entire route to Victoria Station from an early hour. The Mall and the front of Buckingham Palace were especially thronged. All along the former, from the palace to Marlborough House, carriages filled with women stood as if for a Drawing Room, excepting that the coachmen, footmen, and occupants were all dressed in mourning.

The police precautions were unusual. Men on foot and mounted guarded almost every yard of the way.

All present waited patiently for hours to greet the King. Finally, preceded by half a dozen mounted policemen, in a plain brougham, which was driven very rapidly, with the coachman and footman in their usual gray liveries, but with mourning bands on their arms, and with an equery seated beside him, the King came into view. He was dressed in the deepest and most simple mourning, and carefully raised his hat in acknowledgment of the silent unbearing of heads, which was more impressive than the most enthusiastic cheers.

The King looked tired and very sad, but very well. Following him came the Duke of York, the Duke of Connaught, and others. Both the King and the Duke of York looked pathetically up at Buckingham Palace, as they passed it, and acknowledged the salute of the guard of honor drawn up inside the palace grounds. The troops there and elsewhere showed no signs of mourning, except that the bands were not present and that all the officers had crape on their left sleeves.

Later the King drove to St. James's Palace from Marlborough House, to preside at his first Privy Council. He was attended by Lord Suffield, (who has been Lord of the Bedchamber to the Prince of Wales since 1872,) and was escorted by a Captain's escort of the Horse Guards. The procedure was exactly as on levee days.

By the time the King arrived a great gathering of Privy Councilors, in levee dress, with crape on their left arms, had taken up positions in the Throne Room. The Duke of York, the Duke of Connaught, and other members of the royal family, Lord Salisbury, Lord Rosebery, the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, the Duke of Devonshire, Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, the Lord Mayor of London, and a host of the most prominent personages in the land were there to receive the King's formal oath, binding him to govern the kingdom according to its laws and customs, and to hear him assume the title of Edward VII., King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and Emperor of India. Mingling with the notabilities were a few men in plain clothes to represent the fact that the general public has a nominal right to be present.

The ceremony was according to precedent. The King was in a separate apartment from the Privy Councilors. To the latter the Duke of Devonshire (Lord President of the Council) formally announced the death of Queen Victoria and the succession to the throne of her son, the Prince of Wales. The royal Dukes, with certain Lords of the Council, were then directed to repair to the King's presence to acquaint him with the terms of the Lord President's statement.

Shortly afterward his Majesty entered the room in which the Councilors were assembled and addressed them. He wore a Field Marshal's uniform and the ribbon of the Order of the Garter. When he began his speech, which was extemporaneous, his voice was painfully broken with emotion, but he recovered as he went on and spoke with great earnestness.

The Lord Chancellor (Lord Halsbury) then administered the oath to the King.

Afterward, beginning with the Lords in Council, the Privy Councilors took their respective oaths of allegiance, and they then passed in turn before his Majesty, as at a levee, except that each paused and kissed hands before passing out of the chamber.

The proclamation of the accession of his Majesty was signed by the Princes present, the Duke of York first, then the Duke of Connaught, the Duke of Cambridge, Prince Christian, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Mayor, and the other representatives of the City of London. This brought the ceremony to a close.

At 1:30 P. M. the artillery began firing salutes in St. James's Park to signalize King Edward's accession to the throne.

When his Majesty returned to Marlborough House the crowd in the neighborhood was of immense proportions. The King's prior journey had been accomplished in almost complete silence, but on this occasion he was lustily cheered all along the line of route.

Immediately opposite Marlborough House gates a tall man, in front of the crowd, waved his hat and shouted, "Long live the King!" whereupon the crowd cheered with redoubled vigor.

The King remained in London overnight. He was driven to Buckingham Palace last evening, and dined there with the Duchess of Albany. Subsequently he was a "distinct coldness" until four years ago, says:

"Repeated meetings and conversations, however, cleared up matters, and their relations are now cordial. King Edward's predilection for France has cooled off in consequence of the Fashoda affair, and it is probable therefore that the new monarch will not throw his influence with France against Germany."

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 23.—A majority of the press comment on the death of Queen Victoria is sympathetic, but the Herold takes the occasion to say:

"The Prince of Wales has passed as a friend of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain—will the same be true of the King? Will the glowing persuasiveness of a Chamberlain, which, up to now, has hypnotized the English masses, also prevail in the palace, or will the new King see that Chamberlain's way is the way of destruction? It would be good for England if Chamberlain's time were ended."

VIENNA, Jan. 23.—The papers all declare that Austria-Hungary sincerely shares Great Britain's sorrow. The Zeitung says:

"Emperor Francis Joseph has lost a faithful friend. At her bier mourns a people who have always been friendly to Austria-Hungary."

The Neue Freie Presse devotes a special article to the new sovereign, declaring that foreign countries have the fullest confidence in him.

The other papers are equally laudatory of Edward VII. The Tageblatt hopes that the world will be the richer for a Prince of Peace.

BRITISH PRESS PLEASED.

Comments on the President's Message to Edward VII.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The morning papers record with the greatest satisfaction that the King has taken the title of Edward VII. They are filled from end to end with descriptions of yesterday's ceremonies and accounts of the reception of the news of the death and the accession throughout the United Kingdom and in all parts of the world. King Edward's first speech is also applauded. The Daily Telegraph says:

"It was admirable, resolute, touching, and breathing deep sincerity. It does equal honor to the monarch and the man, and will carry a fresh sense of hope and confidence to the country in its trouble."

Among the innumerable telegrams of sympathy that continue pouring in from abroad, President McKinley's gives the greatest pleasure. The Daily Chronicle remarks:

"It is believed that President McKinley's dispatch was the first to reach the Prince of Wales under his new title, and, just as Frederick the Great was the first European sovereign to recognize the independence of the United States, so now the President of the great Republic has been the first to acknowledge the Kingship of the great-grandson of the monarch against whose authority the American colonists successfully rebelled.

"This is very touching when one remembers the visit of the Prince of Wales to Washington's tomb. Probably it was some remembrance of that incident which made President McKinley hasten to be the first to salute the Prince of Wales as King; and the compliment, we are told, was most keenly appreciated."

The Standard says: "It is not for mere show that the Americans have received the news of the death of Queen Victoria as a bereavement of their own and commented upon it in terms such as they would employ in the case of an honored President dying in office."

PRAYERS IN CONGRESS.

Chaplains in Both Houses Pay Tributes to the Dead Queen.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Chaplain Milburn of the Senate, in his opening invocation, referring to the death of Queen Victoria, said: "For as much as it hath pleased Thee to remove out of the earth the soul of the most illustrious ruler of the earth, after a reign of unexampled length, strength and dignity, power and glory, we come to Thee to pray that Thy grace and heavenly benediction shall rest upon her son who is to succeed her in the eminent position which she had long filled. Grant, we beseech Thee, that his sweet, dignified, and gracious qualities of character, his long experience in the position which he has filled with such eminence, may prepare him to enter upon the higher dignity with all its solemn responsibilities. Grant to him and his admirable wife Thy defense and protection, Thy guidance and support.

"And may the nation which he is called upon to rule rejoice in the benignant and admirable quality of his reign. Prosper the nation, uphold the people in their great sorrow, sustain and cheer them with the sense that their beloved Queen has entered into the rest which remains to the people of God, through Jesus Christ, our Saviour."

The Chaplain of the House, in his prayer, said: "To-day we are called upon as a Nation by ties of kinship and brotherly love to sympathize, yea mourn, with a sister nation bereft of its sovereign, its well-beloved Queen, who in a long and in many respects phenomenal reign has endeared herself, not only to her own, but to the people of the civilized world for the justice, equity, and purity of both her public and private life. A Queen on her throne, a Queen in her home, a Queen in the hearts of her people, she will live. May the consolations of the Christian religion support and comfort a stricken people, and especially the immediate members of her family. Long live the new King. May the example of his illustrious mother guide him as a Christian man and a sovereign power. Amen."

LONDON, Jan. 24.—Many references are made in the press to the American expressions of sympathy. The St. James's Gazette says:

"The honor paid to the memory of the Queen by the President of the United States is one which should live in the memories of all of us when questions for discussion arise between the two great English-speaking countries. There are hidden blessings, perhaps, even in so great a sorrow as ours of to-day."

VICTORIA'S BOND HOLDINGS.

It Is Not Known that She Owned Any United States Securities.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—From time to time, but particularly some years ago, when the United States was paying high rates of interest on bonds, it was reported that Queen Victoria had invested large amounts of money in our securities. Inquiry at the Treasury did not verify the report at the time, for the reasons given to inquirers to-day. It was admitted by Assistant Secretary Vanderlip, after he had asked for definite information from the proper officer, that it was not known that Queen Victoria was a holder of United States bonds at the time of her death, or that she had ever held them. If she had, and there was any desire manifested by her or her representatives to keep that fact secret, the desire would be respected, as the Government was not expected to divulge to all inquirers the business that private citizens might desire to conceal.

ANGRY DEBATE IN DUBLIN.

Resolution of Condolence Finally Passed by the Corporation.

DUBLIN, Jan. 23.—At a meeting of the Corporation of Dublin to-day Lord Mayor Pile moved the following resolution:

"We beg respectfully to tender to the members of the royal family our sincere sympathy with them and our feelings of deep regret at the great affliction that has befallen them in the death of her Majesty, Queen Victoria."

The following amendment was proposed by Timothy Harrington, M. P., who is the Lord Mayor-elect:

"Without in any way detracting from the high personal qualities of the deceased, and carefully guarding against any expression of feelings which might seem ungracious or unworthy of the traditions of our nation, this Council must decline in the present political condition of Ireland to take part in any demonstration of loyalty to the English throne."

The introduction of the amendment led to an angry debate. The resolution of condolence was finally passed by a vote of 30 to 22.

Empress Frederick's Condition.

BERLIN, Jan 23.—The Dowager Empress Frederick passed a quiet night, and has had an uneventful day. The Empress has arrived at Homburg and proceeded to the royal castle, in order to be near the Dowager Empress.

Gayety in the Philippines Suspended.

MANILA, Jan. 23.—On account of the death of Queen Victoria, Gen. MacArthur has indefinitely postponed the Governor General's ball, announced for to-morrow, and Rear Admiral Remey has postponed the reception scheduled to take place on the flagship Brooklyn Thursday afternoon.

NEW YORK'S TRIBUTE TO THE DEAD QUEEN

Almost Every Flag in the City Flies at Half Mast.

Messages of Condolence Sent to London by Various Exchanges—Union Memorial Services Planned.

New York mourns the death of the Queen of England. In the busy financial districts, along the river front, out in the harbor aboard merchant craft and ocean liners of almost every nationality under the sun, in the slums and byways, in Fifth Avenue and through the upper west side—everywhere this fact is apparent, for thousands of flags float at half-mast in every section, telling of the sorrow of the New World's metropolis over the loss of the Old World's most beloved ruler.

No sooner had the news of Queen Victoria's death flashed across the seas than manifestations of the high respect in which she was held in this country and city began to show themselves. While the National authorities honored her memory in the National capital, the cosmopolitan population of New York was no less active in showing its sense of bereavement. From all sides were heard eulogies of the dead sovereign. The representatives of foreign lands in the city lowered the pennants of their countries.

The Norwegian bark, anchored far out in the harbor and battered by countless storms, let her torn and faded flag fall to half-mast, and the rugged tramp ship from the southern coasts of South America lowered hers at the same time. The gigantic ocean liner, starting on her long voyage to the other side of the Atlantic, sailed out of the Narrows with her scores of signal banners hung low. Up toward the city skyline showed that the sorrow of the city was as widespread as the city itself. Over the buildings of the foreign Consulates the emblems of the different nations floated conspicuously. The French tricolor, the German flag, with its big black eagle; the brightly tinted banner of Italy, the vivid green one of Brazil, and nearly all the rest of them were there. Everywhere that an English corporation had its offices, and in many places where there was none such, floated the union jack.

To the pedestrian along the down-town streets it seemed as though the ruler of this country might have passed away; instead of a monarch three thousand and more miles across the sea. From windows, from the high doorways of skyscrapers, from the lower projections of the roofs hung the sorrowful streamers at half-mast. Most of them were American flags. From the City Hall to the Battery there was but one flag that had not been lowered, and that one was on the City Hall itself. In Wall Street the sidewalks were fairly canopied over with the pennants of all kinds. There was hardly a building from Trinity Church to the East River but what was decorated more or less, and some of them showed as many as forty or fifty flags, placed close together.

After waiting several hours for orders from Washington to place the Post Office flag at half-mast, Postmaster Cornelius Van Cott finally took the responsibility on himself. Down at the Custom House this ceremony had already been accomplished, and over the Barge Office the United States flag and that of the customs service were lowered side by side.

In the offices of the British Consulate the Vice Consul, C. Clive-Bailey, was busy receiving calls from other Consular representatives during the forenoon. Many private citizens also called to express their sympathy. In the afternoon the Vice Consul said that neither the Consul General of Japan, nor China, nor the Orange Free State had been among the callers. The Japanese Consul General, S. Uchida, whose office is in the Bennett Building, said that he had not yet received from his Government an official notification of the Queen's death, and that he would lower his flag and pay his call as soon as he did receive such notice. The Consul General of the Orange Free State also said that he had received no formal notice.

The New York Stock Exchange took action in regard to the death of the Queen at its meeting yesterday. President Keppler called the meeting to order and said:

"The solemn event by which our great sister nation has suffered the loss of not only her most illustrious sovereign, but of a Queen who was universally beloved and who was the embodiment of the highest type of womanhood, calls for appropriate action on the part of the members of this Exchange."

James D. Smith then offered this resolution: "That the President of the Exchange be requested to send the following cablegram to the London Stock Exchange":

John K. J. Hichens, Esq., Chairman, London Stock Exchange, London, England:

The members of the New York Stock Exchange lament the death of the Queen and tender their profound sympathy.

RUDOLPH KEPPLER, President.

In pursuance of a second resolution to the effect that the Governing Committee should take further action, that committee met later in the day and adopted the following:

Resolved, That as a tribute to the memory of her Majesty the late Queen Victoria, the New York Stock Exchange remain closed from 10 A. M. to 11 A. M. on the day of the funeral.

Chamber of Commerce, London, England:

The Board of Managers of the Produce Exchange met at noon and drafted resolutions of condolence, copies of which were cabled to the Corn Exchanges of London and Liverpool. Morris K. Jesup, President of the Chamber of Commerce, sent the following message to the London Chamber of Commerce.

The Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York tenders its deep sympathy in the loss of your illustrious and beloved Queen, the true friend of America. MORRIS K. JESUP, President.

Joseph Lawrence, Sheriff of London, cabled to a friend in this city expressing, on behalf of the Lord Mayor of London, deep appreciation of the sympathy and sorrow felt in New York over the death of the Queen. He said in his cable:

I have shown message to the Lord Mayor, who desires me to say how touched we all are by so spontaneous a mark of sympathy from your fellow-citizens in New York. Old Trinity's bells never tolled for a nobler Christian than our lamented and beloved Queen.

In response to the message sent by the local Cotton Exchange to the corresponding organization of London, this reply was received yesterday:

Samuel T. Hubbard, President New York Cotton Exchange:

The members of the Liverpool Cotton Association gratefully return thanks for the expression of sympathy received from the New York Cotton Exchange in this hour of the nation's great sorrow.

Plans for a union service in memory of the Queen will be discussed at a meeting of British subjects. The meeting, which was called by the British Consul General, Sir Percy Sanderson, is to be held this afternoon at the rooms of the Down-Town Association, and it is probable that Trinity Church will be chosen for the service.

ACTION BY THE LEGISLATURE.

Resolutions of Regret for the Queen's Death in Both Houses.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—In the Assembly this morning Mr. Lewis of Monroe offered a resolution of regret upon the death of Queen Victoria, which was adopted by a rising vote, after which an adjournment was taken out of respect to her memory.

The resolution was worded as follows:

The death of Victoria, Queen of Great Britain and Ireland and Empress of India, has terminated a long, faithful, and highly prosperous reign. In her domestic life Queen Victoria won the love of all her subjects and the respect of the people of all civilized nations. In her official position her influence has universally been used to promote the best interests of those over whom she has so long reigned.

The United States of America has always enjoyed the friendship and good-will of her Majesty, and in times of national affliction her sympathy has been promptly extended.

Be it further resolved that this Assembly do now adjourn out of respect to her memory.

The Senate adopted the following, offered by Senator White:

Resolved, That the Senate of the State of New York expresses its profound sorrow at the death of her Majesty, Queen Victoria, and extends its sincere sympathy to her people in their bereavement.

ILLINOIS LEGISLATURE ACTS.

Passes Resolutions Which Were Opposed by the Democrats.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 23.—Democratic members of the House to-day bitterly opposed the adoption of a resolution of respect to the memory of Queen Victoria. They used every possible method to break a quorum and defeat the resolution, but were unsuccessful. It was passed by a unanimous vote finally, nearly all Democratic members refusing to vote. The resolution was presented just before the House adjourned by Representative Allen of Hoopeston, and was as follows:

Whereas, In the providence of Almighty God, our Creator and all-wise Father, there has passed from life through that portal we call death into that mysterious undiscovered country we speak of as eternity, her Majesty, Queen Victoria of Great Britain, and

Whereas, The news of the decease of this distinguished sovereign, this virtuous lady, and this model mother has called forth from all classes of our fellow-citizens expressions of great sadness and deep regret; and

Whereas, In recognition of her long, memorable, and useful reign, and as a mark of respect to her life and memory, be it

Resolved, That this House do now adjourn.

Representative Cummings of Chicago, Democrat, moved to table the resolution and demanded a roll call. Speaker Sherman ordered one, although the Democratic leaders tried to withraw the request. It showed 1 (Campbell) for tabling, 58 against. A rising vote was then taken on the resolution. All Republicans present save one or two voted for it, and a few Democrats voted with them. When nay votes were called the Democrats opposing the resolution refused to vote, and Speaker Sherman declared it passed unanimously.

ST. GEORGE'S SOCIETY MEETS.

Message of Condolence Sent to Edward VII.—Officers Elected.

St. George's Society held its annual meeting at Delmonico's last evening, and, in addition to the election of officers, took action upon the death of Queen Victoria. There was a large attendance, among others present being Sir Percy Sanderson, the British Consul General; George Gray Ward, President of the society; the Rev. D. Parker Morgan, the Rev. E. Walpole Warren, E. K. Beddall, Thomas Jevons, Cecil Baring, and the Hon. Berkeley Mostyn. All the officers wore crape on their badges. President Ward, in opening the meeting, said:

"All Englishmen mourn the death of their great, good, and beloved Queen. May she rest in peace. Salutations to the King."

The Rev. D. Parker Morgan then offered a resolution that a committee be appointed to send condolences. The resolution was carried.

At the close of the meeting it was announced that it had been decided to send the following cable to King Edward VII.:

His Majesty, King Edward VII., Osborne, Isle of Wight:

We, the members of the St. George's Society of New York, have received with profound grief the news of the death of her Majesty, Queen Victoria. We desire to express to your Majesty the deep sorrow we feel that in the course of nature the time when this beautiful life, so gracious and perfect in its goodness, had to be reached. The great and beloved Queen is dead, but as in life she steadily grew in grace and favor, so will she continue in the hearts and minds of her people a hope and inspiration to the end of time. We salute your Majesty.

GEORGE GRAY WARD, President.

It was also stated that negotiations were in progress with the Rev. Morgan Dix looking to a memorial service in Trinity Church. The details of this service will be taken up at a meeting of English residents to be held this afternoon at the Downtown Club.

Sir Percy Sanderson, after the meeting, stated that yesterday he notified all the foreign Consuls of the death of the Queen, and sent a special messenger with the news to Mayor Van Wyck, who, Sir Percy said, sent him a courteous reply. The Consul General declined to discuss the action of the Mayor in refusing to lower the flag on the City Hall. During the meeting, however, it was harshly criticised by the members.

The following officers were elected at the meeting: Sir Percy Sanderson, President; R. H. Turle and E. K. Beddall, Vice Presidents; John Gault, Treasurer; L. B. Sanderson and George K. Kirkham, Secretaries.

Sir Percy Sanderson informed those present of the action taken by the Consulate upon the death of the Queen. The following cable had been sent through the Consulate to the Foreign Office:

The British community at New York, with myself, desire to express profound sorrow and feelings of most respectful and deep sympathy with the King and royal family on the melancholy occasion of the death of the Queen.

At the collation that was served after the meeting Sir Percy Sanderson proposed a silent toast for the dead Queen and immediately after a toast to the King.

ST. DAVID'S SOCIETY.

Resolutions on the Death of Queen Victoria Adopted.

St. David's Society of New York State, at a special meeting held last evening in the United Charities Building adopted a resolution on the death of the Queen. The resolution was moved by William Miles, who helped to organize the society in 1834, three years before the accession of Queen Victoria, and who has attended every dinner of the society since then. It was as follows:

St. David's Society extends its profound sympathy to the English people in the loss of their well-beloved Sovereign, Queen Victoria. To her and her predecessors our ancestors owed allegiance. The language now spoken in parts of Wales was that our forefathers learned as children and brought with them to this country. We realize that the precious heritage of American citizenship would not be ours but for the constitutions of men, principles, laws, and traditions from the motherland. We turn to our cousins across the sea in their hour of bereavement and sorrow, and claim the right to grieve with them as members of one family.

So glorious was the reign of their departed Queen, so high her conception and execution of her exalted duties, so womanly her love and sympathy for her people, so lofty the standards she maintained throughout her prolonged and unsullied life, that those who cannot mourn for her as their Queen must sorrow for her as the woman. Under the sway of no ruler of Great Britain's mighty empire have its boundaries been more extended or its power more consolidated.

None of its Sovereigns have evoked more personal devotion or greater loyalty. Love of her country, love of her people, love of her family, were the controlling forces of her life. As she gave so she received in return, deep affection, profound respect, filial obedience from her subjects and her descendants. Not only all English speaking people, but the myriads of the dark-skinned races owning her as Empress, realize that the world has lost its most exalted personage, and are united in a common sorrow.

A copy of the resolution will be sent to the British Ambassador at Washington, and a cable message will be sent to the United States Ambassador in London, asking him to express the condolences of St. David's Society.

The President was authorized to co-operate with the St. George's and St. Andrew's Societies in arranging for a memorial service, if those societies decided to hold such a service. Julien T. Davies, the President of the society, presided.

SUGGESTS A CHURCH PARADE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In commemoration of the death of our beloved Queen I would suggest that a church parade of all British subjects in this district be held next Sunday afternoon. Perhaps Bishop Potter could grant the use of either Trinity or Grace Church for a special memorial service. They could all assemble at some given point and march to church in seven bodies—the naval reserve from the various vessels in port, then past members of the navy, army, and volunteer service, English, Scottish, Welsh, Irish, and Colonials.

I propose this plan as better than the ordinary memorial service, as it affords each man a last opportunity to show his individual devotion to the memory of our noble Queen by falling into the ranks and marching shoulder to shoulder with his fellow-countrymen to do his last respects.

Cannot the British societies take some action? It only wants a start—promptness and energy—to be a notable addition to the National requiem. A SCOT.

SWEET MUST GO TO PRISON.

He Shot and Killed a Man Who Spat Upon His Clothing.

John Sweet, sixty-two years old, of 221 West Houston Street, was yesterday convicted of manslaughter in the first degree by a jury in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, Justice Fursman presiding. Sweet shot Robert Elkins, a clerk, living in West Hoboken, N. J., on Nov. 3, in Wooster Street, near Fourth Street.

Sweet said that he was passing the place and that Elkins spat on his clothing. He remonstrated with Elkins, and was then chased by the latter and a number of his friends. Sweet said he shot in self-defense.

Magistrate Deuel Was Ill.

Magistrate Deuel was to have made an address on "The City Magistrate" last night to the members of the Central Republican Club, One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street and Lenox Avenue. At the last minute the club received a telegram from the Magistrate, stating that he was too ill to keep his engagement. The programme was altered accordingly, and routine business alone was disposed of at the meeting which was held.

FLAGS NOT HALF-MASTED ON CITY BUILDINGS

Mayor Van Wyck Refuses to Honor the Dead Queen, Officially.

Says It Would Be a Violation of Precedent—National Colors Fly as Usual at Grant's Tomb.

The flag on the Grant Tomb at Claremont Heights was at full mast yesterday. The Park Department officials followed the order of Mayor Van Wyck in refusing to order the flags lowered to half-mast on the City Hall as a tribute to the memory of Queen Victoria. Mayor Van Wyck's action caused so much comment yesterday that his Honor called the reporters into his office and dictated a statement explaining his reasons. His interview was filled with pro-Boer sentiments.

Nearly all the flags in the city were at half-mast yesterday, except those on the City Hall, Grant's Tomb, and several other city buildings on which flags are displayed. The Dock Department ignored Mayor Van Wyck's precedent and half-masted their flags.

The following is a stenographic report of the statement made by Mayor Van Wyck yesterday:

"The flag was not ordered to be half-masted over the City Hall yesterday in following out a precedent established by this and a former administration—and, I think, administrations. The flag was not half-masted when President Carnot of the French Republic and the Empress of Austria were assassinated or when the Czar of Russia died, nor when King Humbert was murdered, as I understand it. It is corroborated by a statement in the papers this morning that the President had not ordered the flag at half-mast on the White House when either one of these monarchs died. I followed the precedent established here. You must bear in mind that people come in here all the time about this. When Gen. Joubert, the commander of the Boer Army, died, almost every personal friend I had in New York came here and wanted me to fly the flag at half-mast on the City Hall. Gen. Joubert was a friend of mine. If I had followed the dictates of my heart I would have done it because England was murdering these people and had robbed them of their land, and my personal feeling was to do it, but I could not. There is no precedent established here not to fly the flag on the City Hall at half-mast when foreign monarchs die, and I simply followed the rule in this case, and I think it is a very good rule."

Later Mayor Van Wyck was informed that the flags on the White House and the Government Buildings in Washington had been lowered to half-mast. From Mayor Van Wyck's office the flag on the Post Office Building at half-mast was plainly visible yesterday. After being informed of the action of President McKinley, Mayor Van Wyck said:

"I am informed that the flags on the White House and Government Buildings were never before placed at half-mast on the death of a foreign ruler. I see that such action has been taken on the death of the Queen. I suppose the present Government is establishing another precedent. I shall follow the established precedents in this city."

"Then you will not give an order to place the flag at half-mast on the City Hall?" was asked.

"No, Sir; I will not," replied Mayor Van Wyck, with emphasis.

The Board of Aldermen was in session on Tuesday afternoon when the news of Queen Victoria's death reached the City Hall. Martin Keyes, who has charge of the City Hall flags, was ready to lower the colors. He started to lower the flags on his own responsibility, but because the flags were not half-masted on the Post Office he decided to wait. After a demand was made on Mayor Van Wyck by a citizen, and his first refusal to lower the flags was given, Janitor Keyes received orders not to lower the flags.

Janitor Keyes claims that the Board of Aldermen has control over the City Hall flags, and a resolution was prepared and offered to six Tammany Aldermen for presentation. The resolutions expressed the sorrow of the Municipal Assembly at learning the news of the death of the Queen and expressed a wish that the down-trodden of Ireland and South Africa would be given better treatment under King Edward VII. The resolution also called for the half-masting of the flags on municipal buildings for a short period.

This resolution was shown to Aldermen Ledwith, Cronin, and several other Tammany members. They refused to offer the resolution after reading the text.

Janitor Keese said yesterday:

"My recollection is that the flags on the City Hall were not placed at half-mast when President Carnot or King Humbert was killed. As long as I can recollect the flags have never been lowered on account of the death of any foreign potentate."

"Did you receive orders not to lower the flags when the news of Queen Victoria's death reached the City Hall?" he was asked.

"I was waiting near the Mayor's office for orders this morning. All I will say is that the flags were not placed at half-mast. There was trouble years ago over the flag matter. All kinds of people were busy making flags and wanting them displayed on the City Hall on occasions. The thing became a nuisance. Then came the trouble over putting the Irish flag on the City Hall on St. Patrick's Day about ten years ago, and a law was passed declaring that no foreign flags should be displayed from the flagpoles of public buildings in this State. Since then no foreign flags have been hauled up. There is an exception when some foreign Ambassador or other high official is on a visit to this country."

Willis Holly, Secretary of the Park Department, when asked as to whether the flag on Grant's Tomb would be half-masted as a tribute to Queen Victoria, said that his department would follow the precedent set by Mayor Van Wyck. He said that in all such demonstrations of sympathy the Park Department followed the rule set at the headquarters of the municipality and obeyed the order of the Mayor or compiled with any resolution of the Municipal Assembly.

The one city department which did not follow Mayor Van Wyck's precedent was the Department of Docks and Ferries. The flag on Pier No. 1, North River, in which are located the offices of the Dock Department, was at half-mast all day yesterday. It was stated that the Dock Commissioners had ordered the colors in mourning as a tribute to Queen Victoria. The President of the Dock Board is J. Sergeant Cram, and one of the Commissioners is Peter F. Meyer, real estate partner of Richard Croker.

ASHAMED OF THE MAYOR.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As an American who has always been proud of his birthright and citizenship, I, like many others, am heartily ashamed of the pettiness of Richard Croker's Mayor of New York City in refusing to half-mast the flag as a tribute to the memory of England's Queen. It is perhaps the only note of discord in a world-wide paean of praise and sorrow for the aged mother and ruler.

Victoria was not a Catholic, yet the venerable Roman Pontiff knelt and prayed for her. The Irish people remember many grievances against the British Government, but they cherish none against the Queen who recently visited them. We Americans assuredly have profound reason to think kindly of the good woman who proved to be our steadfast friend when even her own Ministry was hostile toward us during the civil war.

Why did Van Wyck commit this diplomatic blunder, which is worse than a crime? His friends say that he is catering to a pro-Irish and pro-Boer sentiment, as he hopes for "vindication" when his term as Mayor expires. If this be the correct explanation, I venture to say that Mr. Van Wyck is skating on thinner ice than was ever harvested by the Ice Trust. No decent element in the community will sustain his action.

It was my good fortune, many years ago in London, to entertain Mayor Grace of New York, after the expiration of his term, at a banquet which was attended by the then Lord Mayor of London and three ex-Lord Mayors of London. They saluted Old Glory quite as heartily as the Union Jack. It was my privilege also to entertain Lord Mayor Robert Nicholas Fowler, who was London's oldest banker and was London's senior representative and champion in the Imperial Parliament. In consequence of these courtesies, our flag was borne in the Lord Mayor's parade, and Dan Godfrey of the Grenadier Guards Band played our National airs.

In recalling the Lord Mayors of London—and the former Mayors of New York, also—the inclination to be ashamed of Manhattan just now is almost irresistible.

HENRY F. GILLIG.

New York, Jan. 23, 1901.

SAYS IT IS CHARACTERISTIC.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

That the people of New York should be mortified at the attitude of Mayor Van Wyck in refusing to half-mast the City Hall flag on the death of Queen Victoria is natural. But the action of Van Wyck is only characteristic of the man, as exemplified in his treatment of the Spanish Captain just before the war with Spain. On that occasion, it will be remembered, Mr. Van Wyck turned his back on the officer who called to pay his respects to the Mayor of New York.

For the second time during his term this man has had an opportunity of bringing the flush of shame to the cheeks of the citizens of this city and laying New York under the imputation of lacking a knowledge of the common rudiments of civilized usages, and he has utilized the opportunity to its fullest extent. In this latter case, however, where has been involved the paying of a tribute of respect to a noble woman and of sympathy with a friendly nation in its hour of sorrow, the citizens of New York have been able to repudiate with unmistakable emphasis the action of their official representative, as is witnessed by the thousands of flags at half-mast over the length and breadth of the city.

And yet, this thing—God made it; let it pass for a man!—has been put in the Mayor's chair by the people of New York! In this supreme hour, when the eyes of countless millions are turned in sorrow toward the bier of the mighty dead, comes this atom to say, "I will not let the people honor her!"

With the name of Victoria on every lip, the great, good Queen-Mother, known and beloved throughout the world, Oh! for the microscope powerful enough to find the little mite, Van Wyck! H. PHILLIPS.

New York, Jan. 23, 1901.

A New Yorker's Protest.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While nearly every flag in New York is at half-mast and many buildings draped out of respect for a good woman and a good Queen, it remains for the Aldermen of this city to alone show their hatred and lack of decency by keeping the flag that floats over the City Hall at the top of the staff. The question will arise in the minds of all citizens, Are we Americans, and is this great Empire City American, or is it Irish?

Have we got to put up with the class hatred of a certain nation, and be made to subscribe to their ideas and feelings, or will we be able to maintain our dignity, our sense of right, courtesy, and decent feeling, and be assured we may do so without their permission or sanction? God speed the day when we may know and feel we govern as Americans—for Americans. As a New Yorker bred and born, I blush for this insult to a noble woman. H. J. B.

Southern Chivalry Then and Now.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

When Stonewall Jackson died after Chancellorsville, the Federal bands went to the banks of the Rappahannock and played dirges and "Dixie." Mayor Van Wyck, who is akin to the Boers, if not a boor himself, is conspicuous among the people of the United States in refusing to lower the City Hall flags in honor of the good woman who was always a friend to this country, sometimes when we needed friends, and to whose son, forty years ago, New York did all possible honor. A "chivalrous" Southerner administers the first snub to King Edward VII.! POTOMAC.

Wants to Know the Reason.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On going up Broadway this morning I noticed that the City Hall flag was the only one not at half-mast, out of due respect on account of the death of the Queen. Was it on account of ignorance or spite on the part of the person, who, unfortunately, is Mayor of this city?

FOR SELLING OLEOMARGARINE.

A Penalty of $100 Inflicted on a First Avenue Dealer.

Justice Jerome, in Special Sessions, yesterday fined William McGowan of 1,405 First Avenue $100 for selling oleomargarine, and took occasion to advise the representative of the Agricultural Department in court to stop arraigning small dealers and boarding house keepers for selling "oleo" and go after the wholesalers and manufacturers.

McGowan testified that he was only a clerk and not the proprietor of the store where he was arrested. The oleomargarine was bought from a wagon, he said, which called around once and sometimes twice a week, and came from New Jersey.

"It appears to the Court," said Justice Jerome, "that these men who make this stuff should be arrested. It would be easy to station men at the ferries and watch the wagons or follow them to Jersey. I don't see why the manufacturers are not apprehended."

THE WEATHER.

LOCAL FORECAST.—Rain or snow, brisk northeast to southeast winds.

Occasional rains or snows are indicated for the New England and Middle Atlantic States and lake regions, occasional rains in the East Gulf States, clearing weather in the eastern portion of the West Gulf States, fair weather in the western portion of the West Gulf States, and clearing weather in the Ohio Valley, with lower temperatures in the northern portion of the Gulf States, the Ohio Valley, the lake regions, Mississippi Valley, Central and Lower Missouri Valley, and the Middle and Southern Slope regions. POLICE BILL IS REPORTED

Two Amendments, Favored by the Governor, Are Made.

The Mayor Is Prohibited from Reappointing a Commissioner Removed by the Governor.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—The Senate Committee on Cities to-day favorably reported the single-headed police bill for New York City. The bill as reported contains the two amendments which are said to have been suggested by the Governor. One of them provides that the Mayor shall not reappoint as Police Commissioner the man whom the Governor has removed. The other provides for the immediate filling of the vacancy caused by removal. Senators Grady, McCarren, and Ahearn voted against reporting the bill favorably. They wanted an amendment which would necessitate the filing of charges against the Commissioner, which he should have full opportunity of answering before he could be removed.

Senator Grady said he thought a hearing should be accorded on the bill before it was sent to the Senate. Chairman Stranahan said no request for a hearing on the bill had been made. This was a surprise to the Democratic Senators. It has been reported here for days that the vice Committee of Fifteen wanted to be heard on the bill, and would send a delegation to Albany to protest against the clause giving the Governor the power of removal. In view of all that has been printed about their objections to a divided responsibility for the Police Department, and their desire to have the bill amended so as to leave the whole responsibility with the Mayor, it was considered strange that they had not made application to be heard.

While the bill has been reported to the Senate, Chairman Stranahan has announced his willingness to have the bill recommitted to the committee in case any application for a hearing upon it is desired. This can be done without the bill losing its place in the Senate order of business.

The Assembly Cities Committee reported favorably the Bureau of Elections bill for New York City, without amendment.

TO ABANDON RANDALL'S ISLAND

State Board of Charities Favors Removal of House of Refuge to the Country.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—The State Board of Charities in a special report to the Legislature recommends that the House of Refuge on Randall's Island be removed to the country, and that the girls' department of the institution be discontinued, the older girls being sent to the new reformatory at Bedford and the younger to the New York Juvenile Asylum and the New York Catholic Protectory or like institutions. Also that this institution be placed under the rules of the State Civil Service Commission. The board in its report says:

"One of the embarrassments of the institution exists in the lack of facilities for classification. The character of the buildings is such that any special classification is difficult. This is a serious defect, and one which is prominent among the reasons for the removal of the institution to the country, where a large tract of land can be secured, which will afford the facilities for the construction of buildings adapted to the actual needs of the institution.

"This institution is a private corporation, and the State civil service laws have not been held to apply to it, but as it is entirely supported by the State this board believes that it should be subject to civil service rules."

EMPLOYMENT BUREAU LICENSES.

Two References of Applicants Must Be Personally Investigated.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—Senator Martin to-day introduced a bill to regulate the conduct of employment agencies in New York cities of the first and second class, and placing them within the control of the police. Senator Martin says the measure was suggested by the abuses which have been and are now being practiced in the City of New York. The main provisions of the bill are as follows:

Every person conducting an employment bureau shall make application to the Mayor of the city for a license and shall pay a fee of $200 in cities of the first class and a fee of $100 in cities of the second class; all persons conducting such bureaus shall keep a register in which shall be entered in the English language after personal investigation at least two of the references of the applicant for employment, the name and address of the applicant, the name and address of his or her last employer, the address of the person who shall employ such applicant, and the name and address of every person who shall make application for servants. Every proprietor of an employment bureau who shall exact from an applicant for employment any fee must give a receipt for the same, and if employment for the applicant shall not have been obtained in one month from the time of the payment of the fee the fee shall be returned.

In speaking of the necessity for such regulation of employment bureaus as his bill provides, Senator Martin said: "At the present time there is a large number of these employment bureaus in New York which take fees from persons seeking employment and then make little or no effort to secure employment for them. Many of them make a practice of forging references. The result is that persons who go to these agencies to secure servants do not know what sort of characters they are taking into their houses until they learn from sad experience. There have been cases where men and women have sought employment merely for the purpose of getting into a house, so that they might rob it. Not infrequently, too, it happens that a man finds he has taken into his home a woman of the worst moral character.

"If the references given by the proprietor of the employment bureau were investigated these experiences might in many instances be avoided, but they seldom are investigated. The applicant for a servant generally does not want to go to the trouble of hunting up the references given and takes the employment bureau proprietor's word as to the good character of the servant recommended. The conditions as regards these employment bureaus certainly call for legislation."

TO PROVIDE A TAX APPEAL.

Bill to Permit State Board to Pass on City Board's Action.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—Assemblyman Hatch of Steuben County has introduced a bill which he claims is to relieve persons in New York City from Tammany oppression. He says that the Tammany Tax Commissioners arbitrarily fix tax rates and "play politics by oppressing Republicans and favoring Democrats."

He suggests an additional section to the tax law providing that any person or corporation aggrieved by the action or determination of the Board of Taxes and Assessments of the City of New York may appeal from such action to the State Board of Tax Commissioners. The State Board shall immediately proceed to hear the same and shall make its determination within twenty days after a hearing.

TEACHERS' RETIREMENT FUND.

Pension of One-half Salary Proposed—Minimum Is $600.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—Assemblyman Bell to-day introduced a bill making provision for a retirement fund for Greater New York teachers. The Board of Education of New York is given the general care and management of the fund created by the act. The Controller of New York is to handle, invest, and pay out the money. The fund is to be derived from all money withheld from teachers' salaries for any cause; all money received from donations or legacies, and all money acquired from such other methods of increment as may be duly authorized.

The Board of Education is given power to retire any female teacher who has taught for thirty years in the New York schools, and any male teacher who has taught for thirty-five years. Each teacher retired shall receive a sum equivalent to one-half the salary which was paid him or her when in active service, but such sum shall not exceed in any case $1,000 or be less than $600.

No provision of the act is to apply to any teacher in Brooklyn who is entitled to any benefit "after removal from said borough."

To Prohibit Fortune Telling.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—Senator Wagner today introduced a bill amending the Penal Code by inserting a new section which provides as follows: "Any person who practises clairvoyance, palmistry, or fortune telling by any act, device, or method whatsoever, is guilty of a misdemanor." Senator Wagner says his bill was not introduced by request, but simply to prevent the continuance of wholesale swindling. In England palmistry is considered an art, but in New York, Senator Wagner says, it is considered a swindle.

To Report Assembly Bills.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—The following bills will be reported favorably to-morrow by the Ways and Means Committee of the Assembly:

By Mr. ALLDS—Reorganizing the State Commission of Prisons as to membership. An amendment changes the term of office from three to four years.

Mr. KELSEY—Providing that veterans employed by the State, cities, and villages shall receive pay during their absence from duty on Memorial Day.

Mr. BRYAN—Appropriating $325,000 for the support and maintenance of the several State prisons.

Sale of One Corporation to Another.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—A bill introduced by Assemblyman Fish this morning permits a domestic stock corporation other than a railroad to sell its property and franchises to a foreign corporation, when the consent of 95 per cent. of its stockholders is obtained. Under the existing corporation law, the proposed amendment would have much greater effect than it will should the recently introduced tax bills become laws.

Bill to Remove Banks' Tax Exemption.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—Assemblyman Sanders of New York, introduced a taxation bill to-day to remove the exemption from taxation which savings banks and insurance companies now enjoy.

For East River Recreation Pier.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—Assemblyman Louis Meister of New York City will to-morrow introduce a bill authorizing the Board of Docks to set aside the pier at the foot of East Thirteenth Street, East River, for recreative purposes. Mr. Meister says that the establishment of such a recreation plat is absolutely necessary for the good health of the residents of that vicinity.

MISCELLANEOUS BILLS.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—These bills were introduced in the Senate to-day:

Senator SLATER—Amending New York City Charter relative to contracts for work or supplies, providing that no agreement for work or supplies in excess of the market rate at the time of contract shall be valid and binding. It also provides that a certificate be filed with the Controller from the head of the department making a contract, giving the current market rate of supplies and prevailing rate of wages.

Senator COCKS—Legalizing acts of the Board of Education of Oyster Bay in levying a tax for a school building.

Senator CULLEN—Enabling the New York Police Board to rehear charges against Philip Ryan, a first-grade patrolman, and for his reinstatement.

Senator McEWAN—Incorporating the "Albany County Charity Foundation," and prescribing its objects and powers.

Senator AMBLER—Providing penalties for the violation of the agricultural law. Also, a bill establishing the standard of measures for small fruit packages, a quart containing full 67 cubic inches; packages or baskets not of standard size must be marked "short."

Senator SLATER—For the relief of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Our Saviour, New York City, exempting it from taxes.

Senator RUSSELL—Amending the game law relative to Mongolian and English pheasants, making the close season in Suffolk County from Feb. 1 to Sept. 20.

Senator THORNTON—Making railroad employes liable to persons injured by forest fires adjacent to or remote from railroads through violation of the forest fire laws.

These bills were introduced in the Assembly to-day:

Mr. FISH—Amending the insanity law by providing that the Governor, at any time on or before June 1, 1901, may fix the salaries of the State Commissioners in Lunacy. Under the present law they may be fixed at any time.

Mr. KEENAN—Fixing the rate of fare for passengers on the Long Island Ferry plying between East Thirty-fourth Street, in Manhattan, and Borden Avenue, in the Borough of Queens, at 1 cent between the hours of 4:30 and 7 in the afternoon and 2 cents at other times.

Mr. ROGERS—Incorporating the Milanville Bridge Company, and authorizing it to construct a bridge over the Delaware River.

Mr. NYE—To authorize the Commissioners of Watkins Glen Reservation to purchase certain lands in the town of Dix for a State park or reservation.

Mr. BURNETT—Incorporating the City of Geneva.

Mr. ELLIS—Amending the railroad law by providing that no locomotive or car shall stop or stand at a railroad crossing for a longer period than five consecutive minutes.

Mr. BURNETT—Fixing the compensation of State Game Protectors at $900 per year. Also, appropriating $15,000 to provide for fishways in the several dams in the Oswego and Seneca Rivers.

Mr. KEENAN—Providing that the bridge authorized to be built by the New York Connecting Railroad Company shall have upon each outer side a pedestrian's footpath not less than five feet wide and a bicycle footpath not less than three feet.

Mr. REMSEN—Providing for the reverting of town burial grounds to the Mayors of municipalities in case of annexation.

Mr. DOUGHTY—Authorizing the Board of Supervisors or Commissioners of Highway in any county adjoining a city of the first class to establish rules or ordinances to regulate and prevent fast driving on roads.

Mr. KNIPP—Amending the general laws in relation to mining by providing that heirs or assignees of an owner of gold or silver mines in the State shall pay a royalty to the State of 1 per cent. of the market value.

Mr. BURNETT—Providing that woodcock, grouse, and quail shall not be sold or offered for sale at any time or place throughout the State.

Mr. BELL—Making the salaries of the Recorder, the City Judge, and the Judges of the Court of General Sessions in the City and County of New York the same as that received by Surrogates, the same to be paid in monthly installments.

Also, giving the Commissioner of Parks of New York the power to authorize and regulate the projections of the line of the curb and the surface construction of all streets and avenues lying within any park, square, or public place in his jurisdiction.

Mr. DOOLING—Amending the Code of Civil Procedure so that the guardian of an infant plaintiff is not liable for costs of action unless charged with misconduct.

Mr. BENNETT—Authorizing the regents to waive the examination of public accountants who have practiced in this State for more than six years. The law at present makes one year the limit.

Mr. ALLDS—Appropriating $55,000 from the canal debt sinking fund for the payment of the canal debt interest beginning Oct. 1, 1901.

Mr. APGAR—Appropriating $10,000 for the New York State Reformatory for Women at Bedford.

Mr. BRYAN—Appropriating $118,845.77 for the improvement of the Erie Canal, being the unexpended balance of $5,000,000 appropriated in 1897.

Mr. BAKER—Appropriating $10,000 for the repair of the Skeneateles feeder of the Erie Canal.

Mr. DOOLING—Providing for the same facilities for the transportation of bicycles on steamboats as are afforded on railroads.

Mr. SCHNEIDER—Exempting from the provisions of the civil service law any person who has served as a member of a legislative body in any first class city, or as a member of the Legislature for two years or more.

Mr. FOWLER—Authorizing the Board of Supervisors in a county to make the office of Sheriff a salaried office.

LEGISLATURE'S PROCEEDINGS.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—Lieut. Gov. Woodruff presided at this morning's session of the Senate.

Senator Krum of the Judiciary Committee reported favorably on the bill consolidating the three State labor departments and establishing a single-headed commission. The principal amendment was one increasing the term of office of the Commissioner of Labor from three to four years. The bill was referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Senator Feeter of the Committee on Internal Affairs reported favorably on the nomination of Thomas S. Cheshire to be County Clerk of Nassau.

Senator Higgins of the Finance Committee reported favorably on the nomination of John E. Kraft as State Civil Service Commissioner, and the nomination was confirmed.

The following bills were passed: Senator Stranahan—Authorizing the village of Fulton to repay certain moneys expended in its behalf; Senator Armstrong—An act to amend the primary election law relative to filling vacancies in nominations.

In the Assembly there was no calendar for to-day, and after listening to committee reports and the first reading of bills, an adjournment was taken at 11:20 until Thursday at 11 A. M. out of respect to the memory of Queen Victoria.

Prior to adjournment the Speaker warned the committees that they must get to work during the day and produce a calendar for to-morrow.

CHARTER REVISION REPORT.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—Gov. Odell's recommendations sent to the Senate on Monday night as to amendments to the New York City charter did not state all his objections to the report of the commission.

It is learned on undoubted authority that there is objection to certain recommendations which it is believed would add to the powers of Controller Coler. The commission urges the abolition of the East River Bridge Commission, headed by Lewis Nixon, and urges that it be put in the control of Bridge Commissioner Shea. Mr. Shea is the political sponsor of Controller Bird Coler, and it is believed that this move would increase the latter's prestige.

The commission also recommends that the tunnels, other than the rapid transit tunnel, be placed under Mr. Shea's charge. This would give him still more patronage, as it is believed that, besides the East River tunnel, there are several more to be constructed. This section will be opposed also, and will not find a place in the bill to be introduced.

It is said also that the Controller's salary will not be raised as is contemplated by the commission's report. The commission suggested:

The Controller at the present time receives a salary of $10,000, and in addition receives a much larger amount as a percentage upon the collections made under the transfer tax. As a measure of economy, the commission recommends that his salary be fixed at $15,000 and that the transfer tax percentage be paid into the City Treasury. The Mayor's salary remains at $15,000.

It is pointed out that a bill already in the Legislature provides for doing away with the transfer tax fees and transferring them to the State instead of the city Treasury, but even with that deflection from the private purse of the Controller it is not intended to increase his salary. Instead of increasing any salaries in New York City, Gov. Odell is in favor of lowering them, and believes that $10,000 is ample salary for the Controller, especially as the Mayor receives only $15,000.

AGAINST REMSEN CANAL BILL.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—Gov. Odell disapproves of the bill introduced by Assemblyman Remsen of Brooklyn repealing Chapter 935 of the Laws of 1896 relating to transportation companies in the State other than railroads. The Governor sent for Mr. Remsen and had a plain talk with him on the subject. When Mr. Remsen put in his bill he said it was for the purpose of aiding commerce on the canals by removing the prohibition against the formation of companies with a capital of more than $50,000 to do business on the State waterways. The day following it was pointed out that his bill repealed the whole act, including the clause which prohibits any railroad company from holding stock in a canal corporation. Mr. Remsen frankly admitted recently his intention to repeal the whole act.

Gov. Odell was somewhat shocked by Mr. Remsen's admission. He sent for the Brooklyn Assemblyman and expressed his views in a straight-out way. "Your bill," he said, "is calculated to do injury to the whole canal system."

Robert Cummings, who has been engaged in work in connection with the revision of the State laws, has drawn up a bill which is in line with the suggestions of the Governor and Superintendent Partridge for the improvement of canal commerce. Mr. Remsen was offered the opportunity of introducing this bill as a substitute for his bill, and has agreed, it is said, to do so.

Men from all over the State interested in canal legislation and the perpetuating and improvement of the present canal gathered here to-day. Among those present were George H. Raymond of Buffalo, Alfred Haines of the Merchants' Exchange of Buffalo, W. F. McConnell of the Merchants' Association, New York; J. D. Kernan of Utica, President of the State Commerce Association; F. E. Bacon, President Syracuse Chamber of Commerce, and Frank Brainerd of the New York Produce Exchange.

Together with the legislators known to favor canal legislation, they had a long secret conference on the subject. It is known that they will endeavor to kill every Constitutional amendment so far introduced because, if any of them were to pass, the proposed canal amendment could not be submitted.

E. ARDEN NOBLETT CONVICTED.

Edwin Arden Noblett, many times arrested for alleged swindling operations in the financial district, and as many times escaping punishment therefor, was yesterday convicted in General Sessions of the larceny of $10,000 from Edward H. Watson of 115 Broadway.

Noblett had an office in Nassau Street some time ago, where he ostensibly did a banking and brokerage business. To Watson he represented that he was making $50,000 a year clear profits; that he was worth $100,000 in stocks, bonds, and gilt-edged securities; that he had an option on a valuable rubber concession in Brazil, and that Watson for a paltry $10,000 could have a half interest in his remunerative and growing business. Watson jumped at the offer. The money was paid, and Watson soon found out that Noblett's only assets were unsigned and worthless bonds and other stock certificates. The extreme penalty for Noblett's offense is ten years in State prison.

Southern Car Company Moves Offices.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 23.—The general offices of the Southern Car and Foundry Company were moved to-day from Gadsden, Ala., to this city. The offices moved are those of President J. M. Eliot, Auditor C. E. Conner, General Manager C. W. Prosser, and Treasurer W. G. Brookway. The company has staked off the site of the pressed steel car works to be built at Ensley, and will commence work on the buildings in the immediate future. The plant is to be completed and in operation by next Fall.

Manager of Alabama Company Resigns.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 23.—The Alabama Industrial field was surprised to-day when it learned that Fred M. Jackson, General Manager of the Alabama Consolidated Coal and Iron Company, had resigned and that the office had been abolished. Mr. Jackson at the recent meeting of the Directors in New York suggested a certain line of policy with the understanding that if it was not agreeable to the Directors he would retire. The result was his resignation.

Alabama Furnaces to Resume.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 23.—Arrangements have been perfected for the resumption of operations at the three blast furnaces of the Woodstock Iron Company, at Anniston, and the furnaces are now being repaired. A. H. Quinn, agent of the company, is in the Birmingham district for the purpose of securing a supply of coke. This will be difficult, perhaps, as not as much coke is made as is needed in the Birmingham district itself. There is nothing else in the way of resumption of operations.

New Furnace for Birmingham.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 23.—The Tutwiler Coal and Iron Company, which bought the Decatur blast furnace, belonging to Eugene Zimmerman, is moving the furnace to Birmingham, where it will become consolidated with the Vanderbilt blast furnace. The two furnaces combined will make a 150-ton stack. The Vanderbilt furnace has just been repaired and is to resume operations in the immediate future.

Santa Fe's Plans in Louisiana.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 23.—There is a strong belief here and in Southwest Louisiana, based apparently on good evidence, that the building of the recently chartered Lake Charles and Rice Belt Railroad will be part of a plan of the Santa Fé system to get a line into New Orleans. It is understood that the road now being surveyed from Orange to Jasper, Texas, is to be extended to the Santa Fé at Marshall, Texas, and the Lake Charles and Rice Belt will be extended parallel with the Southern Pacific to New Orleans.

FRANK HOFFMAN A SUICIDE.

He Was a Son of Capt. Henry Hoffman, the well-known Horseman.

Frank Hoffman, the twenty-four-year-old son of Capt. Henry Hoffman, the well-known horseman of 83 Linden Boulevard, Flatbush, Brooklyn, committed suicide last night by drinking carbolic acid. His family is unable to assign any cause for the deed except that he was temporarily insane.

Capt. Hoffman, who is of the Berwind-White Coal Mining Company of 1 Broadway, called Capt. Knight of the Flatbush Police Station shortly before 8 o'clock and told him that his son had been found dead in bed. According to the story, young Hoffman left home about 6 o'clock in the evening to take a walk in Prospect Park with his two bulldogs. He returned an hour later, bringing with him two friends, and together all repaired to the young man's room, where they talked and smoked until at 7 o'clock the visitors departed.

About 8 o'clock a servant went to Hoffman's room to call him as he had not come down to supper. She knocked at the door, but receiving no response, entered. She saw Hoffman lying on his bed, and becoming suspicious, called the coachman, Herman Moser. The latter examined the prostrate form more closely, and found Hoffman undressed and lying on his bed. He tried to arouse him, and failing in this, at once gave an alarm to the family. Drs. Gallegher and Lazarus who live in the neighborhood were hastily summoned, but pronounced the young man dead. Beside the bed stood a two ounce bottle of carbolic acid emptied.

Capt. Hoffman said that he could not imagine a cause for the suicide, and thought that his son must have been temporarily insane. Capt. Hoffman became prominent last Summer when, during the time the church he belonged to was undergoing repairs, he invited the entire congregation out on board one of his steamers to sail up the Hudson and to spend the day in worship aboard the boat. About six months ago the Captain advertised in a Brooklyn paper that he would not hold himself responsible for any debts contracted by any of his sons.

German Warship at New Orleans.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 23.—German warships rarely come to New Orleans, but a battleship has arrived in front of this city, and on Friday morning the local German population, which is large, will make up for past lost opportunities. Several banquets of prominence have been arranged for the officers, and all the German societies will entertain German officers and men in one form or another. If Commandant Wollheim does not order otherwise there will be a great festival aboard the Vine a on Sunday, in honor of the Emperor's birthday. Baron Von Meysenbug will be master of ceremonies.

The Wanamaker Store The Wanamaker Store The Wanamaker Store

"I Never Knew Money to Be So Hard To Hold on to, as It Is this January"

So said a woman who watches the merchandise movements in the Wanamaker Store. And why is it so hard to keep money?

Simply because things of more use than money are being offered for so much less than an equal amount of money ever bought before. The fur sale was the culminating aggravation that brought forth the above remark. What beauty-loving woman that had saved up fifty dollars for her own use, could hold on to it, when a hundred-dollar fur jacket such as she had set her heart on was offered for fifty dollars? How quickly that fifty-dollar fund was doubled to a hundred by the magic of January offerings at Wanamaker's.

But the whole month has been a series of offerings of merchandise that was far more valuable than the money. The Sale of White was the first aggressor, The Sale of Hurt Books, The Sale of China and Glass (yet a better offering, in a smaller way, is told of to-day), The Carpet Sale, The Sale of Parlor Furniture, The Silver Sale, The Hosiery and Underwear Sale; then The Fur Sale, hinted of above, The Silk Sale, as well as smaller offerings of Men's, Women's, Boys' and Girls' Clothing at most remarkable savings.

Hasn't it been a wonderful month? And splendid merchandise in every offering. But there is another week yet, and some startling news is still coming. To-day's announcements show stirring offerings. The news is below. Read on:

More FUR NEWS

This of prices reduced a third to a half on furs from our own stocks. The selling of the other man's stock, which we took at a very low figure, was a brief, though interesting incident in this fur store's history. We told of those furs one day, and the close of the next selling day saw but a few stragglers still in our hands. Not enough to mention here. There are bargains below, however, than which there are rarely any better offered, and though there's wide choosing, there is in many instances only one garment of a kind still remaining:

$17.50—Short electric seal capes; were $35.

$30—Electric Eton jackets; collar and revers of blended mink; were $45.

$35—Plain Astrakhan coats; were $60.

$50—Short Persian lamb capes; were $85.

$50—Plain chinchilla collarettes; were $125.

$50—Seal collarette, with border of cross fox; was $110.

$60—Plain Persian lamb coats; were $90.

$75—Short seal capes; were $125.

$150—Seal coat, with collar and revers of blended Baum marten; was $300.

$200—Handsome broadtail coat; collar and revers of real chinchilla; was $350.

$225—Seal coat, with collar and revers of chinchilla; was $355.

$15 to $37.50—Capes of Irkutz sable; were $30 to $75, according to length.

Second floor, Broadway.

OPERA CAPES
Half Price

From the smartest makers in Paris. Elegant, exclusive wraps that must have wearers for this season; and chiefest wearing time is still ahead. But selling time is now!

The light pastel shades for evening wear, as well as many in more sober colorings for street service.

Prices were $46 to $95; now

$23 to $47.50

Real elegance at the usual cost of the commonplace.

Second floor, Broadway

GOLF CAPES, $6

Before this lot came you'd have done well to get so good a cape for $10. But we bought the cloth from a mill that couldn't find a jobber or a manufacturer willing to buy so big a lot. Got it at our own price. Had the capes made up after our best model; and you can buy an all-wool cape, as smart and stylish as you could wish, for $6. Enough for prompt mail orders. Second floor, Broadway.

Women's Early Spring NECKWEAR

Paris, Berlin, London, Manhattan Island—the best of the newest ideas from manufacturers anywhere. An unusually extensive showing of imported neckwear is now ready. Numerous effective styles that are attracting admiring glances from all women, who pass the exhibition cases, and not a few pleased purchasers, even though it be a bit early. The daintiest effects are French, of course. But the German makers send some very handsome pieces, too, and they're quite as original, though in lines hardly so elegant:

Lawn Stocks, with bow, trimmed with lace and embroidery. $2.50 to $6.50.

Lawn Ties, with hand-embroidery, and drawn work. $1.10 to $6.75.

Lawn Sailor Collars and Revers; some are plain hemstitched with embroidery, others trimmed with lace. $2 to $8.50.

Ruffs, made of taffeta silk, edged with chenille and chenille ends. $2; value $3.

Broadway.

Children's Dresses

Of ginghams and percales. Pretty, tastefully and carefully made gowns, for the tots of 2, 3 and 4 years of age. Though attractive and desirable, still far from expensive:

50c—Of gingham, in large and small checks; blue and pink; pointed yoke trimmed with ruffle; neck and sleeves trimmed with hemstitched ruffle; 2 and 3 years.

85c—Of gingham, in pink-and-white and blue-and-white stripes; round yoke; row of hemstitching and 2 clusters of plaits, finished with ruffle, edged with embroidery; 2 and 3 years.

$1.25—Of percale, pink and blue grounds, with small dark polka-dots; made with waist; shield of white piqué; finished with round collar, trimmed with white braid; 2 to 4 years. Second floor, Fourth avenue.

New Candy Store
Handy for Men

Just inside the door at Broadway and Ninth, in the Annex store, across Ninth street from the Wanamaker store. Here we have a complete assortment of all kinds of Wanamaker candies—20c, 25c, 30c, 60c a pound.

The freshest, purest, most delicious candies made. Serve you in a jiffy, too.

770 Broadway.

CHINA and GLASS
Lowest Prices Yet Reached

Every piece of China or Cut Glass in to-day's offering is new and perfect—refined in style, and of highest quality in its grade; yet the prices of many of the lots are lower than have ever been known, even on our best previous occasions.

That means that the price-news below is the best that thrifty and tasteful housekeepers have ever read.

But the offering is only promised for a single day. We shall do well to supply all demands to-day, as we have planned; but even this we cannot promise, for such news as this should bring wide and prompt response from shrewd housekeepers everywhere, who love beautiful china and cut glass.

One counter is filled with

Fine Plates at 15c Each

You've admired them and thousands have bought them rapidly at 25c each. Austrian china Tea and Bread-and-Butter Plates, with dainty decoration of festoon of flowers, with colored band and gilt edge. No other store has matched them at 25c. To-day's price is simply unheard-of until now. 15c each.

But the rest of the story is just as emphatic. Read on:

Cut Glass—

Cut Glass Water Tumblers, $2.40 a dozen, from $3.
Cut Glass Water Caraffes, $1.75 each, from $2.25.
Bowls, 8 in., rich cutting, $3, from $3.50; a good $5 value.

German Novelties—

In animal form, mainly—some figures. Many of these we imported to sell for 50c, and numbers have been sold at this price. To-day, 20c each. Elevator counter, Tenth street.

Richly Decorated Plates—

These offerings will probably not be duplicated this year—all of the finest china, and the decorations all of the highest order. The sizes are dinner, breakfast, tea and bread-and-butter. A variety of decorations to choose from. The price to-day

$1 each

Yesterday's prices were $16 to $24 a dozen.

Decorated China Cups and Saucers—

A fine fluted shape, decorated in flowers and gold, tea size—

15c each

Yesterday, were 25c each.

Fine Fancy China—

Mostly Austrian china; reduced one-third to one-half; prettily decorated in colors and gold; some on colored tinted grounds:

Salads, 40c each, from 75c. Salads, 65c each, from $1.25.
Cake Plates, 75c each, from $1.25.
Celery Trays, 55c each, from 85c. Olive Trays, 50c each, from 75c.
Olive Trays, 35c each, from 55c.

All of above on Main Aisle.

Do You Want a Share of These Handsome White Garments Before Prices Go Up?

You must be prompt, if you do. These lots are the only ones of equal quality that can be sold for so little. So low were the prices offered to us last summer that some manufacturers have sold the goods for much better prices to other stores and sold their reputation for the pottage of profit. Their dealings with Wanamaker's are ended; but our sale is that much briefer.

No other store plans six months ahead; hence none bought so cheaply. These lots are not matched, except in spots, by any other sale. And nowhere is such variety as here.

Night Gowns—

75c—Of cambric; yoke of 3 rows of insertion; V neck; neck and sleeves trimmed with torchon lace. Were 85c.

85c—Of cambric; square neck trimmed with lawn ruffle and torchon lace.

$1—Of cambric; yoke of cambric in cluster of fine plaits; square neck front and high back; trimmed with torchon lace, insertion and ribbon.

$1.25—Of cambric; high neck; yoke of lawn with cluster of plaits and 4 rows of insertion; neck and sleeves trimmed with neat embroidery.

Petticoats—

$1—Of muslin, with umbrella ruffle of cambric, trimmed with neat embroidery and plaits.

$1.25—Of muslin, with deep cambric ruffle, trimmed with torchon lace and 2 rows of insertion.

$1.50—Of muslin, with deep ruffle of lawn, trimmed with embroidery and cluster of fine plaits.

Second floor.

Short Petticoats—

30c—Of cambric, with cambric ruffle, hemstitched.

50c—Of muslin; trimmed with embroidery ruffle and plaits above.

75c—Of cambric, with deep ruffle of lawn, trimmed with torchon lace and insertion.

Drawers—

15c—Of muslin or cambric; deep hem and plaits above. No more than three to a buyer.

18c—Of muslin, with cambric hemstitched ruffle.

30c—Of cambric, with cambric ruffle, trimmed with torchon lace.

50c—Of muslin or cambric; trimmed with neat embroidery ruffle and plaits above.

Chemises—

25c—Of cambric; round neck trimmed with lace.

35c—Of cambric; round neck trimmed with hemstitched lawn ruffle and insertion of embroidery.

60c—Of nainsook; round neck trimmed with Valenciennes lace.

A Post-Holiday Sale of Handsome LAMPS

This is an announcement that always awakens considerable interest. It's a notice of our readiness to close out certain lots remaining from our special holiday purchases. There are several hundred specimens of artistic lamp-making in this clear-up. Metal lamps in the oddest of shapes; plain pottery pieces, and some that are elegantly decorated; lamps of wrought iron, brass, copper or bronze, in combination with exquisite ceramics. The Japanese vases that have been built into lamps are greatly admired.

The price range is as wide as the assortment of styles. But this is the really important fact: Whatever the price now marked on any lamp in this offering, it represents half its former price, or near it—often much less.

For Fifteen Dollars—Choice among a splendid gathering of high-grade lamps that sold at $25, $30, $35, $37.50 and $40.

For Seven Dollars and a Half—Choice among $13.50, $15 and $18 lamps.

For Five Dollars—Choice among good $10 and $12 values.

And Three Dollars buys any one of the many $5 and $6 kinds.

Smart, Perfect-fitting SHIRTS to Order

The craft of shirt-making in America has advanced marvelously in the last few years. National pride made us jealous of those Parisian shirt-makers who made shirts for Americans. We took the matter seriously and said that better shirts should be made in America. We went to school to Paris to get ideas—now Paris might well go to school to us for skill in cutting and fitting; and for variety of materials shown.

Wanamaker determination for mastery brought together the brains, facilities, skill and materials. But it will be years before some of you find out what superb shirts we are making; for faith is necessary, for us to get the chance to fit you; after that we know we'll always make your shirts.

The new materials are now on show. Come to the store if convenient; if not, write or 'phone us and we'll send a capable man to your home or office to show samples and measure you at your convenience.

These are the prices of shirts made to order from the various stuffs:

Percale from France, $3
Madras from Glasgow, $3.50
Satin broche from France, $3.50
Batiste from France, $10
Silk from France, $12

Broadway and Ninth street.

Men's Overcoats

Here's a lot of heavy, stylish, comfortable coats—some swell Raglans among them, at $10 each. They are kinds that sold—and very moderately priced, at that—as high as $15.

And then there's this round-up of overcoats at $15. A fair proportion of these, too, are the very stylish Raglans. Fabrics are rough-faced cheviots, in Oxford gray and brown, and of Kerseys, in blue and black. There's not a garment in this lot that was not very reasonable when priced $18, and many in this group are good $25 values.

Choice at Fifteen Dollars

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Boys' CLOTHING

The last little lingering lots come to the front to-day. House-cleaning days are now about over in the Boys' Clothing Store. The stocks are all properly adjusted. Superior clothing in unmatched assortment, at most moderate prices—that's the offer here always.

Excellent grades, but only a limited variety at littlest of prices—that's the proposition for to-day.

Fifty Vestee suits—all in 3-year sizes—and fifty sailor suits in 11 and 12-year sizes. Values up to $7. Price, $2.50.

Seventy-five two-piece double-breasted jacket suits, in 12 to 16-year sizes. Values $5 and $6. Price, $3.25.

Several hundred very good corduroy trousers, strong and exceptionally serviceable; 3 to 16-year sizes. Price, 95c. Second floor, Ninth street.

LINENS

To-day's word relates of goods that though originally marked very moderately are now offered at still lower prices. A lot of German drill table linen, 56 in. wide, the price of which was 50c a yard yesterday, is to-day 38c. About 800 yards of this.

200 dozen napkins, of Scotch double damask; 24 in. square, regularly $3.75 a dozen. Now a dollar less—$2.75.

90 dozen bleached huckaback towels, Irish; hemmed ends; all white; damask borders; regularly 37½c.; now 25c.

140 dozen bleached damask towels, with knotted fringe; assorted colored borders; 24x50 in.; were 25c yesterday. Price, 18c. Fourth avenue.

Rhinestone Combs

They seem to be growing still more popular for evening wear. New shapes and designs are being wrought in wide variety. We have gathered extensively of the prettiest, most tasteful kinds. And priced them all fairly. The assortment includes:

Side Combs, plain and fancy settings, at 85c, $1, $2.50, $2.75, $3, $3.50 and $4.75 a pair.

Real Shell Combs, with silver mountings, at $11.50, $12.75.

Empire Combs, at $1, $1.50, $2.25, $3, $3.75 and $4.75.

Real Shell Empire Combs, with silver mountings, at $9.50, $10.50, $14 and $17.25.

Chignon Combs, plain and fancy settings, at $1, $1.50, $2, $2.25, $2.50, $3 and $3.25.

Broaway and Tenth street.

The Under-price Store

Hardly a selling day that does not bring a new quota of unusually low-priced offerings for this basement store. Half a dozen new lots are added to-day. Many others previously mentioned are still in good supply, or will be replenished. Of particular interest are the silverware offerings.

$1.25 Rugs at $1—

Some dealers have thought $1.50 a fair price for these. They are Persian Wilton rugs—jute, though closely resembling pure wool rugs. Various good patterns and colorings. Size 27x54.

Embroideries and Insertions—

About 5,000 yards of nainsook and cambric edgings and insertions, at 12½c a yard—values up to 30c. Insertions at 5c. Many kinds in this lot are worth double.

Women's Handkerchiefs—

Initial Handkerchiefs, unlaundered, at 75c a dozen. They sell usually at a dollar or more. Some lace trimmed handkerchiefs at 10c each. These are worth 20c.

Men's and Women's Umbrellas—

The price is $1.75 each for either kind, though none is worth less than $2.50, and many would be properly priced up to $3.25. The men's umbrellas are of union taffeta, and have stylish handles of natural wood, with silver trimmings. Those for women are of either pure silk in dark blue and garnet, or of excellent black union taffeta; all with natural wood handles.

Desk Blotters—

They have board backs and leather corners. Size 19x24 in., at 50c, instead of 60c; Size 12x24., at 35c, instead of 50c.

$1 Corsets at 65c—

Three good brands—Globe, P. N., and J. B. Shown in white, drab and black; short hips and long over hips; low bust; 65c for choice. Value $1.

MR. VEST ATTACKS THE SHIPPING BILL

Missouri Senator Says It Is Meant for the Few.

CONDEMNS ITS PROVISIONS

Declares They Will Benefit the Corporations, and Believes a Trust to Control American Shipping Will Get All the Subsidy.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Consideration of the Shipping bill was resumed this afternoon by the Senate. At the instance of Mr. Frye of Maine, who relinquished the chair temporarily to take charge of the measure on the floor, it was made the unfinished business of the Senate, thus restoring it to its privileged position. Mr. Vest (Dem., Mo.,) took the floor immediately in a characteristically brilliant, forceful, and interesting speech lasting nearly three hours. He advocated free ships and vigorously attacked the navigation laws of the United States, holding that they were responsible for the decadence of the merchant marine of America. He was accorded close attention by his colleagues on both sides of the Chamber. As a member of the Committee on Commerce, Mr. Vest said, the pending measure came before the Senate ostensibly from the Committee on Commerce, but had come really from a Committee on Promotion, composed of twenty-five prominent and intelligent men appointed by the junior Senator from Maine, Mr. Frye.

"The Chairman of this Committee of Promotion," said the Missouri Senator, "is Clement A. Griscom, President of the International Navigation Company, a man of high character, of great intelligence, and of indefatigable energy. The company which he represents is by far the largest beneficiary under this bill.

"I must express my surprise and regret that not one member of that Committee of Promotion is in favor of an American buying his ships where he can buy them cheapest and then sailing them under the flag of his country. In other words, to use the language of the Senator from Maine, (Mr. Frye,) the members of that committee are unanimously in favor of the obsolete, infamous, and outrageous navigation laws of the United States, which are a stain on the statutes of the United States, and which for fifty years have been riding to death the merchant marine of this country as the old man of the sea rode to exhaustion Sinbad, the Sailor."

CONTRADICTS MR. HANNA.

Mr. Vest referred to the advocacy of the measure by Eugene Chamberlain, the present Commissioner of Navigation, who, he said, had been appointed to his present office by Mr. Cleveland, and had signalized the assumption of his duties by his advocacy of free ships. He declared that Mr. Chamberlain had seen "the smoke drifting toward the Republican camp and had drifted with it." Now, he said, Mr. Chamberlain was in favor of the subsidy legislation and had said that for $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 scientifically administered, the American merchant marine could be made second to none, except Great Britain's, in the world. He intimated that this was the opinion of a man only who drifted with the current.

Then Mr. Vest controverted the position taken by Mr. Hanna (Rep., Ohio,) in his speech in support of the present bill; that the decline of the merchant marine had begun with the outbreak of the civil war.

Adverting to the control of the seas by Great Britain, Mr. Vest said that when he visited Hamburg a few years ago he saw in the harbor 152 ships flying the British flag, and not a single one carrying the Stars and Stripes. England, he said, had been wise enough to do what this country, in its stolidity and stupidity, had failed to do. She had maintained her supremacy on the ocean by purchasing her fast clipper ships from the United States. Continuing, Mr. Vest said that our merchant marine had continued to decline since 1855. Germany, too, had suffered from British competition until the people of that empire had begun to purchase their ships from Great Britain.

Mr. Vest said he took no stock in the dramatic prophecies of Messrs. Frye and Hanna, that in case of war between any two of the great powers, our merchant marine would be destroyed if free ships were allowed. He declared that the navigation laws were a relic of barbarism. "But" he said, "they never will be repealed so long as New England dominates the politics and policies of this country."

"Has there not in the Senator's time been a time when the Democratic Party could have repealed these laws?" asked Mr. Hanna.

"Never, never, never," replied Mr. Vest with great earnestness.

"Is it not true that in that time the Democratic Party has had both the Executive and Congress at once?" Mr. Hanna then asked, and Mr. Vest replied that it was so, but that the Democrats had voted with the Republicans. "They were dominated by local interests," he said, "as Gen. Hancock said was the case in all tariff matters. Indeed," Mr. Vest went on, "the whole tariff system is an interdependent mutuality of greed, as this bill is only a part of that system." He declared that the policy proposed by the pending bill was one of "barbaric exclusion." He thought the people at large had done enough for the northeastern coast without contributing $150,000,000 more to build up its ship industry.

NO AID TO THE NAVY.

The Senator ridiculed the claim that the bill is intended to provide auxiliary cruisers in time of war. Even the fastest ocean-going merchant vessels would not suffice for that purpose in view of the revolution in the construction of naval vessels. Speaking in this connection of Dewey's victory at Manila, he said the Spanish fleet had been annihilated like "eggshells struck by a thunderbolt." He contended that bounties are unconstitutional, and quoted a letter from ex-Senator Edmunds, the author of the pending bill, to Senator Frye, in support of this view. Mr. Vest found in this view the reason for the contention that the bill is intended to strengthen the navy. If bounties were justifiable, why not give a bounty to farmers and stock growers in dry years? Why not give it to miners?

Concluding a discussion of Mr. Frye's argument in favor of the bill, that its operation would afford the Government auxiliary cruisers, in time of war, Mr. Vest said: "All this talk of auxiliary cruisers is a subterfuge, a mere glamour, and an appeal to patriotism and the old flag. This is not a question of rhetoric; it is not a question of sentiment."

Referring to the peroration of Mr. Frye in his speech upon the pending bill, Mr. Vest said he was reminded of an actor whom Henry Watterson was fond of telling about.

"At the conclusion of the play," said Mr. Vest, "the actor, wrapping himself in the American flag, while the orchestra, consisting of a fiddle and a bass drum, played 'Yankee Doodle,' rushed to the front of the stage, fired off a horse pistol, and screamed like an American eagle."

In his opinion, to give a subsidy to anybody was unjustifiable and unconstitutional, but to give it to great corporations was "naked robbery under the guise of law."

WHO GETS THE MONEY?

Discussing the participation of various lines of ships in the proposed subsidy, Mr. Vest said that the vessels of what is known as the American Line, (the International Navigation Company,) in the course of the twenty years the subsidy was to run, would receive at least $42,000,000 of the total which would be paid out.

Mr. Frye called attention to the fact that an amendment proposed excluded the American Line Company from any participation beyond a period of ten years.

Continuing, Mr. Vest discussed the intimate relations which he said existed between the railroads of the country and great steamship lines, and asserted in that connection that the International Navigation Company's ships were being operated at a profit.

Again Mr. Frye interrupted to direct attention to President Griscom's statement that every one of the four ships of the American Line under the American flag had lost money continuously since it had hoisted the Stars and Stripes.

Mr. Vest admitted that was true, but urged that the company made a profit on its entire plant. The Pacific Mail Steamship Company, he said, would be the next beneficiary under the bill. With its present ships and the two vessels it was building now it would receive $550,000 a year of the subsidy.

"The next poor, emaciated, starving corporation which will receive a subsidy under this bill," said Mr. Vest sarcastically, "is the Standard Oil Company." [Laughter.] It was, he said, trembling with emaciation and hungry for the necessaries of life; its shares of stock being worth only $830 each. He had endeavored to ascertain how much of the subsidy the Standard Oil Company would receive, but the company had declined to supply any information as to its ships.

Mr. Frye here interjected a statement that nearly all oil tank steamers were built abroad. They would receive only one-quarter of the regular subsidy, as they could bring no returning freight. It was not likely, therefore, that they would be brought under the American flag. Mr. Vest hoped they would not be brought under the Stars and Stripes. They did not deserve, he maintained, any of the subsidy, and their owners ought not to have any of the tax money of the United States.

LOOKS FOR SHIPPING TRUST.

After having read at the desk several extracts from the reports of Mr. Chamberlain, Commissioner of Navigation, to show the change in his attitude toward subsidies, Mr. Vest said it was evident, despite the assertions of Mr. Chamberlain, that the whole amount of the subsidy—$9,000,000 a year—would be taken up practically immediately. He referred to the reported formation of syndicates to control the vessels on the Great Lakes and on the Pacific Coast. He believed a trust would be formed for the control of all this American shipping—a trust that would get every dollar of the subsidy.

"Everything in the country is under a trust," said the Missouri Senator, "from the cradle to the grave."

He declared that the anti-trust bill passed by the House last session was sleeping the sleep of death in a pigeon hole of the Committee on Judiciary of the Senate. The Republicans, he asserted, dare not raise the black flag against the trusts before the last campaign, and now in gratitude for their financial assistance they would not raise their hands against them.

"This bill," continued Mr. Vest, "will pass the Senate. It is a part of the protective system sacred to the Republican Party, especially in New England. Drunk with victory, the Republican Party now will stop at nothing."

Mr. Vest closed with the following quotation from Tennyson, which he said should be taken to heart by the Republicans:

The wind blew east and the wind blew west,
And the blue eggs in the robin's nest
Will soon have wings and beak and breast
And flutter and fly away.

When Mr. Vest concluded he was congratulated by numerous Senators from both sides of the Chamber.

NEW ARMY BILL COMPLETE.

Conferrees Agree on a Measure Which Will Be Reported Saturday—Many Amendments Incorporated.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The conferrees on the Army Reorganization bill reached a final agreement on the bill late to-day, but the measure is so complicated and the amendments so numerous that it will probably not be reported before Saturday.

The Senate receded from its amendment providing for a regimental rather than a corps organization of the artillery arm of the service. That was considered the most important difference, and when a settlement was reached on that point no great amount of time was necessary to come to an agreement upon other points. On the next most important controversy, that concerning the detail of officers to staff duty, the Senate won most of its contentions, its amendments being agreed to practically as they passed the Senate.

LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Passes with an Amendment Providing for More Lawyers.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—At the conclusion of routine business to-day, the Senate resumed consideration of the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation bill, the pending question being the amendment of Mr. Jones, (Dem., Ark.,) providing for the appointment of an Assistant Attorney General to represent the Government in all matters of claims pending before Congress.

Mr. Chandler, (Rep., N. H.,) who opposed the amendment, offered an amendment providing that the Assistant Attorney General should have an office in the Capitol, an assistant at a salary of $2,500 per annum, and be assigned two clerks, who should assist him in the work of his office. Mr. Chandler ridiculed Mr. Jones's proposition and indicated that he held in reserve another amendment which would provide for the appointment of a similar Attorney for other departments of the Government.

After an extended discussion of the amendment offered by Mr. Jones, Mr. Chandler withdrew his amendment to the amendment and offered as a substitute a provision enabling the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of the Interior each to appoint a competent lawyer to represent the United States before committees of Congress when requested by the committees to do so, concerning claims against the Government, the salary of each to be $4,000.

The substitute amendment was agreed to without further debate. No other amendments being offered, the bill as amended was passed.

TROOPS SENT TO MUSKOGEE.

Body of Cavalry Dispatched to the Scene of the Snake Indian Outbreak.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—At the instance of the Attorney General the War Department to-day took steps for the preservation of law and order at Muskogee, Indian Territory, where the Snake Indians are making trouble for the authorities. An account of the situation is contained in the following telegram received by the Attorney General from United States Marshal Bennett, dated at Muskogee yesterday:

"The Snake band of outlaws has organized into several sections, with about fifty well-armed men in each. They are traveling in the country between Eufaula and Wetumka, and between the Deep Fork and South Canadian Rivers, intimidating the people. They have publicly whipped several, have killed at least one, and generally are terrorizing the people. They have organized in open rebellion against the constituted authorities, and have destroyed several hundred allotment certificates issued to Creek Indians by the Dawes Commission. They threaten death to all who oppose them, and it is not possible by ordinary means to serve warrants now in the hands of my deputies.

The War Department has telegraphed Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, commander of the Department of the Missouri, at Omaha, authorizing him to act in his own discretion in the matter of sending troops. Marshal Bennett's telegram was repeated to him.

MUSKOGEE, Indian Territory, Jan. 23.—John Coffee, one of the Creek band which has been terrorizing peaceable Indians, was arrested to-day by Marshal Bennett and will be tried before Commissioner Sanson. It is feared his friends will attempt to rescue him, and the feeling of insecurity has been intensified.

News was brought in to-day of the killing of Dick King, a full-blood Creek, because of his refusal to join the marauders.

HEBREW FREE LOAN ASSOCIATION

Ninth Annual Meeting Held at the Educational Alliance.

More than 1,000 Hebrews of the east side, together with many wealthier persons actively interested in charitable works, attended the ninth annual meeting of the Hebrew Gemilath Chassodian, or Free Loan Association, held last evening at the Educational Alliance in East Broadway. The Rev. Dr. L. Zinsler, the President, in his address reported the present capital of the association as $32,560 and the membership more than 1,000. During the last year loans aggregating $153,450 have been made, showing that the entire capital has been turned over nearly five times. The absolute loss has been only about three-quarters of 1 per cent.

The society was formed on lines laid down by the late Baroness de Hirsch, and lends money to the worthy poor in sums of from $10 to $100 on notes made by themselves and indorsed by a responsible party, making no charge for this service. Dr. Zinsler announced that hereafter the funds of the society will be open to all persons producing satisfactory evidence of worthiness regardless of their race or religion.

During the year the society gained 500 new members, and thirteen patrons and life members, among them being Oscar S. Straus. Among the donations received were Mr. and Mrs. Jacob H. Schiff, $3,000; Leonard Lewisohn, $2,000; the Baroness de Hirsch Fund, $2,000; Marcus Goldman, $1,000, and William Soloman, $500.

Following are the Directors for the coming year: Abram K. Seitel, I. Allshul, the Rev. Dr. Drachman, S. Epstein, L. Grossman, S. Konigsberg, H. Kulok, N. Lubetkin, I. Sunshine, M. Turkeltach, and K. Seitel.

After the formal reports had been heard, addresses were made by the Rev. Dr. Samuel Schulman of the Temple Beth-El, who asked for prayers for Queen Victoria, Prof. Felix Adler, and the Rev. H. Masliansky, the last speaking in Hebrew.

NAVAL BILL IN THE HOUSE.

The Democratic Leader Objects to the Yearly Increase in the Appropriations.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The House today, after passing the District of Columbia Appropriation bill, considered the Naval Appropriation bill in committee of the whole. It was agreed that general debate should be limited to one hour. Mr. Foss, (Rep., Ill.,) Chairman of the Naval Committee, who was in charge of the measure, explained its salient features. In answer to a question, Mr. Foss said that our navy was larger than the German Navy and was keeping a little ahead of it. Mr. Grosvenor (Rep., Ohio,) took exception to this remark, which he considered unfortunate and capable of misconstruction. We were friendly with Germany, and there was no reason why that country should be singled out for the purposes of comparison.

Mr. Foss disclaimed any idea that we were directing our energies toward keeping ahead of Germany. He had simply stated a fact. He believed in a strong and efficient navy, not so large as England's, but of moderate size, built on conservative lines, and capable of upholding the honor of the country and the flag.

Mr. Foss said the controverted question as to armor plate had been happily settled by the action of the Secretary of the Navy in accepting bids for 36,810 tons of armor at $420 per ton and $24.32 royalty for Krupp and $11.20 per ton for Harvey armor. He declared that at that price the United States would obtain armor at 25 per cent. below the price paid by other countries.

"Is this the same sort of armor," asked Mr. Bartlett, (Dem., Ga.,) "which the Naval Committee last year said should be purchased for $545 per ton?"

Mr. Foss explained the controversy last year, which Mr. Wheeler (Dem., Ky.,) excepted to, intimating that the Chairman of the Naval Committee was disingenuous.

Mr. Foss insisted that if any credit was due for the provision under which the Secretary had been enabled to procure armor at the reduced price it belonged to the House conferrees.

Mr. Richardson, (Dem., Tenn.,) the minority leader, called attention to the large amount the bill appropriated.

"Does the gentleman desire to go on record as opposed to the policy of building up the navy?" asked Mr. Foss.

"The gentleman can take care of the policy," responded Mr. Richardson. "I am now stating facts. The bill carries an increase of $12,000,000 in time of profound peace."

"This bill carries $9,000,000 for carrying on work previously authorized," interposed Mr. Dayton, (Rep., West Va.,) "and $3,000,000 for rehabilitation of the Naval Academy."

"That may be," answered Mr. Richardson, "but last year the bill carried $13,000,000 more than the bill for the previous year. Last year the size of the bill was apologized for. What I desire to emphasize is that by year there come these great increases for the navy. The present bill is $20,000,000 larger than the bill of two years ago."

At the conclusion of the general debate the bill was read for amendment under the five-minute rule. The provision giving warrant officers the commutation of quarters allowed Second Lieutenants in the Marine Corps was stricken out on a point of order made by Mr. Cannon, (Rep., Ill.) Mr. Fitzgerald (Dem., N. Y.,) moved to increase the number of Chaplains from 23 to 24. With the increase of 5,000 men in the navy he thought it proper that the number of the spiritual advisers of the men should be proportionately increased. Mr. Foss said the Navy Department had not asked for an increase in the corps of Chaplains, and he therefore made a point of order against the amendment. His point was sustained.

The provision for an Inspector of Naval Accounts, with the rank of Lieutenant Commander, also went out on a point of order.

THINK MILES WILL WIN.

His Supporters Confident That He Will Be Appointed Lieutenant General by the President.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Friends of Gen. Brooke and Gen. Otis, who yesterday felt their respective charges had more than a good chance to become Lieutenant General before Gen. Miles attained that rank, are not so confident to-night. While Gen. Miles is away from town and has not moved a hand in the matter, a number of his friends in Congress interested themselves, and to-night his supporters seem to have won a complete victory. They took the ground that when the bill was passed no one who voted for it had any idea that the Lieutenant General would be anybody but Miles, and that the clause providing for the creation of the office was put in that he might be appointed to it. It was argued that it would be tricky and in bad faith to take advantage of an ambiguous phrase to appoint some one else.

The conferrees on the Army bill were prepared to put an end to all doubt on the question by inserting a clause which would put it out of the President's power to appoint anybody but Miles, but they learned from a high quarter that such action would be unnecessary. Gen. Miles's friends, therefore, desisted from their efforts to amend the wording of the bill, and appear to be entirely satisfied that he will receive the commission.

The army officers who were so sure of the President's willingness to displace Miles based their opinions on nothing but the friction which in times past has existed between the Administration and Gen. Miles, and on their belief that the President would welcome any way of getting rid of the latter. In their exultation over Miles's approaching fall, they allowed the news that Brooke or Otis would get the place to leak out, and it became known to Miles's friends in the Senate.

It is understood that Brooke had the backing of some of the most influential officers in the staff, and that their precipitation led to the scheme becoming known. Their hopes were all based on the fact that the new bill creates the position of Lieutenant General without specifying that the officer now enjoying the rank shall be entitled to the commission.

ASPHALT WAR IN WASHINGTON.

Gen. Greene Offers Arbitration, It Is Said; Mr. Hiscock Refuses—State Department to be Neutral.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Ex-Senator Hiscock's vigorous presentation of the Warner-Quinlan side of the asphalt trouble brought the representatives of the Asphalt Trust into the field again to-day. Mr. Hiscock went down to the Capitol and saw a number of Senators. The trust has had the backing of a number of the most powerful men in the Senate, but after Mr. Hiscock's visit it was reported that the Warner-Quinlan side of the case was getting more of a hearing. The upshot of it is that, according to reports generally accepted, Gen. Francis V. Greene has made a proposal that the questions at issue between the two companies be arbitrated and that Mr. Hiscock has declined the proposal. The Warner-Quinlan people, it is stated, will accept nothing but a judicial decision of the whole question and are determined to force the trust to accept this solution.

Ex-Senator Hiscock and Gen. Greene appeared to-day before Solicitor Penfield of the State Department. The two indulged in a colloquy characterized by some warmth of expression, the outcome of which was a disclosure of the purpose of the Warner-Quinlan people to reject any offers of compromise and to go on working their concession in defiance of even forcible measures on the part of the opposition.

The State Department has decided to maintain an attitude of exact neutrality as between the claims of the two asphalt companies in Venezuela. Accordingly Mr. Loomis has been instructed not to adopt any threatening tone in his representations to the Venezuelan Government on this subject; not to indicate a purpose to employ military or naval force in the interests of either party to the controversy, but simply to ask in the usual diplomatic manner that the parties be allowed to settle their quarrels before the judicial tribunals of Venezuela. He will protest, by direction of the State Department, against any abridgment by the Venezuelan Executive of the rights of these American claimants, but this protest simply will be the purpose of basting future reclamations.

Not a word was received from Minister Loomis to-day. The fact came out that the Scorpion did not go to Curacao, in spite of Commander Sargent's report that he was going there to coal. She is still at La Guayra, and it is said that she has been ordered not to leave that port for the present.

New Fire Department Chaplain.

Fire Commissioner Scannell yesterday appointed the Rev. Charles Thomas Walkley, one of the assistant rectors of Grace Church, honorary Chaplain of the Fire Department. The appointment was made on the recommendation of Bishop Potter and the Rev. Dr. Huntington of Grace Church. The Rev. Mr. Walkley takes the place formerly occupied by Chaplain J. Le Baron Johnson.

OPPOSED TO THE SHIP SUBSIDY BILL

Reform Club Issues a Statement Making Grave Charges.

THE POST OFFICE ATTACKED

Claim that the Department Is Preferring Slow Steamships to Faster Ones for Transatlantic Mails.

An article on the subject of ship subsidies, and in opposition to the bill relating thereto that is now before Congress, has been issued by the Committee on Tariff Reform of the Reform Club. It is claimed by the committee that "the article discloses an interesting state of affairs in connection with the transmission of our foreign mails, and shows the absurdity of subsidizing our relatively slow steamships for carrying mail, which our business men properly insist shall be carried by the fastest ships available."

That the proposed bill will not help the foreign mail service of this country is evident, it is claimed, from the fact that "the bill is so drafted as to discourage the building of really fast steamers by American shipyards." It is stated that the boats of the International Navigation Company, (American Line,) while they were the fastest ten years ago, when the Government made a contract with the company to carry mails, are soon to be reckoned among what are known as slow liners.

Regarding the claim that the proposed bill "will even double this enormous subsidy for ten years to come," (referring to the money received by the International Navigation Company for the transportation of mails,) this statement is made:

Indeed a scandal has already risen in this connection. At Page 13 of the report of the Superintendent of Foreign Mails, dated October 23, 1900, appears the following: "The rules under which the mails for transatlantic destinations were for many years assigned to the fastest vessels available for their conveyance, that is to say, in the case of two steamers leaving New York for Great Britain at or about the same time, the mails were assigned to the steamer which, according to the record of its three voyages just preceding the assignment, delivered the mails in the shortest time in London—has not been rigidly adhered to during the year just closed, preference having been given to vessels flying the flag of the United States." It is not here specifically stated what American vessels were thus favored, but on the next page is given a schedule of all ships whose records were kept in this connection. This includes no other American ships than the International's St. Paul, St. Louis, and New York, (the Paris now being rebuilt,) and shows that for the mail service between New York and London their average records for the last three months noted (April-June, 1900,) were:

	Hours.
St. Paul	178.2
St. Louis	185.6
New York	185.8

as compared with the time for similar carriage by other steamers as follows:

	Hours.
Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, (North German Lloyd)	162.2
Lucania (Cunard)	169.1
Campania (Cunard)	172.8
Oceanic (White Star)	171.1
Kaiser Friedrich (Hamburg-American)	174.1
Fuerst Bismarck (Hamburg-American)	176.0

In other words, Mr. McKinley's Post Office Department is deliberately preferring slow ships to faster ones for transatlantic mails.

How grave is the favoritism thus shown the International can be best appreciated by an instance:

According to Bullinger's Guide, the steamers advertised to convey the United States mails from New York to the United Kingdom and the Continent on Nov. 7, 1900, were the St. Paul, scheduled to leave at 10 A. M., and the Teutonic, scheduled to sail at noon.

On the voyage from Southampton to New York the St. Paul of the International Navigation Company (American Line) met with an accident to one of her propellers, on account of which she only reached New York on Nov. 4, and, after the extent of the damage had been ascertained, she was withdrawn from the service, to be laid up for several months on account of repairs. Upon the withdrawal of the St. Paul of the American Line it was naturally understood that the mails to be dispatched on Nov. 7 would be sent by the Teutonic of the White Star Line. On Thursday, Nov. 8, it was, however, ascertained to be the fact that the mails on Wednesday, Nov. 7, were not dispatched by the Teutonic of the White Star Line, but were sent instead by the International's slow steamer Friesland—normally some two or three days slower than the Teutonic, and in fact arriving this time about a week later.

As to non-contract mails, it is stated that United States vessels are paid $1.60 per pound for letters and 5 cents per pound for other articles, while vessels of foreign registry receive about 34 cents per pound for letters and about 4½ cents per pound for other matter, "so that every time a Post Office official employs an International steamer to carry mails, which might be carried more promptly by a foreign steamer, he not merely delays the mail, but, in effect, steals for the International's pocket the greater part (nearly three-fourths in the case of letters) of the total amount which the Government is charged therefor." The article closes as follows:

Moreover, the Government has lately been forced, notwithstanding its predilections, to hire carried by the foreign lines mentioned, the greater part of its foreign mails. From Mr. Chamberlain's report, treating, as it does, only of the amount of compensation paid, it might be supposed that this was merely incidental. Upon looking, however, at the figures for the transatlantic service at New York, given at Page 6 of the Superintendent's report, we find that, though the International received two-thirds of all amounts paid for transmission of mails from New York, in fact it carried only about one-fifth of the letters and one-third of the other mail.

So far as concerns relative economy of service, leaving time entirely out of the question—the figures of its compensation in connection with New York mails, and the amount of service it rendered therefor, when compared with those of its chief rival, were, respectively:

	Grams.
International Navigation Company, for carrying letters	72,611,000
For carying prints	752,728,773
Compensation	$647,278.40
Cunard, for carrying letters	118,287,735
For carrying prints	731,330,378
Total	849,618,113
Compensation	$184,721.04

—that is, the Cunard Line alone does much more of our fast mail service than does the International, and this for little over one-fourth of its compensation; or, if the greater cost of letter as compared with print service is considered, at probably not to exceed one-fifth of the rate at which our Government pays the International for similar service.

THEY PAINTED HIM BLACK.

A case which seemed to eclipse the Booz hazing incident at West Point came to light in the Lee Avenue Police Court, Williamsburg, yesterday, when Joseph Matt, a saloon keeper at 68 North Eighth Street, was arraigned on complaint of Charles Harris, thirty-eight years old, of 80 Kent Avenue, who charged Matt with disorderly conduct. Harris went into the saloon early Monday morning for a pint of beer, and, according to Harris, five Poles who were in the place seized him and held him a captive for more than an hour, while they painted his body black after taking off his clothes, scratched a cross on his chest with a pin, painted a black skeleton on his brow, and then forced him to kneel down and kiss a black cross.

After this had been done he was told that he was a full-fledged member of the club of which his assailants were members. Harris went to his home and it took him four hours to get the paint from his body. It was only yesterday that Harris was able to leave his home to go to the Lee Avenue Police Court, where he obtained a summons for the saloon keeper, who was at once brought to court. Matt denied participating in the assault. The police are now looking for five Poles whom Harris also accused of taking part in the affair.

Harris was scarcely able to stand in court on account of the scraping he was subjected to in the effort of his friends to get the paint from his body.

"They just slapped it on," said Harris to the Magistrate. They had a large brush and piled it with vigor. Then when they used the pin on my chest to make the cross they punctured my flesh so deeply that I cried with pain. They disregarded my cries and kept right on pricking me. Then, to add to my humiliation, they painted a big skeleton across my temples, gave me a kick, and told me I was a member of their club."

The police of the Bedford Avenue Station expect to have the Poles in custody before morning.

Brill Brothers Association.

The Brill Brothers' Employes' Mutual Benefit Association has planned a professional vaudeville and reception for next Thursday evening, Jan. 31, at the Lexington Opera House, Fifty-eighth Street and Lexington Avenue. The association is desirous of making this the pleasantest gathering it has yet given. Tickets, admitting lady and gentleman, $1, can be purchased at any of Brill Brothers' stores.

VENEZUELAN NAVY HERE

Receives a Belated International Salute from Castle Williams.

It Is the Old Gould Yacht Atalanta Which Has Been Converted Into the Cruiser Restaurader.

The firing of the international salute of twenty-one guns from Castle Williams, on Governors Island, yesterday morning caused every body in hearing distance to wonder for whom the courtesy was intended. There was no foreign man-of-war in port, it was not the anniversary of any great historical event, so far as any one could ascertain, and there was no person of a rank to entitle him to the honor in the neighborhood. As was to be expected, the surmises were many and varied and the most palpable reason was the ascension of King Edward VII. to the throne of England, which event was the cause finally assigned for the salute.

It was not in honor of England's new ruler, though, but as a mark of respect to a little republic with whom this country is at present said to be engaged in a war of words over the privileges of certain Americans to the asphalt claims that the guns boomed forth. But where was the flag of Venezuela? It was nowhere to be seen, and as far as most people know, that country has no navy, and if President Castro was in New York, he had slipped in in a most unexpected manner. "Then why is Venezuela honored?" everybody asked everybody else once more. But Venezuela has a navy, and all of it was in the harbor of New York yesterday, and will be until 9 o'clock this morning, when it expects to sail for La Guayra.

The old Gould yacht Atalanta, which has been transformed into a neat and trim little cruiser, at present constitutes the naval force of the South American country. The Restaurader, which is the fighting name of the Atalanta, went to sea Tuesday afternoon to test her guns, and when returning later in the afternoon her Captain spied the magnificent new battleship Alabama, which is now anchored off Tompkinsville, and decided to give the new fighter a special salute. He accordingly ordered his gunners to fire the international mark of courtesy.

The noise was heard at Fort Wadsworth, and the commander of that station immediately decided that the salute was in his honor, and communicated with the saluting station on Governors Island to watch out for the incoming vessel and return the salute. But it was after saluting hours when the Restaurader passed Castle Williams and the honor was accordingly deferred till morning, when the salute was fired and a polite note to that effect sent to the Venezuelan Consul informing him that the flag of his country had been duly honored.

Capt. Jeremiah Merithew, an American, commands the Restaurader. He was formerly chief officer of the transport McClellan, and with a crew of forty-all told he will sail for South America to-day to turn the converted vessel over to her new owner. Capt. Merithew was seen yesterday afternoon and talked enthusiastically of his ship.

"She is all right," he said, "and there is no doubt of that. You know she's about all the navy that Venezuela's got, and I guess her welcome will be a warm one. As to whether I am going to retain command of her I don't know. I am open to reason, though, and if the Government will accept my terms I'll turn Venezuelan and give them the best I have got in the shop."

When it was suggested that he might receive a very warm reception from the Scorpion, which is now at La Guayra owing to the troubles of the Asphalt Company, the Captain laughingly suggested, "It would be a pretty scrap, though, wouldn't it?"

The Restaurader carries one three-inch gun, four Hotchkiss six-pounders, and two rapid-firing two-pounders.

KEARNS SENATOR FROM UTAH.

Elected on First Ballot—Mr. Rawlins in the Senate Says Mormon Church Rules State Politics.

SALT LAKE, Utah, Jan. 23.—Thomas Kearns was to-day elected United States Senator by the joint Assembly. He received the unanimous support of the Republican members. The Democrats voted for A. W. McCune. Only one ballot was taken, which resulted: Kearns, 37; McCune, 25.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Mr. Rawlins, (Dem., Utah,) who had endeavored vainly to discuss the Senatorial situation in Utah under a question of personal privilege at the opening of the Senate, was recognized, and within the latitude afforded by the Senate rules, read some articles from Salt Lake and Washington newspapers dealing with the Senatorial situation, and discussed them. The article in the Salt Lake newspaper, Republican in political affiliation, was in effect that a deal had been entered into between certain Republicans and the Mormon Church to bring about the election of Thomas Kearns.

The dispatch in the Washington newspaper reported that Mr. Kearns had been nominated by the Republican caucus for the Senatorship. This, Mr. Rawlins said, seemed to convey the idea that a "deal" had been carried out, but he always had been reluctant to believe the charges that had been made, and had ignored them. He thought that a voice ought to go out from Washington admonishing the Legislature of Utah that the eyes of the Senate and of the people were upon it.

Mr. Hale (Rep., Me.,) inquired what the Senate could do.

Mr. Rawlins replied that perhaps the Senate itself could do nothing. He had not asked that any action be taken by the Senate.

Mr. Hale insisted that there would be no end of the controversy invited by Mr. Rawlins. No such question ever had been brought to the Senate's attention before, and he hoped none such ever would be brought into the Senate again.

Mr. Rawlins said he had directed attention to the matter because he wanted the Legislature of Utah and the people of Utah to know they were on trial before the American people.

"I bring up this matter now," said Mr. Rawlins, "in order to call the attention of my people to it, that they may thwart the conspiracy, if such a conspiracy exists. To-morrow it may be too late."

He urged that he was justified in calling attention to this question because, if it were true that such a "deal" had been made, it would cast infamy and disgrace upon his State. He would not sit in the Senate under the charge that the Mormon Church was dominating the politics of his State.

Mr. Hale maintained that it was not fitting or in accord with the traditions of the Senate that it should inquire into Senatorial contests in the various States before an election was effected. Quoting Mr. Rawlins's words, Mr. Hale said there ought to be no "voice from Washington" that might influence the election of a Senator one way or another. The States needed no monitions from Washington as to their conduct of Senatorial elections. He declared that Mr. Rawlins was forcing this matter before the Senate in an endeavor to influence the Senatorial election in Utah, for what reason he did not know.

Mr. Chandler (Rep., N. H.,) dealt briefly with the question which had been raised by Mr. Rawlins, referring facetiously in his remarks to his own defeat ten days ago. He maintained it would be highly unbecoming in the Senate to take the slightest notice of the developments in the Senatorial contest in Utah, and intimated that Mr. Rawlins was merely advertising personal views regarding the contest.

In reply Mr. Rawlins adverted sarcastically to the recent New Hampshire Senatorial election which resulted in the defeat of Mr. Chandler, indicating that Mr. Chandler had been caught in the cogs of a conspiracy similar to that which seemed to be operating in Utah at the present time.

"I have to confirm what the Senator has said about the recent New Hampshire election," said Mr. Chandler, good-naturedly. "It was a horrible result. But during the contest my colleague did not rise in this body and advert to the atrocious character of the proceedings. [Great laughter.]

"If the conditions are as wicked as the Senator paints them in Utah and as I believe they were in New Hampshire, they are very bad, but they are not at this stage a proper subject for consideration by this Senate."

In conclusion Mr. Rawlins, after disclaiming any intention of committing the Senate upon the Utah Senatorial election, said: "If there has been such a bargain as has been charged, I hope to God what has occurred here will defeat it."

No Result in Nebraska.

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 23.—The vote on United States Senators to-day resulted as follows: Allen, (Fusionist,) 54; Thompson, (Fusionist,) 50; Crounse, 7; Currie, 20; Hainer, 6; Hinshaw, 15; Melklejohn, 28; Rosewater, 16; Martin, 7; Harrington, (Fusionist,) 5; scattering, 15. Necessary to elect, 65.

Another Ballot in Delaware.

DOVER, Del., Jan. 23.—The eighth day's joint session of the Legislature failed to elect two United States Senators for Delaware. The vote showed little change and was as follows: For the long term: Kenney, (Dem.,) 20; Addicks, (Union Rep.,) 15; Du Pont, (Rep.,) 8. Scattering, Republicans, 4. Absent, Democrats, 3; Republicans, 1. For the short term: Saulsbury, (Dem.,) 20; Addicks, 15; Richards, (Reg. Rep.,) 11. Scattering, Republicans, 2. Absent, Democrats, 3; Republicans, 1.

Tillman South Carolina's Choice.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Jan. 23.—In joint session to-day the two houses of the Legislature unanimously re-elected Benjamin Ryan Tillman to the United States Senate for the term beginning March 4, 1901. The same thing was done last week, but it was found the action then was one week earlier than the law requires, and in order to avoid complications, the formality was again gone through with.

REPORT ON CITY SCHOOLS

Superintendent William H. Maxwell Makes Many Suggestions.

Would Extend the Course of Study in Manhattan and Bronx to Eight Years.

The annual report of City Superintendent of Schools William H. Maxwell was presented to the Board of Education last night. The report made last year reflected somewhat severely on the management of the Brooklyn schools. As a result the report was not printed for some time after it was made. That there was no such feeling this year was apparent from the fact that when the report was submitted last night 3,000 copies had already been printed under orders from the board.

There was, however, a slight tinge of the old feeling shown. When the President of the board, Miles M. O'Brien, said, "I have before me the second annual report of the Superintendent of Schools," Thaddeus Moriarty at once moved that the report be printed in full in the minutes of the board. Abrahmn Stern objected to this on the ground that it would place an extra expense on the board. Mr. Moriarty vigorously defended his position and said that it had always been customary to print the report of the City Superintendent in the minutes of the board.

"All except last year," cried out one of the Brooklyn members of the board. After a cross-fire for nearly thirty minutes it was decided that the report should not regularly go into the minutes of the board. The report is a most elaborate affair, covering 224 printed pages. The chief recommendations presented by Superintendent Maxwell are as follows:

1. All children under six years of age should be excluded from the grades, and those whose parents desire them to attend public school should be organized in kindergarten classes, in the public school buildings when possible, in rented buildings when necessary.
2. The course of study in Manhattan and the Bronx should be extended to eight years.
3. The methods of teaching the language arts and form study and drawing in Manhattan and the Bronx and in Richmond should be reformed.
4. A more liberal use of text-books is desirable.
5. A larger number of special teachers of music, of manual training, and of physical culture is needed in Manhattan and the Bronx, and also in Richmond.
6. The courses of study in the several boroughs should be harmonized.
7. Greater attention should be given to commercial subjects and to the mechanic arts in our high school system.
8. Trade schools to take the place of the last two years of work in the elementary schools should be established in tenement-house neighborhoods.
9. A uniform test for graduation from all the high schools in the city should be established.
10. The course of study in the Brooklyn Training School for Teachers should be extended immediately to a year and a half and afterward to two years.
11. The Board of Education should employ physicians under its own direction to inspect the sanitary condition of schools, to inquire into the health of pupils, to certify to the condition of teachers who are absent on sick leave, to examine the physical condition of teachers who apply for retirement on pension on the ground of physical disability, and to conduct the physical part of the examinations for teachers' licenses.
12. Classes for defective children should be established at centres in different parts of the city.
13. Branches of the public libraries should be established in schools in congested locations.
14. Individual teaching, along with class teaching, and as a supplement to it, should be encouraged in all grades, and departmental teaching should be established in the last two years of the elementary course, to the ends that each pupil may receive the help he specially needs, and that each teacher may have an opportunity of doing that work which he can do best.
15. A complete reference and pedagogical library, open to all the teachers in the city, should be established in the Hall of the Board of Education.

As to the Davis law, the Superintendent says:

"No measure regarding teachers' salaries, so sweeping and so liberal in its provisions, has ever before passed by any Legislature. Not unnaturally, therefore, it may be inferred that there must have been something extraordinary in the local conditions to call for the enactment of this statute by the Legislature and the Governor—in spite of the veto of the Mayor and the strenuous opposition of the Comptroller, and in opposition to the majority of the members of the School Boards of Manhattan and the Bronx, and of Brooklyn. Such indeed was the case. Stated briefly, the most obvious reason why the teachers had the support of the press and the public and the sympathy and cooperation of the Governor was that the Board of Estimate and Apportionment had failed to provide the funds necessary to carry into full effect a comparatively mild measure regarding teachers' salaries which the Legislature had passed in 1899. This statement is the exact truth, and it was this truth that appealed so strongly to the press, the public, and the legislative authorities."

The report also deals with the fact that there is an excess of supervising officers, and the Superintendent recommends a reduction in the number of Associate Superintendents, which he believes would save $200,000 a year to the city.

SUBWAY FOREMAN ASSAULTED.

Mark Salisbury Holds Union Iron Workers Responsible for His Injuries.

Mark Salisbury, a foreman for the tunnel sub-contracting firm of Holbrook, Cabot & Daly, was assaulted Tuesday. He asserts that his assailants were union iron-workers who have a grievance against the firm over the employment of workmen. Salisbury was walking on Fourth Avenue near one of the subway pits when he was suddenly set upon by four men. The four men then ran away, leaving Salisbury bruised and bleeding on the sidewalk. His eyes were blackened and a part of his nose was missing.

The assault is the third upon Holbrook, Cabot & Daly's men since they began the ironwork in their section two months ago. The trouble, according to the statement yesterday of H. B. Seaman, engineer in charge for Holbrook, Cabot & Daly, was started by Walking Delegate Parks of the Bridgemakers' Union. Mr. Seaman said yesterday that Parks came to the firm and requested that they put members of his union at work to the exclusion of all others.

Holbrook, Cabot & Daly refused to give him a definite answer, but went ahead and employed a gang comprising one-half union men and one-half non-union. When Parks learned of this, Mr. Seaman said, he went to the firm and said to them that they had promised to employ none but union men and pay union wages.

"We did nothing of the kind," Mr. Seaman said, "and resented such interference from the Bridgemakers' Union. Inasmuch as we were and are paying the prevailing rate of wages. But when the union assumes to say whom we shall hire and whom we shall not hire, that is going too far. Parks threatened me, and then called off his men, saying he would make trouble."

The Degnon-McLean Company, whose section adjoins Holbrook, Cabot & Daly's on the south, have had similar trouble lately. About ten days ago their foreman, Moran, was attacked near his home, in Little West Twelfth Street, and left unconscious on the street. He is slowly recovering from his injuries.

DOELGER'S "BURGLARS" GO FREE.

Miller and Brown Discharged, as the Brewer's Son Failed to Appear.

William Miller and William Brown, who were arrested Tuesday night in the office of the Doelger & Sons Brewery, at 234 East Fifty-fourth Street, were arraigned yesterday in the Yorkville Police Court and discharged because Peter Doelger, Jr., who made the complaint, failed to appear against them.

Doelger had told the police that the men were burglars he had discovered robbing the brewery. Miller, who is employed as a clerk in the Clearing House, said that his arrest on Doelger's charge was due to a bad dream.

"Doelger is an old friend of mine," he said, "and I met him last night on Third Avenue with Brown. We had two or three drinks together, and after a while Doelger invited us to go around to the office of the brewery to have another drink.

"He lit the gas, and we sat there for a while drinking. I noticed that Doelger was sleepy, and then I fell asleep myself. When I woke up again I saw that Doelger was standing over me flourishing a machete which he had taken down from the wall. It seems that he had a nightmare when he was asleep and thought that the brewery was being robbed. He believed Brown and myself to be the burglars, and telephoned for the police. The police wouldn't listen to our explanation, and Doelger was too bewildered to make any, so we were locked up all night. I knew that Doelger would never appear against us in court."

WATCHMAN SAVES A LIFE.

Woman Pulled from the River Says a Man Robbed Her and Threw Her In.

Jesse Matchen, a night watchman in the lumber yard at the foot of Eighth Street, on the East River, was sitting in his shanty with his dog "Mac" about 1 o'clock yesterday morning when he heard a woman's scream which seemed to come from the direction of the river. He had heard that cry many times before during a lifetime of watching by the stream, and it roused both him and his dog to instant action. They worked their way along the stringpiece of the pier and about half-way down they met an elderly man.

"What's all this noise about?" asked the stranger. "Is there anybody overboard?"

"I think there's a woman under the dock," said the watchman, casting his eye about for a piece of rope. He went to the end of the pier and called out, but got no answer except the swash of the swiftly flowing water underneath.

The watchman, with the aid of his lantern, found a piece of rope on the pier and dropped one end of it into the river. It floated under the pier. To the other end he attached his lantern, which he lowered until it almost touched the water, and then swung it back and forth. Pretty soon he felt a feeble jerk on the end of his line and pulled in hand over hand until the form of a woman appeared clinging desperately to the life line. She had nothing on but a wrapper and was suffering terribly from the icy water, but she had not lost her nerve and aided the rescuer in every way in getting her out.

Then she and the watchman walked to the Union Market Police Station, where, through an interpreter, she said she was Annie Shafra, thirty-five years old, a Hungarian servant; and had arrived on Tuesday from Pennsylvania, where she had worked in a miners' boarding house. She said she had come to this city with one of the miners, an Austrian, and that she had brought all her savings, $200. Her companion, she said, had induced her to go down to the pier, and when they got there he took her money from her and threw her overboard. She could give but a meagre description of the man.

An ambulance, which had been summoned, arrived before the police succeeded in learning from the woman where she and the man had been living since coming to the city or why she went to the pier on so cold a night with nothing on but a thin wrapper.

DEWEY FAILS TO LAND.

Applied for a Post Office Job, but, Being Only a Yellow Dog, He Finds Nothing but Trouble.

A yellow dog with a perpetual motion tail and a determined mien, wearing a tag about his neck with his name—Dewey—marked on it, applied for a position at the General Post Office about a week ago, arriving there at the early hour of 2 o'clock in the morning.

Nobody noticed him for a time, and, there not seeming to be anything for him to do, the newcomer proceeded to regale himself with a dinner of meat scraps which had been left for one of the big cats employed in the rat-catching department. The cat resented it, and the attention of the mail clerks was first attracted by the cat and Dewey doing some fancy jumping and vaulting over the tables and mail sacks with Dewey acting as the pursued. The newcomer was finally ejected, but soon came back again. This time he contented himself with a light lunch of a number of pasteboard boxes and a couple of postal cards, topping off with a small pot of paste which had been left convenient to him.

He hung around for a day or two, and, although he seemed willing to do anything, there was no opening for him, and it was ordered that he be put out. He was shoved out, kicked out, thrown out through windows, and ejected in many other ways, but he always showed up again ready for any odd job that might turn up in his line. He seemed to think that he was cut out for the postal service. He developed a remarkable appetite for discarded mail matter, and now and then made a meal of a clerk's apron. Always thin, he grew thinner on this light diet, but he stuck to the Post Office.

One of the clerks took Dewey to the Battery yesterday thinking he wouldn't come back, but Dewey showed up all right last evening ready for work. Accidentally he fell against a can of canceling ink, so his color is black and yellow now, but he seems satisfied. It is feared that his fondness for paste boxes may develope into a taste for high-class mail matter, and the authorities are thinking of sending for the dog catcher and having Dewey arrested for vagrancy.

CRAZED COOK RUNS AMUCK.

He Assaults a Schooner's Crew and Fires Six Bullets Into His Head.

With six bullet holes in his head, A. H. Reponali, the West Indian cook of the schooner Martha S. Bement, lies at the point of death in the Hudson Street Hospital. The cause of all the wounds was an attempt to end his life yesterday morning on board his ship, which was bound in from Brunswick, laden with lumber. About 9 o'clock, while the crew was putting the vessel in shipshape, the cook suddenly went insane and dashing among them began to assault them.

The crew seized capstan bars and succeeded in chasing the lunatic into the galley and finally into a berth, where he barricaded himself and dared them to attack him. Being unable to capture him, and not knowing what he would do next, Mate Jackson reversed the schooner's ensign as a signal of distress. The revenue cutter Hudson answered the appeal.

When the Hudson reached the side of the schooner the crazed cook, as soon as he saw her, opened fire on the officers and crew. Pilot Bradley then decided that it was a case for the police rather than for the Customs Service, and put about and steamed back to Pier A, where he notified the harbor police of the trouble. Sergt. Jesser with a detail of extra men went to the schooner, where, after a desperate struggle, Reponali was finally overpowered, but not until he had fired six shots into his head.

At the hospital it was said last night that Reponali was still living, but that he would probably die before morning. Reponall lived in Brooklyn, and according to his Captain was an exemplary hand.

ELECTRIC REDUCTION OF ORES.

New Process Under Consideration by Guggenheim's Manager.

Special to The New York Times.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 23.—Charles E. Finney, manager of M. Guggenheim's Sons of New York, the smelters; Charles S. Gleed of Topeka, a Director of the Santa Fé Railroad, and Lucien V. Blake, head of the electrical department of the University of Kansas, met at the Hotel Baltimore to-day to discuss a proposition that may produce most important results to smelters and owners of mines of precious metals.

Prof. Blake has been experimenting for some time in his laboratory on an electrical process by which metal may be obtained from ore cheaper than by any process now in use. The purpose of the method was particularly to get a cheap process for separating the metal from a low grade of ore, and in this way increasing the value of low-grade ore. If the proposition discussed to-day is carried out the test will be made in a Denver mill to be furnished by Mr. Gleed, while Mr. Finney supplies the ore.

The laboratory tests already made have gone far enough to show the possibility, if not the probability, of the use of electricity in the separation of metals from their ores. This method, if it proves successful, will be much cheaper than the methods now in use in smelters.

Verdict of $12,000 Against a Road.

Miss Florence Freestone, twenty years old, of 2,410 Pacific Street, Brooklyn, yesterday obtained a verdict of $12,000 in the Supreme Court, that borough, in a suit brought by her against the Third Avenue Railroad Company of Manhattan to recover $35,000 for personal injuries. Miss Freestone was run down by a car of the defendant company in March last on the Bowery and her left leg was injured so that she lost the use of the member. A motion for a new trial in the case was denied by Justice Gaynor.

Against Railway Ticket Manipulators.

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—A National Protective Bureau is to be formed by the railroads of the United States with the object of quickly detecting manipulations of tickets and securing evidence for the punishment of those guilty of forging them. A meeting of the Chairmen of the seven traffic organizations of the country has been called for Feb. 6 in Chicago to formulate some definite plan for a detective bureau and to arrange for putting the same in operation.

W. J. BRYAN'S PAPER APPEARS.

He Explains Why He Chose the Name The Commoner—To Represent the Common People.

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 23.—The first number of The Commoner, the weekly paper published by William J. Bryan, was issued this afternoon. It is a neat-appearing sheet, typographically. The following is the salutatory:

"Webster defines a commoner as 'one of the common people.' The name has been selected for this paper because The Commoner will endeavor to aid the common people in the protection of their rights, the advancement of their interests, and the realization of their aspirations.

"It is not necessary to apologize for the use of a term which distinguishes the great body of the population from the comparatively few, who, for one reason or another, withdraw themselves from sympathetic connection with their fellows. Among the Greeks 'Hoi polloi' was used to describe the many, while among the Romans the word 'plebs' was employed for the same purpose. These appellations, like 'the common people,' have been assumed with pride by those to whom they were applied, while they have been used as terms of reproach by those who counted themselves among the aristocratic classes. Within recent years there has been a growing tendency in some quarters to denounce as demagogic any reference to, or praise of, the common people.

"One editor in a late issue of his paper takes exception to the phrase, and says:

"This expression is an ill-chosen one and should have no lougment in the vocabulary of an American patriot and statesman. If we sought its origin, we would look for it in that specious demagogy which has evolved the professional politician, arrayed country against town—the farmer and his sons and daughters against the business and professional men and their sons and daughters—capital against labor, and built up against neighbors the impregnable barriers of party hatred.

"This quotation is reproduced because it fairly represents the views of those who criticise the expression. It has, however, an eminently respectable origin. In the same chapter in which Christ condensed man's duty to His fellows into the commandment, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself;' in the same chapter in which He denounced those who devour widows' houses and for a pretense make long prayers—in this same chapter it is said of Him: 'The common people heard Him gladly.' No higher compliment was ever paid to any class.

"The term, the common people, is properly used to describe the large majority of the people—those who earn their living and give to society a fair return for the benefits bestowed by society—those who in their daily lives recognize the ties which bind together the mass of the people who have a common lot and a common hope. Sometimes they are called 'the middle classes,' because paupers and criminals are excluded on the one hand, while on the other hand some exclude themselves because of wealth or position or pride of birth. The common people form the industrious, intelligent, and patriotic element of our population; they produce the Nation's wealth in time of peace and fight the Nation's battles in time of war. They are self-reliant and independent; they ask of the Government nothing but justice, and will not be satisfied with less. They are not seeking to get their hands into other people's pockets, but are content if they can keep other people's hands out of their pockets.

"The common people do not constitute an exclusive society—they are not of the four hundred; any one can become a member if he is willing to contribute by brain or muscle to the Nation's strength and greatness. Only those are barred—and they are barred by their own choice—who imagine themselves made of a superior kind of clay and who deny the equality of all before the law.

"A rich man, who has honestly acquired his wealth and who is not afraid to intrust its care to laws made by his fellows, can count himself among the common people, while a poor man is not really not one of them if he fawns before a plutocrat and has no higher ambition than to be a courtier or a sycophant.

"The Commoner will be satisfied if, by fidelity to the common people, it proves its right to the name which it has chosen."

19-YEAR-OLD BOY A SUICIDE.

Burmeister Announced that a Girl Friend Also Agreed to Die, but This Proved False.

Just why Harry Burmeister, a nineteen-year-old lad, should tire of life practically at the beginning of it, is a puzzle to all who knew him, but he evidently did, for he ended it some time during Tuesday night by hanging himself to a rafter in the shop of his employers, Wirth & Fyfe, gilders, at 4 East Thirty-first Street, where he was learning the trade. A strange part of the tragedy is that on Tuesday afternoon he mentioned to his incredulous shopmates that he would be dead before morning, and that he had agreed with Katie Strauss, a fifteen-year-old schoolgirl, of 537 East Eighty-second Street, to commit suicide. Those who knew the lad paid not the slightest attention to these remarks at the time, always having known him to be of the brightest and most cheerful disposition.

Young Burmeister carried the keys to the shop, and it was his duty to lock up the place at night and open it in the morning. The other employes remembered having left him there Tuesday night when they went home. When they reached the building yesterday morning they could not get in, and had to wait until one of the members of the firm arrived. Burmeister was found hanging by a rope to one of the rafters. On a card in his pocket was found the following, written to his father:

"Don't consider my action an unjust one. Good-bye forever, father. This is my last night. Harry."

The Burmeister boy lived with his father and grandmother at 535 East Eighty-second Street. Neither can account for the suicide. They waited up for him nearly all Tuesday night, as it was the first time he had ever remained away from home.

At the home of the Strausses it was said that the idea of Katie and the lad agreeing to commit suicide was absurd. Katie herself said that she had only met Burmeister twice, and that he had never mentioned suicide to her.

PRESSED STEEL CAR COMPANY.

Directors Declare a Quarterly Dividend of 1¾ Per Cent. on Preferred Stock.

There were a number of meetings in Jersey City and at 71 Broadway yesterday of the stockholders and Directors of the Pressed Steel Car Company, and great efforts were made to shroud the proceedings with mystery, or to at least issue only such statements as suited the officers, who refused in any instance to explain the statements they gave out.

At the stockholders' meeting in Jersey City there were many complaints when it was announced that no financial statement of the company's affairs was to be issued. Mr. Hoffstot, the Chairman of the meeting, said considerable about the complexity of the New Jersey laws, and finally promised the stockholders that there would be a financial statement ready for them at the next annual meeting a year hence.

If there was anything done concerning the alleged issue of $5,000,000 of bonds, Mr. Hoffstot refused to make it public. The official declaration was made to the stockholders, however, that the Directors had the power to mortgage the property of the company without the stockholders' consent. The earnings for 1900 show a decrease over the figures of the preceding year of more than $200,000.

The Directors met late in the afternoon and when the meeting was over hurriedly dispersed. To the reporters the following statement waa given:

A quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on the preferred stock and 1 per cent. on the common stock was declared. The report of President Schoen, stating that the company sold $22,540,115.68 of equipment during 1900, making a net profit of $2,075,180.99, was read, and his report and that of the Treasurer were ordered to be printed and mailed to the stockholders of record as soon as verified by the Audit Company of New York, who now have the examination of the company's accounts in hand.

Hebrew Orphan Asylum Ball.

The annual ball in aid of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum Society of Brooklyn took place last night at the Brooklyn Academy of Music on Montague Street. As usual with this event, the attendance was large. The decorations of the ballroom were artistic. Preceding the dancing there was a concert by the boys' band of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum. Benjamin Croner was Chairman of the Ball Committee, A. Abraham of the Entertainment Committee, Congressman Mitchell May of the Floor Committee, Frank Pentlarge of the Reception Committee, and L. Firuski of the Press Committee.

MANUFACTURERS' DINNER

Ex-Gov. Black a Guest at Their Annual Banquet.

Corruption in New York, He Says, Is Bound to Affect the State at Large —Job Hedges on Statesmen.

Three hundred or more members and guests of the Manufacturers' Association of New York assembled last night at the eighth annual banquet, which was given at the Union League Club in Brooklyn.

Senator Mark Hanna was down on the programme as the first speaker of the evening to respond to the toast, "The American Merchant Marine," but did not appear. Ludwig Nissen, President of the association, said that he was absent because his speech on the merchant marine would be of more use in Washington in connection with the Subsidy bill than in Brooklyn, and read the following telegram from Mr. Hanna:

The situation here makes it utterly impossible for me to leave this week. Am very sorry to miss your banquet, but cannot prevent it now.

Ex-Gov. Frank S. Black, who was the first speaker, in responding to the toast, "New York State, Its Past, Present, and Future," said that, in spite of the great prosperity of the State, it had many evils which must be overcome.

"These evils are confined mainly to the city," he said. "It is only a part of the State, but it is so large a part that a healthy State with a corrupted city is as impossible as a healthy body with a poisoned stomach.

"The recent revelations in the City of New York indicate a condition of moral atmosphere which cannot continue if the public is to retain its health. It indicates the saddest of all forms of slavery, that which involves personal degradation. Self-respect cannot exist where such a condition prevails."

In concluding, Mr. Black spoke of the death of Queen Victoria.

"The rivalries of the two great English-speaking nations," he said, "could have no higher aim than to foster those qualities of sobriety, toleration, and virtue as exemplified by that gracious sovereign whose long reign has enhanced their common glory and whose serene departure has invoked their common sympathy."

Ludwig Nissen in his speech referred to corruption in large cities.

"There is one stain," he said, "which we have been unable to blot out. That stain is the abominable character of the governments of our large municipalities. Practically every large city of this country is or has a little hell of its own from which to supply itself with the most devilish elements for the purpose of carrying on its home government.

"The blame for this lies with the business men, who are so blind to the affairs of the community that they stick to their own little private affairs like leeches, while they allow the scum of society to attend for them to the affairs of the Government."

Job Hedges, who made the last speech, said that he differed with ex-Speaker Reed's definition of a statesman as a politician who had been dead for six months, and added smilingly that in his opinion people in general were divided into two classes—statesmen who knew just what was wrong but never did anything to remedy matters, and politicians who did not know so much, but who did what they could to improve affairs. He exhorted his hearers to be of the second class.

Assemblyman John Hill Morgan of Brooklyn, who was not on the list of speakers, was called on, and made a speech of five minutes' duration on the bills he had introduced in regard to the water supply of New York and Brooklyn.

Among the other speakers were ex-Commissioner of Immigration John B. Weber, now Commissioner General of the Pan-American Exposition, who delivered a eulogy on the exposition; Dr. Truman J. Backus, President of the Packer Institute of Brooklyn, and Assistant District Attorney Martin W. Littleton of Brooklyn.

MRS. NATION AT WORK AGAIN.

Destroys a Saloon at Enterprise—State W. C. T. U. Not in Sympathy with Her Procedure.

ENTERPRISE, Kan., Jan. 23.—Mrs. Carrie Nation began her crusade here to-day, demolishing a saloon and delivering a street lecture. She arrived on an early morning train from Wichita and went at once to the home of C. B. Hoffman, a well-known Populist leader. A temperance meeting was held at the house at 2 o'clock, attended by a dozen or more women. After perfecting her plans, Mrs. Nation secured a hatchet and started for the business part of the town, accompanied by Mrs. Hoffman, Mrs. L. A. Case, a leading Women's Christian Temperance Union worker, and another woman, who was veiled. The two saloonkeepers had locked their places and were in hiding.

Mrs. Nation went to Schilling's place and attacked the glass doors. She smashed the glass out of the frames and stepped into the deserted place, leaving the others outside. She smashed the big mirror, chopped gashes in the bar, and broke all the glasses and bottles on the shelves. Then she went to the refrigerator and commenced bringing out cases of beer. She handled them easily, and, lifting them high into the air, dropped them on the floor, cracking each bottle left solid after the fall. The floor was soon covered with a mixture of drinkables. She kept up the work until Marshal W. R. Benham finally entered and, taking her by the sleeve, told he she must get out.

"What are you," she demanded, "but a murderer and a perjurer in protecting this unholy traffic? Either let me alone or take off your star." But she followed him out, and, calling her companions, proceeded to give the Marshal a blistering arraignment in the presence of the crowd. She then started for the other saloon, but it was well barricaded and offered no plate-glass for her to attack.

The Marshal refused to allow her to chop down the doors and she finally went home. She said she had only begun her work, and expects to clean out many more places. It is reported that she will move on Abilene to-morrow and the Abilene saloonkeepers are preparing for her coming.

ABILENE, Kan., Jan. 23.—The news that Mrs. Nation was within six miles on her saloon-smashing crusade and had demolished one at Enterprise caused a state of panic at the Abilene dispensaries, and all sorts of plans were discussed for handling her if she comes here. One of the saloons has prepared a heavy oak barricade to fit the stairway and expects to slide it into place when the scouts announce the approach of Mrs. Nation. There is no doubt that she will be here to-morrow.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 23.—Mrs. A. M. Hutchinson, State President of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, says that organization is not in favor of the tactics employed by Mrs. Nation in her warfare against the saloons: "Loyalty to Mrs. Nation demands that we procure for her a fair trial; but we do not favor her methods. All our interest in her raid is to find out whether the property of the saloonkeepers can be protected under the law. It is the general opinion that no such thing as justice can be obtained in Wichita courts on the temperance question."

CLERK PORGES IS REMOVED.

F. J. Martin, Appointed During Mayor Strong's Term, Is Reinstated.

A Tammany official lost his position yesterday and a man appointed under the administration of Mayor Strong was restored to his official place, and will receive a large sum in back salary for which he performed no duty.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court ordered this shift. The man to lose his place is Max Porges, a son of Alderman Porges, who waa appointed Reading Clerk of the Board of Aldermen at $1,800 a year. Frank J. Martin was removed to make room for the Tammany man. On appeal to the courts the claims set up by Mr. Martin to his eighteen-hundred-dollar place were sustained and Corporation Counsel Whalen directed City Clerk Scully yesterday to reinstate Martin.

Will Educate a Student at Yale.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 23.—The Philadelphia Alumni Association of Yale has decided to give $500 a year for four years for the education at the university of a student of high character and morals who passes the best competitive examination for entrance to Yale. As a condition of receiving this assistance, the student must be one who could not otherwise attend the university.

CAPTAIN HERLIHY'S TRIAL.

Several Witnesses from the Uniformed Force Appear in His Defense.

When the trial of Capt. John D. Herlihy was resumed at Police Headquarters yesterday only two of the Commissioners—President York and Mr. Abell—were present. Mr. Hess came in about an hour later.

Capt. John F. Flood testified to the visit of the Rev. Mr. Paddock to Inspector Cross's office on the morning of April 27. He related that after Mr. Paddock said that Capt. Herlihy had called him a liar the Inspector asked him if that was the exact word used.

"Mr. Paddock then said that Capt. Herlihy had said he was 'untruthful,' and that is equivalent to calling me a liar.'"

"Now, Captain," said Mr. Grant, "it is charged that at that interview Capt. Herlihy used threatening and insulting language. Did any such thing take place?"

"No."

Mr. Olcott asked what was done with the report, and Capt. Flood said that it had been put in the vault.

"Isn't it customary to send such reports to the board?" asked Mr. York.

"Yes, Sir. I do not know why this was not sent."

"Mr. Paddock was recognized in the department as a nuisance, wasn't he?" asked Mr. Olcott.

"I never heard anything of the sort."

Mr. Grant then questioned the witness and brought out the fact that it was not customary to send reports to the board when there were no complaints made.

Sergt. Max J. Steinbruck, after relating in detail what had taken place in Inspector Cross's office, admitted that from where he sat he could not see Mr. Paddock.

"You have said several times," remarked Mr. Olcott, "that 'Mr. Paddock said, with a smile.' How did you know he smiled?"

"Oh, I could tell by the intonation."

"Oh, then you know the intonation that goes with a smile, eh?"

"Of course," interrupted Mr. Grant. "Why, he'd know you were smiling now if he didn't see your face."

"No one could listen to the witness's testimony without smiling," said Mr. Olcott.

At this point everybody smiled—audibly. Capt. Herlihy was next called. Mr. Grant said that he called the Captain only in regard to the second charge.

Mr. Olcott insisted that he would refuse to cross-examine the witness until Mr. Grant had exhausted his examination. Mr. York agreed that his point was well taken.

Finally, it was decided to postpone further hearing until to-day at 2 o'clock.

THE COMMITTEE OF FIFTEEN.

Conference of Charitable and Reform Organizations to Consider Co-operation.

Representatives of various philanthropic, reform, and charitable organizations attended the weekly meeting of the Committee of Fifteen at the Charities Building yesterday afternoon and conferred with them on the subject of co-operation. The session was a long one, continuing until after nightfall, and before the door closed William H. Baldwin, Jr., the Chairman, said he expected important matters would be made public at the close, but before the end Prof. Edwin R. A. Seligman of the Sub-Committee on Investigation came out and dismissed the waiting reporters, saying that nothing could be revealed of what had occurred that would not be useful to the enemy.

He declined even to give a list of the societies represented before the committee, saying that to do so might cause jealousy among others who had not been invited to come before the committee, but whose presence might be desired later.

Robert Grier Monroe attended this meeting of the committee for the first time as its counsel, and Prof. Seligman admitted that a considerable amount of evidence already secured by the committee's detectives had been considered.

COMMISSIONER ABELL'S DINNER.

He Entertains His Friends of the Police Department.

Police Commissioner Henry E. Abell gave his much talked of dinner to the officials of the Police Department at his home, 434 Fourth Street, Brooklyn, last night. There was a large attendance, the house being well filled, but the gathering seemed to be composed entirely of those who have been on Mr. Abell's side in the recent reported clash at Police Headquarters between him and the other Commissioners. He stated, however, that no distinction had been made when the invitations were sent out.

Among those present were Chief Devery and Deputy Chief Cortright of Manhattan, Deputy Chief Clayton of Queens, several Inspectors from Manhattan and Brooklyn, and about thirty Captains. Among those who were not there were President Bernard J. York of the Police Board, all the other Commissioners, and Deputy Chief Patrick H. McLaughlin of Brooklyn. Commissioner Abell gave a similar dinner at his home last year, and while the festivities were at their height last night he said that this, like the other, was purely a social assemblage.

Dead Cat in the Street.

For three days, ending at noon yesterday, the dead body of a cat has been lying in the roadway alongside the crossing at the northeast corner of Seventy-third Street and Columbus Avenue.

PRIZE BIRDS NOW ON VIEW

Domestic and Fancy Poultry in Madison Square Garden.

RARE DISPLAY OF PHEASANTS

Many Blue-Blooded Cats Are Also Shown—Barnyard Music Resounds All Day Long.

Madison Square Garden was transformed yesterday into a mammoth barnyard, and from early morning until late at night the music of song birds was peculiarly mingled with the more guttural and often shrill notes of the turkey gobblers, roosters, bantams, ducks, geese; and even the two big black Australian swans occasionally took a hand in contributing to the loud chorus of the day. There was never a silent moment, and the twelfth exhibition of the New York Poultry, Pigeon, and Pet Stock Association, which will be continued through Saturday night, was opened under most successful auspices.

In many classes the entries are much larger than ever before, and at a conservative estimate 5,000 birds, including caged birds, as canaries and parrots, and domestic and fancy fowls, are displayed in hundreds of wire cages for the edification of the curious and the instruction of the poultry raiser, either for profit or fun.

The general poultry classes are so numerous that the pigeons have been placed in one end of the gallery, and the proud little bantams occupy the opposite side. Thirty or forty cats, some of whom trace their pedigrees to Persia, India, and other distant lands, have a little space in the gallery all to themselves, to the left of the main entrance. Miss L. C. Moeran and Mrs. Mary B. Thurston are the chief cat exhibitors. The latter has six, all prize winners, and fresh from blue ribbon victories this month at the Boston and Rochester shows.

One of the finest was recently brought to this country by Mrs. Thurston from the home of English royalty. It is a magnificent Persian, smoke-colored, long-haired cat, known as "Sassel," and for several years belonged to Lady Marcus Beresford, sister-in-law of the late Lord Beresford.

Belgian hares and guinea pigs are in the restaurant room, and there is also a complete show of incubators, brooders, and other appliances for raising and caring for poultry, beginning from the very moment the egg is laid.

The large variety of chickens, ducks, geese, and turkeys that occupy the greater part of the main floor will be a revelation to the city resident who spends about one month or less in the country each year. The ordinary scratching hen, which lays most of the eggs on the farm, will be found developed almost to an aristocratic standpoint. Many of these fowls, with their rich and well-combed plumage, actually carry themselves as though they were lords of their feathered tribe, and more than one proudly strutting rooster acted as though he fully understood the meaning of the blue ribbon on his cage.

The judges got to work early, and before evening hundreds of cages were adorned with blue, red, and yellow ribbons. The classes finished were the canaries, pigeons, black, white, buff, and partridge cochins, golden and silver Wyandottes, white Plymouth Rocks, and Brahmas. Harry W. Graves of Higgarum, Conn., won all the first prizes, four in white Plymouth Rocks; George W. Mitchell of Bristol, Conn., won nearly everything in the partridge Cochins, while the seventeen special prizes offered for canaries by the Ornithological Society were about equally divided between James McCartney, W. W. Hill, Dr. F. F. Howser, Jules Ferond, John Vogel, Albert Couzen, and M. McEneaney.

Two of the most attractive fancy displays occupy a wide section of the centre floor space. They include about twenty-five rare varieties of pheasants, shown by Homer Davenport, the artist and cartoonist, and some rare swans and ducks exhibited by G. D. Tilley of Darien, Conn. Oldtimers at the Poultry Show say that this collection of pheasants is the finest ever shown. Mr. Davenport won a special prize for his display last year, but he has increased his varieties this season. A splendid Java peacock, with hens, is among the new ones. The peacock is one of the handsomest birds in the show. Its plumage is brilliantly rich, and its magnificent tail, with perfectly colored feathers, is nearly four feet long. An unusually large cage is needed to show this native of Java jungles to advantage, and a beautiful crown of tufted feathers adorns its proud head.

In length of tail, there is only one pheasant that can rival the Java peacock. That is a Reeves pheasant, whose mottled tail of yellow, brown, and white feathers is fully one yard long. Some of these pheasants possess nearly all the colors of the rainbow in their plumage. One of the richest is a Himalayan bird, whose neck is the color of golden bronze and sparkles like the changing colors of a chameleon with every turn of its graceful head.

Mr. Tilley shows four swans, two of them black Australian swans, the first that have been seen in a poultry show for ten years. The last ones exhibited were purchased by the late Judge Hilton and taken to his country place in Saratoga. There are also two pure white swans, one being from Egypt. His collection of wood and mandarin ducks is the prettiest exhibit of gaudily plumaged ducks in the show.

In the turkey classes there are some tremendous gobblers, but most conspicuous among them is a cage of five Holland white turkeys. They are rarely seen in this country, and the blue ribbon emblem of first prize now adorns their cage. These white turkeys are owned by A. J. Kreutter of Fayette, N. Y.

The Garden is handsomely decorated with flags and bunting, and the birds are conveniently arranged for inspection. Unlike dog shows, there is no band, for the constant din of cackling and crowing made by the fowls would put a good-sized orchestra out of tune every three minutes.

WORK ON THE BOSTON YACHT.

Bronze Shell for the Keel Will Be Cast To-day.

BOSTON, Jan. 23.—The pattern of the bronze shell of the Lawson yacht has been forwarded to the East Braintree foundry, and to-morrow the shell which will hold the bulb lead keel will be cast. The patterns for the stem and stern pieces are not yet completed at Lawley's, but will be sent to East Braintree as soon as made.

Work was begun to-day on a hollow gaff for the boat. It is being made from a stick of Oregon pine about eighty-five feet long, but when completed will be a little more than ten feet shorter. It is now being shaped to a rough resemblance of its finished condition and will be split and hollowed after the same method as obtains in the case of the boom. The stick for the mast was hauled up into the west shop at high tide to-day and was left on the floor to dry.

At the tip it is thirty inches in diameter. In the rough it cost about $600. The workmen were busy to-day on the floor-plate, which is to be used to hold the frames amidships together when each pair is set up. It is first punched for the rivets, and then dished, and slots cut, into which the flanges of the bulbed steel angles will fit. No frames are bent, as the scrive board is still at Lawley's. The bottom is twenty-eight feet long and twenty-five feet wide, in three sections, and will be transported in a padded van.

Sailmaker Wilson has completed three jibtopsails and a trysail, and is at work cutting a balloon jib. The sails will be ready long before the launching. Designer Crowninshield, C. E. Hodges, and Mr. Lawson had a long conference to-day, but would make no statement after it was finished.

Freshmen Must Support Themselves.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 23.—There was quite a bomb thrown into the University of Pennsylvania rowing camp to-day when it was announced that hereafter freshmen crews should be to a great extent self-supporting. The Rowing Committee decided that as this is the practice at other colleges, there is no reason why Pennsylvania should be an exception. Harvard's crew is entirely self-supporting, the freshmen even purchasing their own boat. This year the first-year men at Pennsylvania will be expected to pay for their suits, traveling expenses, and board while training at Poughkeepsie. This means an obligation of almost $500, and it does not seem unreasonable to any of the authorities that such an amount should be asked of a class of almost 150. A subscription of $3.50 per man would solve the question. Different members of the class, when seen to-day, did not think there would be any difficulty in raising the money. This year Pennsylvania has one of the strongest freshmen classes in her history, and it was for this reason that the plan was proposed.

CURLERS AT VAN CORTLANDT.

Local Club Wins the Mitchell Championship Medal for the Second Time.

Curlers practically took possession of Van Cortlandt Park Lake yesterday to witness the competition of one of their most important contests. This was the championship Mitchell Gold Medal match, which is emblematic of the club championship of the Grand National Curling Club of America. The medal, which is the finest prize in the entire series of curling trophies played for in America, was presented to the National curling body in 1884 by the late Senator Mitchell of Wisconsin, who, in his day, was one of the most devoted admirers of the famous Scotch Winter sport.

The medal has been played for fourteen times, occasionally skipping a year on account of the weather or other causes leading to forced postponements. This was the case last year, when it was not played for, but in 1899, the date of its last previous competition, the trophy was won by the rink of the Van Cortlandt Club. It was that club's first victory, and yesterday it had the honor of capturing the coveted prize again.

Four clubs entered for the contest, each playing two rinks, Van Cortlandt, Yonkers, Manhattan, and St. Andrew's were the rivals. The Van Cortlandt and Yonkers factions met in the first contest, and the former had almost a walk-over, rolling up the high score of 42 points to 17. Pratt and George Frazier were the skips for the Van Cortlandt rinks, and their skillful swing of the curling stones contributed in a marked degree to the second championship victory of their club. Frazier is one of the most noted curlers in America, and he is one of the oldest players who still keeps active in the game. He is about sixty-eight years old, and has won prizes innumerable; yet his swing is as strong and accurate as it was in his more youthful days.

The winners only played three men on a rink instead of four, one of the men in that case being compelled to play two sets of stones. In the final match Van Cortlandt beat the Manhattans by 36 to 27. President Pratt's team scored an easy victory over D. G. Morrison's team, but to the surprise of the experts Frazier's team was beaten by two points by David Ballantyne's rink, but the advantage was not sufficient to gain a victory. The players in the respective matches and scores are:

Referee—William Hogg. President Conley and Secretary David Hinks were Judges.

On Saturday the Gordon medal, emblematic of the rink championship, will be played for.

SHOOTING ON ARMORY RANGES.

Company C Teams Assume the Lead in Seventh Regiment Trophy Matches.

In the annual competition for the Edward Kemp and the Col. Emmons Clark trophies of the Seventh Regiment, which was continued on the armory ranges last night, the teams of Company C made the highest scores yet made in the competition. For the Kemp trophy for teams of twenty-five men the Third Company marksmen scored a total of 1,084, which is 15 points better than the previous best score of the series of 1,069, made by Company G, and is within 5 points of Company B's winning score of 1,089 last year.

For the Clark trophy for teams of fifty men, Company C scored a total of 2,081, which is 68 points better than the previous leading score of 2,013, made by Company G, and is 45 points better than Company B's winning score of 2,036 last year. But two more companies have yet to shoot, Company B, the present holder of the trophy, to-night, and Company A to-morrow night, and consequently Company C's chances of winning the trophy appear very bright. The scores follow:

Golf on Florida Links.

Special to The New York Times.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Jan. 23.—Sunshine was welcomed by the golfers to-day after a day of rain, and the links were well patronized. A subscription tournament, to last three days, has been opened and there are now twenty entries. Play will begin in the morning for three prizes, first a subscription cup, second a consolation cup, and third a "lobster" cup. Handicaps and mixed foursomes will conclude the programme Saturday.

To-day, Devereaux Emmet of the Garden City Club played the best ball of Sidney Carpenter of the Philadelphia Country Club and A. W. Black of Lakewood. Devereaux won, four up. The best work of the day was done by Charles B. Cory of the Oakley Club, when he went around in a match with G. E. Barnard of the same club. He lowered the amateur record for 18 holes one point. His score was:

LIVELY SPEEDWAY SPORT

Amateur Drivers Take Advantage of the Moderate Weather.

TROTTERS AND PACERS BRUSH

Edward W. Won a Three-Cornered Tilt with Barney Kirkland and Kirschner—George Wallace in Form.

The Speedway brigade turned out in full force yesterday afternoon, and for a couple of hours before sunset made things very lively on the macadam roadway north of Dyckman Street, which was in excellent condition and seemed to suit the trotters to perfection. Among the first to reach the drive was A. B. Gwathmey, behind his favorite pair, Tiverton, 2.23¼, and Salient. There was no other team out that was a match for the pair, and they were started with single horses, making an unusually good showing with some and distancing others. George Coleman, driving the handsome bay pacer Edward W., 2:21¼, was in about every brush that was started, and when Edward W. was turned homeward he had almost a clean record to his credit.

About the fastest and most interesting three-cornered brush of the day was between the pacer Barney Kirkland, 2:23¾, driven by M. Fluckinger; Edward W., 2:21¼, and Kirschner, driven by J. L. Dodge. All three horses got away on fairly even terms, and at the first quarter a blanket would have covered them, so evenly were they pacing. A touch of the whip encouraged Barney Kirkland to make a spurt and gain a half length. Edward W., however, was equal to the occasion, and the spurt that he made carried him so far ahead that Barney Kirkland was unable to recover the lost ground, Edward W. winning by a short length. In a second heat between the three horses Edward W. won by a narrow margin after a hard race with Kirschner, who took second place, Barney Kirkland breaking near the finishing post.

The old Speedway favorite, Commodore Porter, 2:13, driven by Hugh Reilly, was in fine condition, but did not seem to have quite enough speed for Edward W., with whom he was started in several brushes.

The black trotter Mahlon, 2:14¾, one of the fastest animals that frequents the Speedway, did some fast work with her owner, Charles Avilly, handling the reins. One of the most exciting of her encounters was with the trotter Wildwood, 2:22½, driven by John Quinn, who said that he had no chance of winning, but was willing to try a brush for the sake of a little sport. On the start Wildwood got away first and gained a lead of several lengths, which he held until Mahlon reached his gait, when the black trotter closed the gap and passed her opponent like a shot, winning by a couple of lengths.

Among the many who watched the sport was Louis Kahn, driving the pacer George Wallace, 2:17¾; A. B. Newman, driving a team of bay pacers; David Goodman, driving Freeland, 2:17¾, who also won a brush from Commodore Porter, 2:13; George W. Grote, behind the chestnut gelding Mike, 2:27¾, and C. B. Hartman, driving the brown trotter Mattie.

Trotting Mares Change Hands.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Jan. 23.—John E. Madden, proprietor of Hamburg Place, has sold to R. A. Fairbairn of West Fairfield, N.J., the two highly bred trotting mares Alma Wilton and Sierra Madre for $1,000 each. Alma Wilton is a six-year-old brown mare by Wilton, 2:19¼, dam Alma Mater, the dam of a long list of fast ones. Sierra Madre is an eight-year-old mare by Baron Wilkes, 2:18, and has a record of 2:28¼ over a half-mile track.

Race Track Results.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 23.—After consideration of Jockey May's lease the stewards have decided to continue his suspension from all turf privileges indefinitely. Elsmore and Don Clarencio were the winning favorites to-day. The weather was fine, and the track fast. Summaries: One mile—Elsmore, 100, (Dale,) 1; Faithward, 94, 2; Tom Gilmore, 99, 3. Time—1:43¾. Seven furlongs—W. J. Deboe, 102, (Walsh,) 1; Miss Hanover, 108, 2; Lady Callahan, 103, 3. Time—1:28¾. Steeplechase, Handicap, short course—Don Clarencio, 142, (Pines.) 1; Miss Ransom, 132, 2; Isen, 161, 3. Time—3:12. One mile, handicap—Callear, 111, (Cochran,) 1; Egyptian Prince, 92, 2; Tea Gown, 107, 3. Time—1:43. One mile—Eous, 101, (Wonderly,) 1; Tillie W., 104, 2; Col. Cassidy, 105, 3. Time—1:43⅗. One mile—Beana, 101, (Cochran,) 1; Petit Maitre, 98, 2; Little Boy Blue, 95, 3. Time—1:43.

Loates Will Not Ride Here.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 23.—Samuel Loates, the English jockey, has arrived here and will spend a couple of weeks in this city, going from here to Los Angeles. He says he has no intention of riding while on the coast.

Sale of Lord Beresford's Horses.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—The late Lord William Beresford's horses were sold at auction, at Newmarket, to-day. Caiman fetched 2,500 guineas, Jolly Tar, 2,200 guineas, and Democrat, 910 guineas.

Directors for Racing Association.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 23.—A certificate of increase of membership of the Board of Directors of the Saratoga Association for the Improvement of the Breed of Horses, from five to thirteen, was filed to-day with the Secretary of State. The certificate is signed by William C. Whitney as President and Andrew Miller as Secretary of the association.

Brooklyn Society on the Tan Bark.

Brooklyn society was in evidence last night at the clubhouse of the Riding and Driving Club on the Park Circle, where the regular music ride of the organization, which was to be followed by sports on horseback, attracted one of the largest and most representative throngs of the season. Under the leadership of Riding Master Harry Taylor, the men and women of the club went through many well-formed and finely executed evolutions singly, by twos, fours, sixes, and finally concluded by riding down the ring sixteen abreast. The ride was led by Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop M. Tuttle. Among those who participated in the event were Miss Kate Hodges, M. H. Bearns, Arlando Marine, Edwin A. Ames, Rudolph Erbsloh, Alexander McElway, Thomas F. Rocheford, Allan Pinkerton, and Miss Duin.

This was followed by a relay pony race, the first heat of which was won by J. Derland Lund, on Bristol and Caprice; Howard Corlies, second, on Jessie and Alice. The second heat was won by Frank W. Duryea, on Jessie and Caprice, with Allan Pinkerton, riding Corporal and Alice, second. The final heat was hotly contested. Mr. Pinkerton won, with Frank W. Duryea second, and J. Derland Lund third. The riders rode two laps, then changed horses and saddles, and rode three laps to the end.

AMATEUR BILLIARD GAMES.

Arthur Townsend Made the Season's Record in the Hanover Club Tournament.

Arthur Townsend, the Hanover Club billiard champion, and J. Byron Stark of Wilkesbarre, Penn., were the winners last night in the two games played at the Hanover Club, Brooklyn, for the championship of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players. Townsend defeated Edward Gardner of the Passaic Club, New Jersey, in the first game by 300 points to 231, while Stark defeated Ferdinand Poggenburg, the Liederkranz Club champion, in the second match of the evening by 300 points to 218. The games, as usual, were fourteen-inch balk line. This was the third successive game in which Poggenburg has met defeat.

The Townsend-Gardner game was the closest of the series, and its great feature was the run of 69 points made by Townsend in the second inning. When he passed the fifty mark the crowd applauded generously, but it was not a marker to the enthusiastic ovation which burst forth as the local champion closed his run with 69. Delicately nursed balls were responsible for more than half of the score, while draw shots and fine cushion carroms made up most of the remainder. It was a grand exhibition, and at the close of the sixth inning Townsend had 110 points, the quickest that the hundred-mark has been passed since the tournament began.

Gardner did not reach 100 until the thirteenth inning, when a run of 21, following a good one of 27, gave him 107. At that time Townsend was nearly 70 points ahead, but Gardner never lost his nerve and by some substantial, although not long, runs toward the finish he was only left behind by 19 points when the game ended at the thirty-seventh inning. Each man made thirteen runs of 10 points and over, Gardner's highest being 30.

Townsend's average was a fraction over 8, the best that has been shown since Poggenburg averaged a trifle over 9½ in a thirty-one-inning game last week. Townsend's big run of 69 puts him in the lead for the special prize offered for the highest single run in the tournament. It is the highest run made in an amateur fourteen-inch balk-line game this season. Stark and Frank Gardner previously held the honor with 50 each.

The scores were:

Arthur Townsend—6 69 14 0 4 17 2 2 1 19 29 10 0 2 3 1 12 16 17 1 3 3 2 3 1 11 12 12 3 0 2 0 0 0 0 26 1. Total, 300; average, 8 4-37. High runs, 69, 29, 20, 19, 17, 17, 16, 14, 12, 12, 12, 11, 10.

Edward Gardner—10 3 12 1 0 0 19 0 5 1 27 21 30 10 0 1 27 7 13 19 0 7 2 0 19 1 0 13 7 0 2 7 0 3 0 0. Total, 281; average, 7 22-37; high runs, 30, 27, 27, 21, 19, 19, 19, 16, 13, 13, 12, 10.

The Stark-Poggenburg game was a good exhibition, but it did not rise to the heights of brilliancy that many had predicted. Stark made a bid for a long-run record when he got 45 points in one inning, but missed an easy cushion carrom to continue. Poggenburg had a slight lead for a dozen innings, but Stark's continued steadiness, with six runs of 20 points and over, gave the Pennsylvania man a clean lead before half the game was over, and he won by 82 points. The scores are:

Byron Stark—0 1 0 0 3 2 7 1 7 7 0 26 18 0 1 8 10 6 6 0 10 0 10 45 1 11 2 2 21 28 0 23 1 20 0 1 1 1 2 1 1. Total, 300; average, 7 20-40. High runs, 45, 28, 26, 23, 21, 20, 18.

Ferdinand Poggenburg—1 0 0 22 1 0 8 12 3 1 2 11 2 0 0 11 15 24 27 2 1 1 0 15 1 0 0 22 1 1 8 0 0 3 2 0 0 2. Total, 218; average, 5 23-39; high runs, 27, 24, 22, 22, 15, 12, 11, 11.

The tournament will be continued to-night.

DEER HUNTING SEASON.

Reports of the Killings Made in the Province of Ontario.

The deer-hunting season in the Province of Ontario is considerably shorter in duration than that of the Adirondacks or the Maine woods, including only the first fifteen days of November, while the open season for moose was opened last Fall for the first time in five years and is now closed for three years.

The official returns have not yet been issued, but the officials of the railroad company, which reaches all the principal hunting grounds in the province, have given out figures based upon data in their possession which are probably very close to the actual totals. The returns to date show that 88 licenses were issued to non-residents and 4,200 to residents of the Province of Ontario; also 105 moose licenses, making a total of 4,393, but the probabilities are that at least 5,000 licenses were issued.

There were taken out during the open season by the express companies alone 1,021 deer, weighing in the aggregate 178,312 pounds. Chief Game Warden Tinsley states that not less than 5,000 deer were taken out of the northern country during the open season, as the number carried by the express companies (large as it may be) cannot be taken as a criterion of the total number killed, as those killed by the settlers are not shipped, and a large number of hunters from towns and villages adjacent to the hunting grounds have the deer killed by them taken to their respective homes by teams and other conveyances.

The hunters during the 1900 season have not been quite as successful as those that went up into these districts in previous years, which was accounted for by reason of the bad weather that was experienced during the last open season and does not mean that there is a diminution of deer, as they are increasing in numbers each successive year, owing to the very stringent regulations which the Government enforces.

BAXTER BARRED BY PENN.

University Faculty Committee Refused to Legislate Against Tewksbury.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Jan. 23.—When the fact was made known that the Faculty Committee of the University of Pennsylvania had taken final action in the case of Baxter and Tewksbury, the crack track men, there was considerable surprise among both graduates and undergraduates of that institution.

The students as a whole were glad that some definite news was finally announced, as there has been considerable dissatisfaction with the mystery with which all the transactions of the Faculty Committee are surrounded. It was also a matter of grave surprise that the Board of Directors should recommend that both candidates be debarred by the committee, and that the committee should refuse to act against them. The Faculty Committee, it is understood from good source, decided the matter on technical grounds, and refused to declare Tewksbury ineligible, while Baxter, who broke the technical rules, was debarred.

Baxter is ineligible technically, and his case closed. Tewksbury is technically eligible, but opposed by many on the ground of having before been a year out of college. The action of the Board of Directors points to graver reasons. It is known that only four men of the whole board voted in favor of Tewksbury and Baxter, and that every undergraduate member voted against them. It is also known that the Faculty Committee refused to consider any but technical grounds in their sittings, and that their action is seriously condemned by many undergraduates and alumni. It is also perfectly well known that many students, graduates, professors, and prominent officers of the university are decidedly opposed to Tewksbury representing the university.

Yale May Force Baseball Quarrel.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 23.—If the Yale Baseball Club plays Baltimore, as planned, it may make trouble between the National League teams and the university. Yale makes an innovation in accepting a date with Baltimore, and takes the stand that a quarrel between the two leagues is of no consequence to a college team. National League friends here predict trouble with Boston and New York.

Capt. Robertson of the Yale 'Varsity baseball team to-day announced the itinerary of the Easter trip of the team. The trip will as usual occupy the week of the Easter vacation, and the team will go as far south as Charlottesville, Va. There will be two games with Georgetown, one with Baltimore, and one with the New York National League team. The schedule is as follows:

April 3—Fordham at Fordham, N. Y.; 4—Georgetown at Washington, D. C.; 5—Baltimore Baseball Club at Baltimore, Md.; 6—Boston National League at Newport News, Va.; 8—University of Virginia at Charlottesville, Va.; 9—Georgetown at Washington, D. C.; 10—New York National League team at New York City.

Cutler School Won at Basket Ball.

Cutler School's basket ball team defeated Berkeley yesterday in the latter's gymnasium by the score of 13 to 6. Line-up:

Cutler, 13.	Position.	Berkeley, 6.
Edgell	Right forward	Roome
M. Cornell	Left forward	Basaves
Wood	Centre	Smith
Fritner, J. Cornell	Right guard	H. Rooms

Goals—Edgell, 3; M. Cornell, 3; Smith, 2; Basaves. Time—Fifteen-minute halves. Referee—Bonner, Berkeley. Umpire—Salmon, Cutler.

COLUMBIA RUNNERS WON

They Gained a Signal Victory in 47th Regiment Relay Race.

ATHLETES IN JOINT GAMES

Amateurs from Many Clubs Engaged in Interesting Open Contests in Brooklyn Armory.

With twelve teams ready when the call for the start was made, the one-mile relay race, the last event of importance on the programme, was decidedly the feature of the joint games held last night in the Forty-seventh Regiment's armory, Marcy Avenue and Lynch Street, Brooklyn, by the Forty-seventh Regiment's Athletic Union and the Brooklyn Athletic Club. The race fully justified the expectation of the crowd in attendance, for it made as pretty a spectacle as the most enthusiastic athlete could have desired, and the spectators were tumultuously demonstrative when the Columbia representative, in the second relay, sprinted to the front, and, slipping away from the field, gained an advantage of about fifteen yards. This the men who relieved him increased steadily, the blue and white reaching the tape for the finish a full quarter of a lap, on the 220-yard track, in front of the nearest competitor.

The games drew a remarkably large and excellent entry list, the open events having in them picked men from every prominent athletic organization in the vicinity of New York. The attendance, too, was something remarkable, considering that the Forty-seventh Regiment's Armory is in one of the most inaccessible parts of Brooklyn. The galleries were crowded and the seating accommodations of the large building were taxed to the limit when the first event on the programme was called. The officials for the athletic events were: Referee—Col. J. G. Eddy of the Forty-seventh Regiment; Judges at the finish—James E. Sullivan, K. A. C.; J. J. Frawley, I. A. A. C.; J. E. Bausch, B. A. C.; John J. Bradley, B. A. C.; B. S. Weeks, N. Y. A. C., and J. Boice Smith, Jr.; Timers—Charles Dieges, Pastime A. C.; L. W. McIntyre, Twenty-third Regiment; Major W. Durpin, Thirteenth Regiment; C. C. Hughes, K. A. C.; M. Bishop, N. Y. A. C.; Sam See, National Skating Association; Starter—Chris Kenny, B. A. C.; Clerk of the Course—John J. Dixon, Forty-seventh Regiment A. A.; Umpire—Bicycling Capt. C. P. Staubach, Eighth Regiment; Handicapper—T. F. O'Brien.

There were a number of faults of management, the responsibility for which no one seemed able to fix, and there were numerous delays in carrying out the programme, but in spite of all this, the athletic exhibition was a singularly good one, and there were no complaints from the spectators. All the track events were decided on a course, eight laps to a mile, on the floor of the big drill room, with turns that even on the level floor permitted the bicycle racers to carry speed unusual on a flat indoor course.

There were forty men engaged in the opening event. The one-hundred-yard run, handicap, and the trial heats were hardly less stirring than the final, the winners finishing in such close order that the judges only could pick out the winners. In this, with a handicap of eight and a half yards, J. S. Brennan of the Xavier Athletic Club, in winning the final heat, was timed in 10 seconds, and the announcement of the time caused the athletes present to express much doubt as to the accuracy of the timers' watches. Brennan had to make one turn to cover the distance, and considering that the performance was on a board floor, the time, though announced as official, will be regarded with doubt.

Next to the relay race the most stirring contest of the night was the one-mile handicap run. In this a dozen men hung close together in the front group, to the last turn, where James Farrell led by hardly more than a foot. On the stretch, in the struggle home, Charles Brady moved after him from second place, these two finishing hardly an inch apart, Brady first, with the third man, Peter Sufar, less than a foot away. In the 220-yard run, handicap, A. Burlingame of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club, after winning his trial heat so easily that he seemed certain of a victory in the event, became mixed up in a jostle in the final, and received a severe fall, J. Compiglio of the Xavier Athletic Club then winning from a handicap of twenty yards.

For the relay race at one mile, the Columbia team was entered late, and the names of the team did not appear on the programme. Columbia, with the other entries, made a field of twelve to compete for this event. At the start, the twelve men first on the track made a rush for positions and all went around the course in close order for the first lap, Earl, the first representative of Columbia, taking third place and holding it to the finish of the second lap. Then he was relieved by Van Cise, who held the place for nearly one lap, and then at a signal from Ernest Hjertberg, the runner on Columbia's track athletes, made a spurt for the lead, passing the two men ahead of him in a half dozen yards. He slipped further and further away, and led to the end of the lap by about fifteen yards. Marshall then relieving him, and sprinting from end to end of his turn, increasing the advantage for Columbia by nearly thirty yards.

Then Bishop took up the finish of the race, and, with a winning lead, from the moment he started in was well within himself through the two circuits of the track, and at that g

FALSE IN PRINCIPLE.

Nothing but the wretched condition of the City Government under the present Mayor could make any reasonable man listen for a moment to an argument in favor of giving to the Governor of the State as well as to the Mayor of the city the power to remove the head of the Police Department. Gov. ODELL defends this evil provision of the Stranahan bill on the ground that we shall look in vain for a reformation of the department, even under a single Commissioner, so long as the power of appointment and removal is vested solely in a Tammany Mayor. And this argument makes its impression on the minds of men who would at once perceive and condemn the absurd, makeshift, and vicious device of a dual power of removal if the shocking corruption that has made the police authorities protectors of criminals and lawbreakers did not overshadow the safe considerations of principle to which we ordinarily give heed.

The bill has been favorably reported by the Cities Committee of the Senate, and as the Governor undoubtedly speaks for the Republican organization when he defends the dual power of removal clause, we may expect to see it become a law in that form. It is deplorable that temporary conditions should give a colorable justification to the doing of evil that good may come. The replacement of the bi-partisan commission by a single Commissioner will correct an ancient evil. Some defect of principle may be overlooked when so much good is done. But it is not mere academic devotion to principle that prompts criticism of the provision that gives the Governor the right to interfere in the Police Department. The underlying motive of this provision is believed to be wholly partisan. The Republican organization now enjoys the privilege of naming one-half of the Police Commission. It is unwilling to surrender its privilege and put the entire power of selection into Democratic control. Perhaps the chiefs of the party doubt their ability to get such a bill passed by the Legislature. But it ought to be evident to everybody that the taint of partisanship upon a reform measure greatly endangers its permanency as a statute. A sound police law would work so well that even a Democratic Legislature would be restrained by public opinion from attempting its repeal. But whenever the Democrats regain control of the Legislature and of the executive power, which they may do at the next election, they will to a certainty amend the police law by striking out the dual power provision. The influence of the city members would be sufficient to accomplish that, and a Democratic Governor would have no motive to retain a power already intrusted to a member of his own party. The danger is that in the remaking of the law new vices might be engrafted upon it, or by one of the accustomed "deals" between the two machines the four-headed commission might be restored.

For a possible temporary advantage the permanency of the reform is put in jeopardy. And when it also appears, as it must appear to those who attempt to reason out the working of the Stranahan bill, that even this advantage is illusory, the perfect witlessness of the proceeding becomes manifest. The Governor of New York cannot confer upon this city the blessing of honest and capable police administration merely by removing officials whom the Mayor appoints. If that were the real object sought, it could have been attained only by giving to the Governor the power of appointment. Even the Republican organization, which is not squeamish, did not have the hardihood to go to that length.

BREAKING DOWN THE MERIT SYSTEM.

It looks as if the majority in Congress had determined to break down the system of appointments for merit instead of for political favoritism.

That system was established legally in the act of 1883 under the Presidency and with the co-operation of President ARTHUR. The act placed the extension of the principle as well as its application and enforcement substantially in the hands of the President, and every President since, until Mr. MCKINLEY, has extended the scope of the principle and strengthened its hold on the administration of the service. This is the more remarkable and the more creditable because there has been since the passage of the law, at every election for President until the latest, a change of the party in power. During this long period of steady advance toward a rational and business-like conduct of the civil service the general feeling of Congress has not been friendly. Time and again the appropriation for the Civil Service Commission has been voted down in the House in Committee of the Whole, when the vote was not recorded; and though it has been restored when the members of the House had to go on record, the refusal of it expressed the real sentiment of the majority of the Representatives. They simply did not dare to face the indignation which they knew their action would arouse in the people.

This is not to be wondered at. It is not at all a matter of party. It is a matter of the personal convenience and greed of the individual members. Every sensible and experienced politician knows that patronage does not help a party win victories. As Mr. SEWARD put it very shrewdly a half century since, "The appointments do not count as much as the disappointments." But patronage does help a Congressman win nominations, and it helps a Senator sometimes still more. It is for "use in their business" that these gentlemen have tried to get all the places they could out from under the merit system and within their own control. During the past three years they have been employing a scheme that has been most effective; if allowed to go on, it will in a very short time uproot the merit system altogether and throw the whole service back into the hands of the spoilsmen.

The scheme was started at the opening of the Spanish war. At that time, under the pretext that large additions were needed in the various departments to meet the emergencies growing out of the war, and that the Civil Service Commission could not furnish applicants from the eligible list in time—which was wholly untrue—a great number of "temporary" appointments were authorized without competitive examination. This was a direct authorization of appointments on the recommendation of Congressmen, and such appointments were actually made. The term was originally limited to one year, but it has been extended each year. Now comes the plan to do away with the pretext of temporary selections, and secure the permanent employment of these Congressmen's favorites and henchmen. The Senate Committee has reported an amendment to the chief appropriation bill as follows: "Provided, That such temporary clerks who have been in the service of the Government for two years, and who have demonstrated their efficiency may, in the discretion of the Secretary of the department in which they are employed, be appointed to fill vacancies in the classified service whenever such vacancies occur."

If this is allowed to become law, there is practically an end of the merit system. All appointments required by the growth of the service will first be made as temporary emergency appointments—on the recommendation of Congressmen or politicians—will be extended for another year, and will then be incorporated in the classified service. There will in a brief time be no appointments for merit tested by open competition, and the pernicious and corrupt spoils system will gradually be restored. We sincerely trust that this amendment will be defeated. It would be as disgraceful to the Republican Party, pledged as it is to the maintenance and extension of the reform, as it would be mischievous to the service and demoralizing to our politics.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE KING.

The British Constitution is so sure a reliance against any jar incident to the succession to the throne that the world will look with a more eager interest for evidences of King EDWARD'S influence upon the foreign relations of his Government than for any exercise of his power in its domestic concerns. The influence of VICTORIA as Queen and woman in maintaining relations of friendship and advantage with the Continental powers is known to all the world. Sharing her peaceful wish and disposition, as he undoubtedly does, and, like her, having kinsmen and kinswomen in almost every Court of Europe, among them that chief man of power, his nephew, the German Kaiser, King EDWARD VII. may be expected to continue the traditions of her wonderful reign, occasionally supplementing by his personal influence the resources of British statesmen and the persuasions of British Ambassadors.

The relations of Germany with England have not been made less securely friendly by the succession. We may even hazard the conjecture that if, in the vicissitudes of politics, misunderstandings should arise, the King might succeed with the strong-willed Emperor where the Queen would not have prevailed.

But the two Continental powers with which it is for the interests of peace that England should be on a more assured footing than she has been in recent years are Russia and France. Between the Government of Great Britain and these two Governments there is no present evidence of any strain of relations. But we cannot speak with equal confidence of the feeling of the English people, and in particular of the feeling of the French people. The Russophobia so industriously cultivated by BEACONSFIELD has been by no means the dominant note of British public opinion of late, but the two empires have too many adverse interests in the East to permit the fear of a possible collision to be put altogether outside the range of practical politics. The influence of BEACONSFIELD upon the late Queen and the prominence which he adroitly gave to the affairs and the integrity of the Indian Empire in her thoughts may be supposed to have impressed her mind with views and aspirations calculated to impair in some degree her efficiency as a peacemaker in any emergency involving Asian frontiers. We may be sure that her son, the King, so far as he has to do with matters of policy, will be a not less firm guardian of the Indian possessions from which he derives one of his great titles. But his sentiments as Emperor of India will be less likely to stand in the way of wise adjustments than the sentiments of the woman who first received that fine title.

The Prince of WALES used to be a popular personage in the French capital. The sentiments of the people of that city toward all things English have of late been unpleasant in their nature and their manifestations. There is no political or national reason why the French and the English should not be as friendly as they were in the days when NAPOLEON III. paid ostentatious hospitality to the Queen and the shops of Paris reflected the disposition of the Emperor by blossoming out with English fashions. It has not been pleasant to read of Englishmen insulted and almost mobbed in the streets and cafés of Paris. It was a regrettable incident of the Exposition last Summer to observe the scant attendance of the English. There is manifest peril in unfriendly feeling between powerful neighbor nations. If the influence of the King shall count for something in restoring the old cordiality he will have contributed substantially to the security of the world's peace.

THE QUEEN CONSORT.

It takes a very daring memory indeed to go back to the time when VICTORIA became Queen of England. Whoever avows to remember it by the avowal makes himself a man of extreme old age. And even to recall the marriage of the Prince of WALES is become a proof of that venerability which, in the eyes of a younger generation, is with great difficulty to be distinguished from senility.

It was, by the almanac, thirty-eight years ago, almost, that the eldest daughter of King CHRISTIAN of Denmark came to England to be wedded to the eldest son of the Queen of England. It takes a man of advanced middle age to remember that marriage, the first achievement in the way of dynastic alliances of the then middle-aged and since then very venerable monarch whose first success was in the line that has since won for him the reputation of "the most successful father-in-law in Europe." With one daughter the wife of the heir apparent to the throne of the United Kingdom and the British Empire, and another the wife of the Czar of Russia, and with a son upon the throne of Greece, King CHRISTIAN might many years ago have already sung his "Nunc Dimittis."

Without doubt the King of Denmark cultivated his royal garden with great thrift and success. And his daughters got the benefit of the thrift that was early instilled upon them. The British Court, since the death of the Prince Consort, has never been a splendid Court, and loud have been the laments of the London tradesmen on that account, especially at the beginning of the period. But the circumstances of the British Court have never been anything like so "angust" as the circumstances of the Danish Court when the Princess of WALES, as we have so long been calling her, when the Queen of England, as we are henceforth to call her, was a girl.

The tributes that were paid to her on her arrival in England were purely perfunctory, or "loyal," even including the best-remembered of them, the official utterance of the Laureate:

Sea-king's daughter from over the sea,
Alexandra!
Saxon and Norman and Dane are we,
But all of us Danes in our welcome of thee,
Alexandra!

But it was not long before she made very good her welcome. And she has been making it more real and hearty every year since. There is something very winning in the Scandinavian character at its best, the simplicity and purity which are the ideal of the Scandinavian poets and romancers. And it has been seen at its very best, in all these years, in the Princess of WALES. Scarcely had she been married when her mother-in-law went into retirement on account of her widowhood. Since then it has been upon the Princess that have devolved a great part of all the social duties that are so large a part of the duties of Queen regnant, in a Constitutional monarchy, and almost the whole of the duties of a Queen Consort. The duties which the Queen will have to discharge are those which the Princess has so long been discharging, and so discharging as to endear herself to all those who have been brought into relations with her. That "tact" which we so rightly praise as the best possession that "royalty" can have, proceeds far more from kindness than from policy, is in fact "the wisdom of the heart." That the new Queen is largely endowed with it all the English-speaking world knows. The kindness and helpfulness which are among the best qualities of human nature are the indispensable qualities of a Queen. The new Queen has long ago proved her possession of them. She has already found her reward in the affection of the British people. She has found it also in that possession of perpetual youth which it is so apt to confer and which she so abundantly has. Since the influence of a Constitutional King must be mainly indirect and social, he could not have a more useful helpmeet than the new King of England has in the new Queen.

THE MAYOR AND THE CITY HALL FLAG.

The present Mayor of New York is a singular character. There is something, little as he may like to think so, far more British than American in his obstinate singularity.

It is quite true, as he says, that there is no precedent for half-masting the flag on the City Hall on account of the death of a foreign ruler. Wherefore he kept it flying all day yesterday mast-head high, when every other flag that was visible was half-masted. And every citizen of New York who marked the contrast was filled with shame.

But the Mayor, from his own point of view, was in the right. He was entirely in the right. There is no precedent for half-masting the American flag on account of the death of any foreigner. There is no precedent for so half-masting the flags on the buildings of the United States Government. And in ordering them to be half-masted on this occasion the Government has safeguarded itself by explaining that the order was unprecedented, and was not to be taken for a precedent.

It was the case that was unprecedented. The Mayor seems to have been under some impression that such a tribute as was involved in half-masting the City Hall flag might be construed into some approbation of the Anglo-American "understanding," or even some approbation of the course of England in South Africa. He might have dismissed that fear. The significance of the tribute, as paid by the Government of the United States, as paid by the owner of almost every flag that has flown in the City of New York except that which flew from the staff of the municipality, mast-headed, was that it was a tribute which every son of an English-speaking mother throughout the world, excepting only the Mayor of New York, felt bound to pay to the motherly virtues of the most conspicuous and highly placed woman who used our English speech. The Mayor of New York has the unique distinction of being the one person among the countless millions of sons of English-speaking mothers who refuses to see that the case is one, not for following precedents, but for making them. It is, we think, a pity, on his own account, that he took his singular view.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—If the people of Cincinnati are to be judged by the fraction of them that made such a remarkable display of coolness and courage in a burning theatre Tuesday evening that city's population must be appreciably superior in at least one respect to the common run of humanity, and the origin and exact nature of their superiority ought immediately to be investigated. The building was crowded, and the fact, so soon to receive practical demonstration, that it was not fire-proof or even slow-burning was probably known to all present, yet when smoke began to pour up through the floor the terrible spectacle caused only a prompt but entirely calm and orderly movement toward the doors in front and rear. That Mr. Sothern and his associates on the stage kept their heads, while highly creditable to them, has many precedents and was therefore to be expected. The behavior of the audience, on the other hand, was little less than amazing. All the excuses for and incitements to a panic were present in combination, but nobody was maddened by fear, not a cry of terror was raised, and the things done were precisely the things which it was best to do. The first explanation that suggests itself is that, the play being "Hamlet," the audience attracted was composed in very large part of persons more than ordinarily intelligent, but it can hardly be maintained that intelligence gives immunity from panic fears, or even safely asserted that all whom "Hamlet" attracts are of more than average mental strength. And, curiously enough, on the night before, the audience that assembled in another Cincinnati theatre to hear "The Span of Life," a play not at all Shakespearean, had its self-possession tested almost as severely as this one by a fire in an adjoining building, and it, too, behaved itself with equally admirable composure. There really must be something peculiar to Cincinnati, or perhaps to Ohio, that tends to the preservation of calmness of mind in trying situations. What is it? The common hope of attaining the Presidency?

——Sufficient notice has hardly been taken of the fact that, in renouncing the joys of making life more or less beneficially miserable for under-class men, the West Point cadets proved themselves as well equipped with strategetical ability as they are with the soldierly courage which nobody in his senses thinks of denying to them. They chose for the adoption and publication of their renunciatory resolution exactly the psychological moment when it would produce the best results—when it would not only get them out of a really serious trouble, but when it would at the same time raise them to a position higher than they had ever held before in the popular estimation. Had they declared the intention of abolishing hazing while investigation only threatened, or even after it was well under way, the proceeding would have been ascribed to a desire to conceal the misdeeds of the past; had they waited until after the reports were in and Congress was on the eve of meting out punishment, with some incidental justice, their course would have seemed like a weak attempt on the part of convicted misdemeanants to evade the worst of what they deserved. The cadets made neither of these mistakes. Instead, they frankly told the whole truth, thus helping the inquisitors to a full knowledge of the exact situation, and then, by condemning the past and giving adequate assurances that all would be right in the future, they left their would-be judges and executioners absolutely nothing to do. Following this adroit plan of campaign, they could even maintain with some show of credibility that they had erred rather than sinned, and that their intentions had always been good. It was very neatly done, and the episode can be viewed with satisfaction as showing that these fighting-men-to-be of ours will never make the mistake of certain other fighting men and trust exclusively to "frontal attacks" for overcoming an intrenched antagonist. Of course they will charge straight ahead up the hill when need arises, but they are also able, when opportunity offers, to execute flank movements and so keep down the lists of killed and wounded on their own side. And that is a valuable talent.

——Capt. HERLIHY'S trial seems to have come down to a simple question of veracity between himself and his witnesses, mostly policemen, on the one side, and Mr. PADDOCK and a much smaller number of witnesses, all of them persons in private life, on the other. The only thing that would be quite certain to an observer who knew none of the parties concerned, and had never followed the course of similar trials in the past, is that somebody, to be explicit, is lying. The now historic interview between the Captain and the clergymen took place. They both admit that much. Then their evidence diverges. One of them declares on oath that the conversation was marked throughout with courtly suavity; the other, also after the uplifting of his hand, says that a respectful and proper demand was met with brutal insolence and a wordless, but none the less intelligible, threat of physical violence. Each is supported by evidence as good as his own, and there, for the moment, the case stands. It isn't complex enough to be very interesting, and as for deciding it, well, help in that may be obtained by weighing motives, and surely will be obtained from comparing records and associations.

OLD STYLE AND NEW STYLE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With much surprise I read in this morning's TIMES an editorial headed "A Confusion of Dates," and the more I have thought over it the more certain I am that the writer is in error. He says: "The anniversary of George Washington's birth falls on the 24th of February, not on the 22d. George Washington was born on Feb. 11, 1732, and in the present year and century the difference of time is thirteen days."

Your editorial correctly states the history of the calendar, and admits that in 1732, Feb. 11, Old Style, was the same day as Feb. 22, New Style.

But then the reasoning takes a violent leap. It is true Feb. 11, 1901, Old Style, is thirteen days behind Feb. 11, 1901, New Style. But although Feb. 11, 1901, Old Style, is the same day as Feb. 24, 1901, that does not prove that Feb. 24, 1901, is the anniversary of Washington's birth. It simply proves that Feb. 9, Old Style, is the anniversary in the Old Style. It is the Old Style that is losing and making the error, not the New Style, which is correct.

The reason why the difference between New Style and Old Style is thirteen days this century and only eleven in 1732 is because the Old Style is now two days further wrong than it was then, but the New Style is right now as it was then.

The name Feb. 11, Old Style, does not exactly correspond to any fixed day, but laps over, so that the name Feb. 11 now corresponds to and describes not the same day it did in 1732, but a day two days later.

In order therefore to get the New Style anniversary of Washington's birthday from the Old Style as it is to-day, we must first ascertain what day in the Old Style is the anniversary. This we find to be the 11th of February. Adding the thirteen days correction for this year, we get Feb. 22, 1901.

If Russia were on Feb. 11, 1901, to adopt the New Style, Feb. 11 would be Feb. 24 and Feb. 22 would be left out, and it would seem that Washington were cheated out of a birthday. But this is not so, for his birthday had already passed two days, having occurred on the 9th, and had been celebrated in America on the same day which we call the 22d. It is not a question of the name, but of the identity of the day.

To put it logically, first discard from your mind all thoughts of the Old Style, and, considering only the New Style, ask yourself:

1. Is not Feb. 22, 1901, the anniversary of every Feb. 22 which has preceded it in the New Style? A.—Yes; because the New Style is accurate.

2. Is not Feb. 22, 1732, New Style, the correct day of Washington's birth? A.—Yes.

Ergo. Feb. 22, 1901, is the anniversary of Washington's birth.

I do not see any way to avoid the conclusion. The mistake of your editorial arises from considering Feb. 11, 1901, Old Style, as the anniversary of Washington's birth, and I think I prove the error. If your contributor will give the matter a little thought I think he will agree with me.

HENRY S. J. FLYNN.

New York, Jan. 22, 1901.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have just read with some interest that astronomical vagary which appears on your editorial page to-day under the heading "A Confusion of Dates." Your contention is that inasmuch as Washington's birthday occurred on Feb. 11, according to the Old Style calendar, we ought now to celebrate the anniversary on Feb. 24, instead of Feb. 22. If you are correct, we must hold the celebration later and later in February as the centuries roll on. After the lapse of sufficient time we shall pass over into March, and so on until at last we shall have the anniversary in midsummer. When that occurs your astronomical editor will probably give us an article on "The Times Out of Joint."

As a matter of fact, Washington's birth should be celebrated at an instant of time following the instant when he was born by an exact multiple of the quantity of time in a year. This condition is very nearly satisfied by holding the celebration always on Feb. 22, according to the calendar now in force. Our calendar was devised for the express purpose of satisfying that condition and preventing such dates as Washington's Birthday and Christmas Day from occurring in the Summer.

HAROLD JACOBY.

Columbia University, Jan. 22, 1901.

If Catherine II. of Russia had been born on the same day as Washington, Feb. 11, 1732, (Old Style,) and if the Russians had continued to celebrate her birthday, the observance this year would fall on Feb. 11 according to their calendar. If, having at length concluded to adopt the Gregorian calendar this year, they should drop out thirteen days, decreeing that Feb. 11 should become Feb. 24, the celebration of Catherine's birthday would not thereby be transferred to the latter date, for, as our correspondent correctly says, the true anniversary of her birth and of Washington's would already have come and gone two days before, on Feb. 9 of their old calendar, corresponding to Feb. 22 of the new, which has become a fixed point not only in the civil year, but also in the solar year. The error in the article referred to arose from applying the correction indicated for this century, thirteen days, to an event occurring in the eighteenth century, when the two calendars were only eleven days apart.

A CLUB FOR PLAYGOERS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with interest the letters of "A Theatregoer," "A Lover of the Play," and "A Bohemian," and although the object of their letters is good, the method by which they seek to redress their grievances is doomed to failure, judging by past experience, for the wail of their woes is likely to fall upon deaf ears so far as the theatrical managers are concerned. I had occasion recently to avail myself of the courtesy of your columns to make a complaint concerning the Criterion Theatre management, pointing out the unfairness of Mr. Frohman in permitting his officials to accept money from playgoers at a time that the theatre was already full, and when he was not in a position to give money's worth—a view of the play—when a spectator was compelled to stand. A copy of this complaint was sent to Mr. Frohman. What was the result? Was the grievance inquired into or remedied? No. It was simply ignored as complaints of the public through the press usually are treated by theatrical managers.

The only satisfactory and practical way of bringing theatrical managers to their senses and to lead them to consider public interests and to convince them that the public has some rights is to form a body for the protection of playgoers' interests, and for the exchange of views upon theatrical subjects—in fact, to organize I suggested in my former letter the formation of a club for this object similar to the Playgoers' Club of London.

This London club, to which I refer, is very influential in theatrical affairs, and is a recognized institution. It has a membership, I believe, of over a thousand, consisting of actors, journalists, theatrical managers, and gentlemen of other professions or of commercial pursuits; in short—of playgoers. They have a clubhouse of their own, where all the usual social advantages of clublife are afforded. Meetings are held periodically, at which debates take place on the subject of new productions of plays of interest, and on all subjects connected with the stage of moment to playgoers, and grievances are thrashed out and action taken thereon to approach the managers with a view to a remedy, where it is feasible. Lectures are delivered by well-known public men and women. Smoking concerts are given at which the leading professionals and amateurs generally tender their services to the club. Ladies and children's entertainments are arranged. Dances are given in the Winter and Summer trips during the off season, and many other social features introduced. Once a year a public banquet is held at some prominent hotel, and among the men who have taken part in these events at one time or the other have been Sir Henry Irving, Beerbohm Tree, Anthony Hope, I. Zangwill, George Alexander, Wilson Barrett, Cecil Raleigh, and many other leading lights too numerous to mention. The annual subscription is kept as low as one guinea.

Why not form such a club in New York? I should be pleased to co-operate with "Theatregoer," "Lover of the Play," "Bohemian," and any others in establishing such an organization. But don't let the thing end in mere talking—let us be up and doing, and then we shall get practical results.

An Insolent Box Office Clerk.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Having read the letters concerning the box office Czar, &c., I should like to add my mite of protest. I am a lover of the theatre, but have been deterred from going as often as I would like by the insolent treatment of most box office clerks. It must be an attraction indeed to counteract the disagreeable experiences one has to encounter.

One example I would like to cite. During the late engagement of a star I bought a ticket three weeks ahead, paying a higher price than at first intended, to make sure of a really good seat. When I asked at the box office to be shown the diagram of seats the clerk told me impatiently he had no time, but that the seat was in front, in the middle, near the aisle. When I reached my seat on the day of the performance I found that it was so much round the side that I could scarcely see the stage.

I went down to the box office and explained or tried to explain the error. The clerk told me in a most insolent manner that he had nothing to do with it, that the man who had sold me the ticket had left, and then turned his back upon me and took no further notice of my protest. I had to be satisfied with seeing what I could standing up.

WEST POINT CADETS' TRAINING.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It would be almost impossible to devise a system for securing in a National school a better average representation of the young manhood of the country than that by which the classes at West Point are filled. Formerly the cadets were appointed solely by the Representatives in Congress and a few by the President, but by last year's law Senators also join in the selection, and there are 480 cadets altogether. The cadets, therefore, come from every district in the whole United States, and as they are now usually chosen from the upper classes in the high schools by competitive examination, the very best material from every grade of life, the sons of workingmen, farmers, business men, professional men, and wealthy men, are all represented at the academy, and pursue their studies under exactly the same conditions.

Unlike the manner of other colleges, the cadets are quartered in the barest of rooms, without any but the simplest comforts, have little time for recreation, and no money whatever to spend. As a rule, very few faces are found in the ranks of the cadets but those of manly, bright boys, of evident high intelligence and gentlemanly bearing, an exhibition of physical and mental excellence gratifying to all visitors and the cause always of enthusiastic applause when they parade now and then in New York City.

That the National product of boys from Maine to Texas and from Washington to Florida is of pretty good average is conclusively shown at West Point, and there is no chance for snobbishness there, either. The stiff military training gives the cadets such chests and shoulders that a good many women visitors think they are padded beneath their smart uniforms, but they are not. The terrific work in the riding hall, at cavalry drill, and in the artillery work brings serious and even stern faces, however, to many cadets, that don't relax much even during a dance. But the business of the soldier is not play, after all, and it must always be borne in mind that upon these young hearts and brains must some day come part of the burden of upholding the National honor and leading, according to our National habit, not only the trained troops of the regular army, but the thousands of untrained brave volunteers who flock to the flag in time of war.

With them in the army half their brother officers will be those who have learned their stern duties in the ranks and at Fort Leavenworth, while others have become officers from the bitter schooling of actual war. Upon these men we depend for military success, for in these days of scientific war it is the well disciplined, thoroughly trained handful that wins against the untrained host. We never seem to learn this lesson here, though. We put down disorders nowadays with disciplined police forces in the cities, we put out fires with finely trained firemen, we choose specialists and experts for every great undertaking in our progress, but we still continue to try to put out wars with raw recruits and trust to heaven for good luck.

LANDS FOR OLD SOLDIERS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reply to many letters from old soldiers in all parts of the Union, who misunderstand the special privileges granted them in regard to obtaining land in the Comanche-Kiowa Reservation, I would make the following statement if you will allow me space in your columns:

Soldiers or sailors who served at least ninety days in the United States Army during the war of the rebellion may file declaratory statement. This declaratory statement must be accompanied by the oath of the soldier or sailor setting forth: (1) His residence and Post Office address, (2) that the claim is made for his exclusive benefit and not for the benefit of any other person either directly or indirectly, (3) that he has not previous to that time made a homestead entry or filed a declaratory statement, (4) that he is not the proprietor of more than 160 acres of land elsewhere, (5) that since Aug. 30, 1890, he has not filed on a tract of land which, with the tract applied for, would make more than 320 acres.

This statement may be filed by the soldier or sailor in person or by attorney authorized by power of attorney. After filing statement he is allowed six months in which to make entry. The time he served in the army is deducted from period of five years' residence required by homestead law, but he must remain on the land at least one year. If soldier or sailor entitled to file statement is dead, his wife, if living and unmarried, is entitled to file statement, but if she be dead or married, his minor orphan children by proper guardian are entitled.

If by this article I shall be of benefit to any veteran I shall feel more than paid for my trouble. C. R. MOSS.

THE HOLLAND SOCIETY DINNER.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is quite evident that your correspondent, Mr. Findlay Sackett, is misinformed in regard to Mr. Cleveland's reception at the Holland Society dinner. The members of the society did not express dissent from anything that the ex-President said. At one point there were three or four persons who hissed; but the noise was so slight that one who sat beside me did not hear it at all. It is not even known that the "hissers" belonged to the society. One of the newspapers reported that the hissing was an expression of disapproval of the Administration's Philippine policy and not of Mr. Cleveland's dissent from it.

Nobody has a right to say how the majority of the members of the Holland Society regard the war on the Filipinos, for nobody knows their sentiments.

COMPLAINT AGAINST A RAILROAD.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We are a long-suffering people on the Hudson River, but sometimes "the worm will turn"! This stage of our endurance has been reached at last by the irregularity of the Hudson River Railroad in the delivery of our newspapers. Barely one hour from town, we have patiently endured the endless delay on trains, and have accepted our fate with the courage born of despair, well knowing how useless it would be to plead our broken engagements with such an unreliable railroad as the one we live on.

And now comes another grievance. Day after day our morning paper does not appear until a late hour, (sometimes 3 P. M.!) although pledged to arrive at 7 A. M. This is probably the fault of some railroad employe who has failed to do his duty, but who attends to the mistake, ferrets out the offender, and sees that it does not happen again? Certainly not the officials of the road, who regard this inconvenience with the same indifference that they do the failure of the trains to run on schedule time.

Only last Saturday I witnessed the disappointment of an entire school at the delay for over an hour of the train that was scheduled to take them down in time for a matinée, and called (bitter irony!) the "matinée train." Upon inquiry, I found that the Peekskill local had been one hour late in leaving New York on its northbound trip, and, instead of substituting a Croton local to take its place on the southbound trip, they compelled us to wait for an hour and a quarter, until the belated train appeared.

This happens all the time, and where is the remedy to be found? They say that "corporations have no souls," but they ought to have some sense of honor, and it is only by airing our grievances in the newspapers that we can hope to shame them into doing their duty to the public. For over thirty years I have lived on this railroad, and for over thirty years I have been a subscriber to THE TIMES; may I therefore ask for a place in your columns to put forth this plea for justice?

Conductors Violate the Law.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is it any wonder that the public pays so little attention to the laws prohibiting spitting in public conveyances when the employes of the transportation companies not only pay no attention to offenders but do not regard the law themselves?

One night this Winter I was waiting for a car at the corner of Fifty-first Street and Sixth Avenue. On a side track stood a car occupied by a dozen or so conductors, and when presently a car came along the passengers were transferred to the one in which the conductors were sitting. The latter of course got out. I got in with the others, and to my astonishment and disgust I found the whole front half of the floor of the car covered with the expectorations of the conductors, who had been sitting there. Let a child stand on the seat and how quickly the conductor pounces upon it, but a man can deposit a pool of liquid filth upon the floor with perfect impunity. O. B.

A Good Time for Safe Business.

From The Troy Times.

In its Annual Financial Review, a comprehensive and ably written publication, THE NEW YORK TIMES collates the views of experienced men on the business conditions in the United States at the entrance of the new century. In these contributions it is noticeable that the admiration of recent progress and the prediction of continued prosperity are tempered with the caution that push must not go faster than prudence. Secretary of the Treasury Gage has a place of honor in the Review. He speaks as one having authority of the financial conditions of the United States as a Government and as a commercial people. The splendid results of the last few years show how expansion of opportunity for America has meant expansion of American trade. There is no halt, and no indication of halting, in it is progress. To use Secretary Gage's figure, the horse must be kept to a gait, but not pressed beyond it. The opening century is a good time for business—for business that combines enterprise and safety.

The Times's Financial Review.

From The Newspaper Maker.

The Annual Financial Review of THE NEW YORK TIMES is a noticeable supplement to that enterprising paper. The Times's Century Review.

From The Mobile (Ala.) Register.

THE NEW YORK TIMES maintains its reputation as a paper that still relies upon its editorial page for the entertainment and instruction of the public by printing a ten-column editorial on the century that has just closed. It is an excellently prepared article.

From The Dixon (Ill.) Telegraph.

THE NEW YORK TIMES of New Year's Day comes to us with an editorial review of the century just closed that is the work of a master mind, trained in the art of thought condensing. The editorial occupies a page and a half of that great newspaper, but in that space the editor has covered the history, progress in the sciences, religion, ethics, &c. This one issue of THE NEW YORK TIMES is worth ten times the subscription price paid for that paper for an entire year. THE TIMES has a treat of some sort intellectually every day.

THE GOLDEN DREAM.

Folger McKinsey in Baltimore News.

One vision was of Summer, with roses on her brow—
The memory of her beauty is fragrant to me now,
Her lips were buds of roses, and where she trod, the grass
Grew velvet in that moment for her rose-feet to pass!

Another was of glory and shock and shard of war,
With sabres flashing over the crimson reek and roar;
Blown bugles sounded charges and heroes in that gleam
Rode down to deeds of valor beyond the gates of Dream.

The next arose 'mid thunder of elements at strife,
And in the throes of traffic, the moil and toil of life,
A worker swung the hammer, another builded high,
All cities rose in splendor against the golden sky.

Beyond this dream, another, with dance and song and wine—
Joy led the festal thousands beneath the fig and vine;
The Muses leaned and languished beside the palace door,
As in the Roman radiance of days that are no more.

But sweeter than all visions of pomp and pageantry,
One dream of gold most golden was granted unto me;
The lanes of life were pleasant, with laughter and with light,
And one sweet face was shining upon me through the night;

The baby lips were parted with smiles that love had lit,
The baby arms were dimpled with lines that love had writ,
And when I leaned to clasp them—Ah! dream that last for aye!
She came to walk beside me adown the sweetheart way.

From out the holy vision, from out the dreamland quest,
Her little hand of love in mine to clasp and cling and rest,
She rose with God's "good morning!" upon her little face,
And all my world is swester for gift of her sweet grace!

Foreign Ministers, It Is Said, Will Not Explain Joint Note.

Chinese Must Prove by Their Acts They Intend to Give Satisfaction and Inflict Punishment.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—The Havas Agency has received the following dispatch from Peking, under date of Jan. 22:

"The Ministers have decided not to reply to the request for explanations of the joint note until the Chinese shall have proved by their acts that they intend to give satisfaction, and the conditions shall have been accepted as to the primary question of punishment.

"The Ministers intend to discuss with Prince Ching and Li-Hung-Chang the conditions under which the chief of the guilty shall be punished."

PEKING, Jan. 20.—The agreement was delivered by the Chinese plenipotentaries last Wednesday afternoon, thus relieving the anxiety of the foreign envoys, who had begun to fear that, in spite of the promises made, something might occur to prevent delivery.

There is a general feeling of satisfaction among the foreigners and soldiers. Most of the latter look anxiously forward to leaving China this year. Although no orders have been received, the Australians expect to be the first British troops to go, presumably as soon as the river opens, which is usually during the first week of March.

Prince Ching has visited the Russian Minister, M. De Giers, remaining with him two hours. It is supposed that the interview had to do with the agreement. It is well understood here that M. De Giers has all along had more influence with Prince Ching and Li-Hung-Chang than all the other Ministers combined; and he has invariably known sooner than the others what the Chinese plenipotentiaries were about to do.

Friends of Emperor Kwang-Su have informed M. De Giers that the Emperor desires to return as speedily as possible to the capital, and will do so as soon as he is assured that the foreign troops will leave. His Majesty would like to start for Peking immediately after Feb. 20, when the Chinese New Year begins. The journey will probably take six weeks.

Last Saturday Prince Ching said he considered the Chinese requests reasonable. "The question of indemnity," he added, "has two sides. Some of the allies have conducted warfare in a fashion unparalleled in the history of civilization. Chinese merchants and private citizens assert that valuables have been looted amounting to immense sums, and it would not be fair to fail to take these largely into consideration when the question of indemnities is discussed.

"Tien-Tsin, Peking, and all the cities and towns between have been absolutely stripped, while priceless treasures belonging to private individuals have been confiscated, irrespective of all ideas of modern warfare. I feel confident that the good feeling of the allies will make a due allowance, and I look forward to getting a satisfactory reply to the questions we have asked when we meet the foreign envoys Monday, (Jan. 21.) We will then consider the other points."

LAWLESSNESS IN CHINA.

American and Other Troops Are Depredators—French Soldiers Are Truculent.

TIEN-TSIN, Jan. 18.—The United States transport Sumner, which has arrived at Taku, brought 150 troops to replace Americans who had been invalided.

Two deserters from the American troops, with an American flag, have recently committed acts of depredation in the surrounding country and have blackmailed the villagers. Both were captured, but one succeeded in making his escape and is still at large. It is probable that they will be shot. Three Sikhs, who were found guilty of smaller acts, were taken to the scene of their depredations to-day and given fifty lashes each. Many lawless acts are being committed.

A French soldier has been sentenced to a term of five years in prison for drawing his bayonet upon an Australian policeman. Two Frenchmen have been shot and an American has been stabbed in saloon brawls. The French soldiers draw their bayonets upon the slightest provocation.

GREAT FORCE TO BALK BOERS.

Kitchener's Left Rests on the Sea—De Wet's Appearance in Cape Colony a Great Danger.

CAPE TOWN, Jan. 23.—Gen. Kitchener is disposing great forces semicircularly, his extreme left resting on the sea, to circumvent the Boers. The columns move simultaneously, in touch with each other.

The greatest danger of the situation is the possibility of Gen. De Wet's appearance in Cape Colony. It is believed that none of the Dutch would resist his personal call to arms. They think the fame of Napoleon and Wellington pales in the presence of his military genius.

Among a number of captured letters is one from Gen. Hertzog to President Steyn asking for 1,000 unmarried young men to enter Cape Colony and beat up recruits.

CASTELLANE SUITS DECIDED.

French Court Acts in the Litigation with Wertheimer.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—The First Civil Tribunal of the Seine has decided the counter suits of the Count and Countess de Castellane and Wertheimer, the bric-a-brac dealer, by dividing the affair into three series. In the first it is declared that the exchanges and purchases were freely agreed to, and in good faith, and therefore could not now be modified.

The second series, comprising the exchanges, is regarded as liable to the suspicion of usury, and the court therefore has appointed three experts to appraise the articles, final judgment being given after their report.

In the third series, concerning the art works belonging to Count Boni de Castellane, sold by Wertheimer, the Court declares the transaction holds good, but calls on Wertheimer to submit proof of the sale in order to show he did not realize illegitimate profits.

Countess's Book to be Confiscated.

BERLIN, Jan. 23.—The Berlin courts have rendered an adverse decision against the divorced Countess von Wedel-Berard, whose book entitled "My Relations with His Majesty Emperor William II., Revelations About the Regicide in Italy, and the Dreyfus Affair in the Light of Truth," made a great sensation last year. The decision is that the book shall be confiscated and the plates destroyed. The whereabouts of the Countess is unknown.

THE 69TH'S NEW ARMORY.

A meeting of the Armory Board was held yesterday, at which the plans for the new Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory prepared by Horgan & Slattery were approved. The architects were directed to prepare the specifications and the more minute plans for construction.

The armory will be situated at Twenty-fourth Street and Fourth Avenue, and will occupy nearly half a block. The building is to be of rough stone. The design is similar to several of the armories built in recent years.

Ten bids for a new armory for the Naval Militia of the Second Battalion in Brooklyn were opened. The appropriation for the building is $60,000. It was found that all the bids were above the appropriation. The lowest bid was that of Thomas G. Carlin for $63,491. There will be a readvertisement of the contract.

Bloomingdale Brothers' Employes' Ball.

Arrangements have been nearly completed for a great promenade concert and ball to be held by Bloomingdale Brothers' Employes' Mutual Aid Society at Madison Square Garden on Feb. 2, and a large attendance is hoped for, as the drains upon the fund of the organization have been unusually heavy of late. The society has attained a membership of more than 2,000 since 1881, when the members could be counted on one hand. Joseph H. Myers is the President of the society, and A. Weigner of Bloomingdale Brothers is in charge of the details of the coming entertainment.

AN OPERETTA BY STRAUSS.

"Wiener Blut" Performed in an English Dress at the Broadway Theatre.

"Wiener Blut" is one of the later operettas of Johann Strauss, in which many of the unrelated waltz tunes of the famous Vienna composer were finally "rounded up" and branded. No apology is required, surely, for using cattle-ranch terms in describing a modern operetta.

"Vienna Life," as they call the English version of this piece, which was produced with really magnificent pictorial accessories and performed with an abundance of vim at the Broadway Theatre last night, was received with tumultuous applause. The dozen or more inspiriting waltz and march movements, some of them long familiar, but not the less welcome on that account, greatly pleased the large audience, which was quite undiscriminating in its applause.

The ensemble was generally good enough to deserve warm approval, however, while Ernest Albert's marble, gilt, and tapestry ballroom, in which all the coloring is harmoniously toned to the canary satin dresses of the principal group of dancers, is a fairly splendid picture. The moonlit fête of the last act is also handsome, and in the matters of scenery and costume the production leaves nothing to be desired. The orchestra, under Seli Simonson, is efficient. Glen Macdonough adapted to the supposedly infantile taste of this metropolis the original libretto of Herren Leon and Stein, which, with its antique and tedious matrimonial imbroglio and its clumsily contrived web of mistaken identity, could not have been very promising to begin with. It must be said of Mr. Macdonough, though, that he has generally made his words, however lacking in fancy they may be, fit the music. Most of the story, such as it is, is told in song, and it is all intelligible.

The dances and the stirring finales and the beautiful pictures must save "Vienna Life" if it is to be saved. They were tremendously potent with last night's friendly audience. But that assemblage also encored nearly every solo, duet, and trio, and therefore its judgment is not to be relied upon. The sextet of principals is weak, both vocally and dramatically. There is often better singing in musical farce, and there is generally much better acting. Raymond Hitchcock, the principal comedian, is droll enough, but the fun in "Vienna Life" is not its best quality. The cast follows:

Count Zedlau	Thomas H. Persse
Prince Glindelbach	Charles H. Drew
Rudolph Kaegler	Raymond Hitchcock
Prince Bitowski	Maude Thomas
Josef	William Blaisdell
Captain of Gendarmes	E. B. Knight
Franziska Cagliari	Amelia Stone
Countess Zedlau	Ethel Jackson
Pepi	Octavie Barbe
Betty	Rosemary Glosz

MOZART AT THE OPERA.

"Don Giovanni" Sung Last Night at the Metropolitan.

At the Metropolitan Opera House last night Mozart had his first hearing this season. He was represented by his noble masterwork, "Don Giovanni." The audience was not a large one, and this must be attributed to the fact that without the factitious aid of a sensational cast a work of the pure and chaste classic style has but little favor with the present public. This is a state of things which should not exist. Last night's performance was a good one, spirited and musical, and the cast was competent. The audience ought to have been much larger. We need to be educated up to Mozart in these days. It is no longer true that education in music is essential to an enjoyment of Wagner. That was true while the old guard occupied the front rows. But now children drink in the Wagner dramas with their milk, and out of the mouths of babes and sucklings cometh forth learned talk about the absence of the melismus, the fundamental rhythms of "word-tone-speech" and false relations. These children are fed on spiced foods, and the white bread of Mozartian music is not rich enough for their peppered palates.

There is a beautiful suavity of eloquence in the Mozartian music, and in the more tragic scenes a variety of expressiveness attained by simple means quite unknown to the modern composer. Mozart's melodic numbers are so lofty, so chaste in style, that their very clearness of Doric outline misleads the unskilled listener. These things sound so facile that the perfection of their art too often escapes notice. One waits in vain for the thunder of contemporaneous climaxes. Mozart's are reached in another way. He reaches his climaxes melodically and contrapuntally. Witness the splendid finale in the ballroom scene. But that scene always awakens questionings. It is seldom done as it should be. In this matter there have been improvements at the Metropolitan in recent years. More might be done, but let us be thankful for what we get. Mr. Grau is by no means averse to supplying artistic demands when he feels their existence.

The performance last night had high merits, and it introduced some new impersonations of leading rôles. Mme. Gadski, for instance, came forward for the first time here as Donna Elvira. This conscientious singer has shown a most commendable ambition to widen her sphere of usefulness. She has studied parts in French and Italian and has added to her stature by doing so. Her Donna Elvira will increase the general respect felt for her. She showed an understanding of the part, and she sang the music with intelligence and taste. Miss Fritzi Scheff appeared as Zerlina, following a long line of eminent predecessors in this fascinating part. The young lady was less successful in her delivery of Mozart's music than in her acting. Her voice is too thin and acid in quality to do justice to the melodious measures. But she acted with chic and spirit. Perhaps she might have done more to convey the real nature of the innocent girl.

Mme. Nordica was an admirable Donna Anna. Her interpretation of the part is so familiar that it does not call for extended comment. It was up to its standard last night. The members of the company appeared for the first time this season. These were Mr. Salignac as Don Ottavio and Mr. Pini-Corsi as Masetto. The former sang his few melodies tolerably. Mr. Pini-Corsi was excellent in his buffo rôle. He is a genuine comedian, and his voice is out of all proportion to his diminutive stature. Mr. Scotti was the familiar Don Giovanni of last year. He sang the music vigorously, but not always with clean rhythm. He added a beard to his make-up, and it did not become him. Mr. Edouard de Reszke was again a capital Leporello. He is a man of infinite humor, and he delights both himself and his audience in such rôles as this. Mr. Journet was excellent as the Commendatore. Mr. Mancinelli conducted with enthusiasm.

E. H. SOTHERN UNDISMAYED.

Will Appear in Production of "Hamlet" at Cincinnati To-night.

The ill-fortune which has persistently followed E. H. Sothern this season has not in the least daunted him. With the temporary use of improvised scenery he will be enabled to continue his performance of "Hamlet" in the Cincinnati Music Hall to-night.

Immediately after the fire in the Grand Opera House, where he was playing and which resulted in the loss of all his stage appointments excepting a few costumes, he set to work to arrange so that he might continue his engagement.

Mr. Sothern communicated the facts regarding the disastrous fire to his manager, Daniel Frohman, but the information arrived here so late Tuesday night that Mr. Frohman could not offer his star any suggestion.

After several telephonic interviews between Mr. Sothern, Mr. Frohman, and Mr. A. H. Hayman yesterday it was finally decided to transfer the attraction to the Cincinnati Music Hall, with improvised scenery and properties which will be loaned Mr. Sothern in the latter city, and to-day new sets of scenery will be forwarded.

An elaborate setting for an intended production of "Hamlet" was found stored in this city

THE MANAGERS' ASSOCIATION.

Lincoln J. Carter Explains Its Purposes.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—Of the Managers' Association of America, incorporated at Albany, the President, Lincoln J. Carter, says: "This is an attempt to put our business on a proper basis, to protect the traveling manager from the injustices and oppression he suffers from theatre managers on the one hand and from the irresponsible acts of employes on the other. Our principal office will be in New York, though a second office will probably be established eventually in Chicago. There it is purposed to do our booking and hold our conferences.

"One of the evils we hope to correct first is that of overcrowding theatres. Some one-night stands are booked by their managers for every night in the week, when lucrative business can only be done, say, twice a week. A manager traveling with a production that costs, for example, $150 a night, thus plays to a house yielding $80. The local manager takes his percentage, which is more than enough to pay his small running expenses, and the traveling manager pockets a big loss. As the local manager pays his help by the week, he can better afford to keep his house open to small audiences every night in the week than to have two performances to large audiences.

"Then the association will act as an information bureau, and traveling managers will be able to learn the exact condition of every circuit."

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

Wednesday is generally devoted to bridge whist classes and luncheon and small affairs. Yesterday there was very little indeed going on for a day in the season. The dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Gurnee, Jr., 8 East Thirty-third Street, was quite a small affair. The reception of the Ladies' Auxiliary of St. Vincent's Hospital, which was held at the Waldorf-Astoria, attracted many of the Roman Catholics and their friends, and a number went there after the opera, which was extremely well patronized, last evening. This evening, of course, there is the Assembly, which overshadows any other entertainments. But the other affairs of to-day are principally at homes, and there is a faint warning of Lent in the first meeting of the Knickerbocker Riding Club, which takes place at Durland's.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Randolph Snowden of Philadelphia have gone to Lakewood to visit Mr. and Mrs. George Gould, who have been holding a large house party there and who have also run up to town in the interim.

***

Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., have taken the Alfred M. Coates villa at Newport for next Season. They are arranging to go abroad for a tour of the Continent, and will probably sail with William K. Vanderbilt, Sr., in the Valiant on Feb. 13. They returned from Newport late yesterday.

***

One of the largest receptions of the future will be given on Saturday next by Mrs. Potts, Mrs. William Brevoort Potts, and Miss Potts at 39 East Thirty-ninth Street Mrs. William Brevoort Potts was Miss Barnes and was one of the Autumn brides.

***

The breakfast which Mrs. Wilbur Bloodgood will give for Miss De Neuville on Saturday, Feb. 2, will be one entirely for débutantes. There will be eighteen covers and some exquisite floral decorations, and a musical surprise has been arranged.

***

Mr. Thomas Colston Kinney of Virginia led the Wednesday cotillion last evening at Delmonico's, dancing with Miss Anabel Gardner Van Nostrand. Mrs. Samuel Spencer, Mrs. John W. Boothby, Mrs. Oliver Livingston Jones, and Mrs. J. Burling Lawrence were among the receiving party. There was an extremely large attendance, and the Misses Church, Lawrence, Beekman, Jones, Kane, Harrison, Arthur G. Morris, Montgomery Schuyler, Jr., H. C. Adams, and Heth Lorton.

***

The St. Nicholas Club will hold a ladies' day on Saturday afternoon at its clubhouse, 7 West Forty-fourth Street. Among the patronesses who will receive will be Mrs. Sackett M. Barclay, Mrs. Henry Wardwell, Mrs. Cortlandt S. Van Rensselaer, Mrs. Charles F. Roe, Mrs. Walter Rutherfurd, Mrs. Charles H. Street, Mrs. Henry E. S. Davis, Mrs. Eugene Schieffelin, and Mrs. Walden Pell.

***

Mrs. E. Ellery Anderson of 11 West Thirty-eighth Street gave a luncheon yesterday. Her guests included Mrs. Oliver P. Wells, Mrs. Louis Ogden, Mrs. William Perry, Mrs. I. Stephens, Mrs. George Gillespie, Mrs. Louis Livingston Delafield, Mrs. Walter Rutherfurd, Mrs. Oscar Livingston, Mrs. E. O. Anderson, Mrs. Robert Thompson, Mrs. W. P. Anderson, and Miss Stanton. The table was decorated with bridesmaid roses and ferns arranged in silver bowls and vases.

***

Among last night's dinner givers were Mr. and Mrs. J. Hooker Hamersley, whose guests included Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. de Peyster, Mr. and Mrs. John Hadden, Mr. and Mrs. George Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Amory S. Carhart, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Yulee, Mr. and Mrs. E. Livingston Ludlow, Miss Louise Ward McAllister, and Matthew Astor Wilkes.

***

Mr. and Mrs. George Baldwin Newell (Miss Julia Pomeroy) sailed on the Columbia for Alexandria and Cairo, where they intend remaining until April, for which month they have taken an apartment at Monte Carlo. From Monte Carlo they will go to London and Paris, and from there to Homburg, when the season at the latter resort begins. Mr. and Mrs. Newell have already spent several Winters in Cairo. The wedding of Mrs. Newell's sister, Miss Josephine Pomeroy, and Mr. Klimke will take place in London in May or June. Mr. Klimke was the chief mining engineer of the Transvaal Government and developed the Kernd gold mines.

***

Mme. Nordica is to give a tea at Sherry's Friday. Mrs. E. Ellery Anderson of 11 West Thirty-eighth Street has invitations out for a tea on Wednesday, Jan. 30, in honor of her sister, Mrs. George T. Linsley.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Gurnee, Jr., (Miss Belle Barney,) gave a small dance at their residence, 8 East Thirty-third Street, last night for their daughters, the Misses Belle Lucy, and Mary Gurnee. The house was decorated with cut flowers and palms. The guests were received by Mrs. Gurnee and her daughters. Dancing was general until after midnight, when supper was served by Sherry at small tables simply decorated. The tables were placed in the dining and adjoining rooms. After the supper there was a cotillion. The favors were the usual trinkets, with several novel and handsome trifles.

The wedding of Miss Alice B. Mitton of Boston and Mr. George N. Gardiner, Jr., of 348 West End Avenue, this city, will take place on the evening of Feb. 2 at the home or the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Mitton of Corey Hill, Brookline, Mass., and the ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Daniel Dunaney Addison, rector of All Saints' Church of Boston. Miss Mitton will be attended by her sister, Miss Elsie G. Mitton, as maid of honor, and Mr. Gardiner's best man will be his brother, Bentley Gardiner. The ushers will be the Messrs. Arthur S. Bennink of Cambridge, Hugh Miller, Edmund J. Scheider, Thomas C. Havens, Alfred E. Toussaint of New York, and Philip P. Gardiner of Baltimore. Mr. Gardiner, who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George N. Gardiner, Sr., (Miss Elsie Crane,) is a member of the Calumet and other clubs, and of Company K, Seventh Regiment.

***

The New York University Glee Club will give its fifteenth annual concert in the Waldorf-Astoria ballroom on Saturday evening. Miss Anna E. Otten, the violinist, is to play, and Miss Shannal Cumming, soprano, and Victor Carroll, baritone, will be the soloists.

THE NEWS OF NEWPORT.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Jan. 23.—The report which has been in circulation for some little time regarding the opening of the Marble House was revived again to-day, when it became known that a new set of boilers was being installed and other improvements were being made. It would seem from all outward appearances as if the Marble House was to be opened again next season.

James J. Van Alen has changed his plans for the Winter and will, with his daughters, sail for Europe next month to remain at his London house until the Spring, when they will return to Wakehurst for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Seth E. French will take a cottage here for next season.

Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Lorillard and Miss Florence Lyman have gone to New York.

Gen. and Mrs. H. F. Eaton, accompanied by Mrs. F. O. French, will go to New York to-morrow.

Mrs. Kane, wife of Col. De Lancey Kane, paid $56,000 for the Arthur Astor Carey estate, in Narragansett Avenue.

Mrs. Hunker, wife of Capt. J. J. Hunker of the training station, has returned from Europe.

SOCIETY IN WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—All the ladies of the Cabinet received this afternoon, with the exception of Mrs. Hay, wife of the Secretary of State, and Mrs. Long, wife of the Secretary of the Navy. Mrs. Gage, whose receptions are always particularly pleasant, had assisting her Miss Vanderlip, sister of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and Miss Lucy Page.

Mrs. Root had as her assistants her daughter, Miss Hagner, and Miss Sheridan. Mrs. Griggs, wife of the Attorney General, gave one of the largest receptions of the day. She was assisted by her young stepdaughters, the Misses Griggs, and Miss Harriet Winslow. Mrs. Charles Emory Smith had with her Mrs. Cornell, Miss McKenna, and Miss Miller. Mrs. Hitchcock had with her the Misses Hitchcock, Miss Day, and Mrs. George Corning Frazer.

THE MISSES FORAKER TO WED.

Engagement of Two of Senator's Daughters Announced Yesterday.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Senator and Mrs. Foraker this evening announced the engagement of their eldest daughter, Miss Florence Foraker, to Randolph Matthews of Cincinnati, and that of their youngest daughter, Miss Julia Foraker, to Francis King Wainwright of Philadelphia. Although the large circle of friends of the young people have been prepared for the announcement of Miss Julia Foraker's engagement, that of her eldest sister comes as something of a surprise, it having been the desire of Miss Foraker to keep her proposed marriage a secret until a short time before the date set for it.

Both young women are popular in society, handsome, clever, and accomplished, and with their sister, Miss Louise Foraker, have enjoyed undisputed claims to belleship. Mr. Matthews is the son of the late C. Bentley Matthews of Cincinnati, and nephew of the late Justice Stanley Matthews of the United States Supreme Court. Mr. Wainwright is the son of Joseph Reeves Wainwright of Philadelphia, well known in the club and social life of that city. He was graduated from Princeton in the class of '98, and has many friends in Washington. No date has been fixed for either wedding.

WEDDINGS OF A DAY.

Thomson—Brown.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Jan. 23.—The wedding of John W. Thomson of Lenox and New York to Miss Agnes Brown of this city took place to-day at the residence of Mrs. Abbie C. Brown, the bride's mother. The Rev. T. W. Nickerson of St. Stephen's Church officiated, using the full Episcopal service with exchange of rings. Only the members of the two families were present, and after a wedding breakfast Mr. and Mrs. Thomson took an early afternoon train for a trip to the South. Upon their return they will reside in New York and Pittsfield. Mr. Thomson is the owner of Fannie Kemble's old home in Lenox, known as "The Perch," but has already sold a large part of the property for about $100,000 to Giraud Foster.

Deleon—Moise.
